A SUGGESTION TO EXCHANGE MANAGERS

THE exhibitor depends upon, and holds liable, the exchange manager for the quality of the release prints.

The exchange manager must, therefore, look to the laboratory which makes these prints to uphold him with his exhibitors.

For this reason exchange managers should be particularly gratified when the release prints they receive are made at Standard Film Laboratories.

The superior quality of these prints insures absolute satisfaction to exchange manager and exhibitor alike.

Boost for release prints "Made in Hollywood—the Standard Way."

Miss Laura La Plante

as a star in her own right and playing the lead in her first big feature

MISS La Plante's radiant beauty, rare talent and sincere efforts in lesser roles are responsible for her enviable promotion to stardom. Exhibitors and patrons have a surprise treat in store for them, for here is a star that is different — delightfully different. She brings to the screen a magnetism and a bright vivaciousness that will make your patrons adore her, and demand more of her pictures. Her first picture is a 'knockout — the title tells the story!

PACKED with just as many laughs as any two-reeler, and just the right size for the comedy-spot on any program, these Universal One-Reel Comedies are making good for showmen all over the country! Try them!

THOUSANDS of showmen have found that the sure way to get pep and snap into lagging programs is to season them with Universal Short Subjects, some of which are on this page. They know that the greatest variety, together with the surest power at the box-office is to be found in the Universal Short Subject list! Book a few of them, and you'll get the returns at the box-office!

Gives "Ghost City" Enthusiastic Praise

"THE Ghost City," starring Pete Morrison, is "One of the greatest Western Serials!" according to O. L. Meister, live wire manager of the Whitehouse Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Meister is only one of hundreds who have found this thriller pays big returns at the box office.

Handsome Billy Sullivan in 4th Series "Leather Pushers"

Winning popularity by leaps and bounds

THIS handsome young actor leaped into screen fame with his smashing and refreshing portrayal of the character of "Kid Robertson" in The Fourth Series, The Leather Pushers. He is pulling crowds into thousands of theatres all over the country.

Fans Like Morrison in 2-Reel Westerns

UNIVERSAL has always led the field in the production of thrilling, compelling two-reel Westerns. With the addition of Pete Morrison, "The Galloping Ace," and Bob Reeves, with numerous other daring players, they are further ahead than ever! Universal Westerns get the business and hold it for any house.

"Centuries Can't Be Beat!" Says Showman

"CENTURY Comedies, for clean entertainment cannot be beat!" is the verdict of Jack Cairns, Brooklyn Theatre, Detroit, Mich., in a report to the Exhibitors Herald. Book "A Young Tenderfoot" and "Quit Kidding" starring Buddy Messinger, and "You're Next," with an all-star cast, current releases, and be convinced.

"Gumps a Knockout!" Wires Theatre Manager

"I OPENED the New Rex Theatre with a Gump comedy. It was a knockout!" wires Ed Hoefer, Sheboygan, Wis., thus voicing the sentiments of hundreds of showmen who have found that these uproarious two-reelers have a ready-made patronage of millions.

International News Pledges 1924 Service

Unanimous Praise

Metro Picture

NEW YORK

The World.

One of the most noteworthy adventures ever made in cinema production. . . . Its photographic excellence and beauty of landscape views possibly never has been surpassed in the cinema. A grand achievement.

—Quinn Martin

The Sun and The Globe

"The White Sister" is not a movie; it is a work of art . . . a genuine artistic triumph . . . a complete and satisfying masterpiece of the screen.

The Morning Telegraph

A most palpable treat . . . Lillian Gish's performance is universal in its interest. . . . Plenty of romance, beauty, and pictorial charm. . . . Scenic effects are exceedingly beautiful. Interesting and well worth seeing.

—Louella O. Parsons

New York Evening Post

Don't miss it. . . . Never has a simple tale of love and despair been told with greater beauty, sincerity or truth. Every picture is a painting. Lillian returns to the screen with a charming impersonation.

The Evening World.

"The White Sister" contains much genuinely moving and thrilling drama. A big and a fine picture that deserves to rank with the best the movies have yet produced. It is fine entertainment. You ought to see it.

—Don Allen

The New York Times.

The players actually appear to live the parts they enact on the screen. . . . Miss Gish obtains the full effect in every situation. . . . One of the strongest love stories that has ever been filmed.

—F. W. Mordaunt Hall

THE NEW YORK HERALD

Miss Gish is always exquisite. . . . Remarkable qualities and emotional repression. . . . The exterior scenes are beautiful. . . . It is so superbly played by Lillian Gish and by Ronald Colman, and so perfectly directed by Henry King that one is entitled to assume that here is an unquestionable candidate for the Hall of Film Fame.

—Robert E. Sherwood

NATIONAL MAGAZINES

THEATRE MAGAZINE

Lillian Gish's work is extraordinary. It has something of the ardent yet ethereal quality of Eleanora Duse. If you miss it, you will lose one of the artistic triumphs of the screen.

MOVIE WEEKLY

"The White Sister" is a film which justifies motion pictures . . . highly artistic . . . the scenes are exquisite. Miss Gish enacts one of the beautifully memorable roles of screen history. The eruption of Mount Vesuvius and the subsequent breaking of a reservoir are thrilling. By all means see "The White Sister." It is excellent entertainment.

Life

Lillian Gish gives a performance that is divinely exalted. She possesses greater emotional force in her left eyebrow than all the fake thrills that the silent drama has perfected.

—Robert E. Sherwood

JUDGE

A picture of great photographic beauty. . . . Worth seeing alone for the grandeur of its natural settings. . . . A masterpiece of beauty. . . . The action is tense and the actors more than competent. The production is dignified and an ornament to the screen. Lillian Gish is all alone in her class.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN NEWS

Lillian Gish better than in anything she has ever done. From any standpoint it is splendid.

MAKE AMERICA "SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY" NEW YORK JOURNAL

One of the very best productions ever made. . . . Overflows with Italian beauty. . . . Entire cast play their parts with profound sincerity. . . . For dramatic suspense, let one commend the scene in the observatory on the brow of muttering Vesuvius.

THE EVENING MAIL

In "The White Sister" where her role is most difficult, Lillian Gish acquitted herself so well that there is no denying that she is an exceptional emotional actress. . . . By far the finest thing she has done on the screen. The photography is beautiful.

CHICAGO

HERALD EXAMINER

Miss Gish gives the most gorgeous performance of her career. . . . "The White Sister" will hold your attention throughout.

THE CHICAGO DAILY JOURNAL

The genius of Lillian Gish makes a great film of "The White Sister." There is something lingeringly lovely about the picture. One of the year's important offerings. . . . It should stand near the top of the list.

—Virginia Dale

THE CHICAGO EVENING POST

Lillian Gish has made this tragedy into a story which will grip you and hold your interest. . . . Director Henry King has achieved a very unusual production and one which is intensely dramatic.

Chicago Daily Tribune

One of the most exquisite photoplays ever screened. . . . The power, the beauty, the realism, the pathos of it must strike home. . . . Lillian Gish is lovely throughout . . . her acting is excellent. . . . Ronald Colman as her lover is immense. . . . The atmosphere is all it should be.

—Mae Tinee

CHICAGO HERALD AMERICAN

"The White Sister" achieves a place by itself. Miss Gish displays a surer, more mature, more compelling —almost, it would seem, a perfect art . . . you realize you are viewing one of the screen's greatest. Locations are of great beauty. Henry King's direction and adaption are worthy of great praise.

—Rob Ree

DAILY NEWS

NEW YORK'S PICTURE NEWSPAPER

This is a picture that no one can afford to miss. . . . The entire production is marvelous. . . . Heartrending for its exquisiteness and pathos of portrayal.

—Irene

New York Tribune

Miss Gish does some of the best acting she has ever done. . . . One has come to expect perfection in a Lillian Gish performance.

—Harriette Underhill

THE EVENING TELEGRAM

Miss Lillian Gish as "The White Sister" is all loveliness and appeal. . . . The picture has not yet been equalled for scenic beauty.

—Robert G. Welch

From the Press--

BOSTON

The Boston Telegram

"The White Sister" is the biggest and best motion picture which Boston has seen in many, many years. It is the biggest picture because of the great care and skill with which the picture itself was made. The superb acting of Miss Gish has given the picture rare value and . . . has created a new standard.

—Margaret Harris

BOSTON AMERICAN

Probably nothing enhanced the beauty of the picture so much, other than Miss Gish's excellent interpretation of her role, as did the scenic effects. The glorious finale is the criterion of thrillers. Artistic seems rather an inadequate word. . . . Yo must go.

Boston Evening Transcript

Exceptionally fine photography. "The White Sister" deserves high praise. Miss Gish holds fast the interest and sympathies of her audience . . . she proves herself once more the tragic mistress of the screen.

THE BOSTON HERALD

Director Henry King with the aid of Lillian Gish and the Italian settings has produced an unusually beautiful picture, . . . dramatic and vigorous. The picture's greatest claim to distinction is the tragic wistfulness of Lillian Gish.

The Boston Daily Globe

Exquisitely poignant in its religious thrill and ecstasy, it leaves one feeling almost inspired. "The White Sister" is a classic. . . . There is no doubt of its artistry. . . . It is a fascinating photoplay.

The Boston Post

Lillian Gish is still the screen's greatest emotional actress. . . . The scenes and settings are unbelievably lovely. The pathos, the romance and the pictorial beauty are perfectly blended to make a fine film.

—Prunella Hall

The Boston Traveler

A remarkable picture . . . glorified by the very beautiful portrayal of Lillian Gish. No one but Lillian Gish could play such a role. She shares that spiritual quality; the nobility, and ethereal loveliness that belong to Eleonora Duse. Scenically . . . a most beautiful picture.

—Eleanor Very

TRADE PRESS

Motion Picture News

A picture destined to live in the memory. . . . A picture with a soul . . . wonderfully acted and directed . . . fraught with genuine heart throbs. . . . Grips the emotions . . . and holds you in a vise-like grip with the overwhelming sweep of the scenes. . . . Lillian Gish plays like one inspired . . . her scenes are unforgetable. . . . The climax is breathtaking.

—Laurence Reid

Lillian Gish as the heroine is superb. . . . Never has she done anything finer. Some finely executed spectacular scenes showing the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The film holds you in a vise-like grip because of its beauty and force.

—C. S. Sewel

EXHIBITORS Trade REVIEW

Another great picture . . . Splendidly conceived and finely executed. . . . Tightly holding the interest from the beginning to the end.

George Blaisdell

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Nothing so fine from every viewpoint has ever before been shown on the screen. . . . For photographic excellence, beauty of landscape views, wonderful settings and exquisite elaborateness of costuming the screen has yet to receive anything that surpasses this production.

THE BRADSTREET of FILMDOM Film DAILY The RECOGNIZED AUTHORITY

Gorgeously mounted. . . . One of the greatest pictures ever made, with Miss Gish giving an outstandingly notable performance. . . . Director Henry King has done a magnificent piece of work.

The Billboard

Lillian Gish does the finest acting of her career in "The White Sister." . . . Settings are beautiful. . . . The scenes of the erupting volcano and the mad scramble for safety of the villagers are splendidly done.

VARIETY

Photography is a delight to the eye. . . . It was splendidly done.

REELAND REVIEWS

"The White Sister" will prove to be one of the biggest pictures of the year and will be pointed to for many years to come. The exteriors are the most beautiful ever seen upon the screen.

Exceptional Photoplays

Published Monthly, October to June, by The National Board of Review, Committee on Exceptional Photoplays 20 Fifth Avenue, New York City

The White Sister" is a stirring memorable picture . . . beautiful and also real. . . . Angela is most sympathetically played by Lillian Gish.

A Metro Picture

PHILADELPHIA

PUBLIC LEDGER

Lillian Gish gives one of the finest performances of her career . . . with her delicate appeal, her poignant charm and pathetic beauty. It offers her an unsurpassed opportunity to depict an anguished soul, rent by sadness and misfortune. One of the few super-specials worth making.

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Truly notable production . . . exquisitely handled. . . . Lillian Gish has achieved the best work of her career and has created a part which will be long remembered. She has caught the tragic spirit of the novel.

The Evening Bulletin

A beautiful series of pictures. . . . A picturization that really puts this work in the class of pictorial rather than dramatic art. . . . So complete so poignantly beautiful and meaningful. Lillian Gish and a splendid supporting cast are excellent.

THE NORTH AMERICAN

Lillian Gish gives another of her portrait gems, and makes a highly and convincing character of Angela. The natural backgrounds are one of the rare and beautiful features of the film. The glimpses of Vesuvius are highly interesting and unusual.

SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco Chronicle

Lillian Gish reaches an emotional pinnacle that few actresses can hope to scale. She seems an inspired creature.

—George C. Warren

THE CALL

One of the most entirely delightful picture plays of the time . . . there with a punch that will satisfy the most exacting. Lillian Gish contributes a great, if not her greatest, characterization.

Illustrated Daily Herald

A critic would have to scatter superlatives to do justice to the production and to the star. Infinitely worth while, a screen classic. Strong dramatic situations . . . smashing classic. Will go down in screen history as one of the distinct achievements of the silent drama.—Hamilton Wayne

Gentlemen:

We have just concluded a three day engagement of your film, THE MAILMAN at both our Garden and Roosevelt Theatres, in Richmond Hill and Woodhaven., and it affords us extreme pleasure in letting you know that notwithstanding that we had as opposition on all three days at houses opposite our own, MARY PICKFORD in ROSITA, we broke house records at both theatres.

We believe that when a thing like this happens, viz: big record receipts against a supposed to be record breaking opposition attraction, that the producer and exchange releasing the picture that not only holds it's own, but breaks records and overshadows the opposition, should be informed of the fact and encouraged to keep up the good work of putting out good box-office pictures, therefore we are glad to herein subscribe ourselves,

Very truly yours,
Muller & Schwartz,
Marty Schwartz

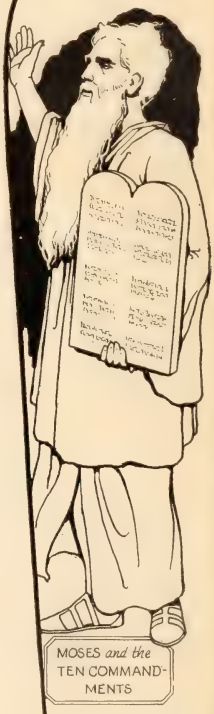
IT'S AN F.B.O. PICTURE

"The MAIL MAN" is "mopping up" for all Exhibitors

SHOWMEN—



How many opportunities have you missed in this business? How many pictures at different times have you turned down—only to realize later that you made a great mistake?

"AFTER SIX DAYS"

Featuring

MOSES AND THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Is the greatest "clean-up" this business has ever known.
It has broken every exchange record in every territory sold.
It has created new box-office records in every theatre played.
It has caused more favorable comment by exchangemen, exhibitors and public than has ever been accorded a picture.
It can't miss. It is sure-fire.

EXCHANGEMEN—

This is the greatest opportunity you have ever had. What are you going to do about it? "After Six Days" put into a road show in your territory and capably handled will make a fortune for you. Its possibilities are unlimited and what is true this year will prove to be true every year. It will live forever. "It's a clean-up."

EXHIBITORS—

When the opportunity is presented for you to book this attraction, don't think twice—if you do it might prove another opportunity lost. Book it for twice and three times your regular run and after the first smash you will re-book it for an early return date. It's a "clean-up."

HERE'S THE PROOF

More than fifty representative exhibitors wrote to the Motion Picture News in answer to the editor's question, "Do 'padded' features hurt your business?" Only two of them said "No." And one of these two said his patrons complained when he ran only a long feature, with no Short Subjects.

Here is the most convincing proof that you are not satisfying your patrons unless you give them a DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM.

THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM

Are You Getting 100 Per Cent Entertainment?

When you pay your money at the picture theatre box-office, you are purchasing entertainment. And you can have assurance of getting full value for that money—of getting 100 per cent entertainment.

The theatre that shows a good feature of reasonable length and several well chosen Short Subjects, such as a comedy, a novelty and a news-reel, gives you a guarantee of value. For even if you find one picture not to your liking, you are sure to find pleasure in some of the others.

But when the feature is so long that it takes up the whole program, there is no such guarantee. If you do not like the feature, there is nothing else left in the show for you to enjoy.

The Educational Pictures trade-mark on posters and lobby-cards in a theatre entrance means that here you can count on a variety of entertainment as well as a good feature.

San Francisco, Feb 13

Business continues better than usual in the big downtown picture theatres despite a spell of very bad weather. The surprise last week was the Warfield's feature "When a Man's a Man," based on a Harold Bell Wright novel. The management had noped for a good week, but no runaway business.

The consensus of opinion is that the public has sort of staled on the sex stuff fed them for so long and are eagerly seizing the Western features as a distinct change. Prints

MR. GEORGE EASTMAN has again made a substantial cut in the price of his raw stock. This is an interesting announcement, but it might be much more than interesting if it could be hailed as the forerunner of what we honestly believe is a vital need in the proper distribution of motion pictures — a greater number of positive prints for the average picture in the average exchange.

We have talked frequently with the men who decide on the number of prints that go out to the various branches. Most of them agree that conditions are far from ideal in this connection, that many small town houses get decidedly poor service and that everybody suffers to a greater or lesser extent because of this fact.

But there is always an alibi — always the same alibi. They say that a greater number of prints is financially impossible. They talk about seven dollar and half bookings and the cost of a print, and they quote figures that, at first glance, sound logical and convincing.

Yet, if you study the matter carefully — as we have done — it is possible honestly to argue that there are two sides to the case.

The argument begins with the guess that every distributor is basing his figures on conditions of the past, when rentals were far less than they are today. It gains weight when it assumes that the average exhibitor would be willing to pay a little more for his pictures if he got first-class prints, and would raise the ante again if he could play a feature a few weeks after his nearest first run.

It scores another point when it reminds you that an extra good picture, one that gets 100 per cent distribution — say the eight thousand and some odd bookings of "The Valley of the Giants," the record holder for Paramount — should have more prints than just a fair feature that will be lucky to play three thousand theaters.

There is such a thing as a penny-wise-pound-foolish policy. There is such a thing as deciding a matter on a sound business basis five years ago, and having conditions so changed in 1924 that what was a fact in 1919 is now a fallacy.

We do not believe that the pros and cons of this matter have been fully weighed under present-day conditions.

The world moves and progresses, and certainly the motion picture business is ever-changing and we hope progressing.

To our mind the biggest trouble with the whole proposition, the thing that has definitely killed off the more-prints idea, is the chronic disposition on the part of every one, except the small town exhibitor, to sigh gloomily and assume the " it can't be helped " attitude.

Everybody talks about old and badly adjusted projection machines, hooked sprockets, tight take-ups, etc., as the cause of poor prints. It is the cause to a considerable extent, but there are other contributing reasons.

There is a lot of natural wear and tear on eight thousand bookings. There is a lot on five thousand. And don't forget this.

The picture which plays five thousand or eight thousand theaters at present prices, even in the small towns, can afford to spend something for prints.

This is a big subject — one worthy of serious discussion from every angle — and we propose to go to it.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THE annual luncheon of the National Board of Review given last Saturday at the Waldorf Astoria, New York, was, as always, an interesting and constructive affair. Some four hundred persons were present, most of them delegates of the Better Films Committees from towns all over the country. Dr. William B. Tower presided and addresses were made by Orrin Winford of Minnesota, Dr. Ernest L. Crandall of New York, Joseph Dannenberg, Fanny Hurst, Robert Edmund Jones, Sven Gade, producer of "Hamlet," with Asta Neilsen, and Dr. Chester C. Marshall.

High lights of the meeting:

Dr. Crandall: "In judging what films children want, I would rather take the opinion of the motion picture fan than of the child psychologist."

"Twenty-four schoolboys went to see 'The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln.' Next day at school nine of them asked for books on Lincoln."

"The motion picture, the greatest boon to humanity, also imposes upon humanity the greatest responsibility humanity has ever faced."

Fanny Hurst, who always arouses our ire, calmly divided humanity into the "Great American Public" and "the powerful minority" (presumably the intelligentsia). The G.A.P. she proclaimed as "mental delinquents." May we remind Miss Hurst that in all our picture experience no picture deserving the full appreciation of the G.A.P. ever failed to get it (save only when unadvertised) and that the more we see of the G.A.P. the more respect we have for its good taste and intelligence. As for the "powerful minority," it is impossible profitably to make books, magazines, newspapers or pictures for these self-elected intellectuals; they probably sneak along with the G.A.P. but won't admit it. And as for authors in general, our frank opinion is that they are simply disinclined — through laziness or some other similar reason — to give up enough time to learn how to express themselves in pictures.

Joseph Dannenberg, who made a most catching address, said that "Flaming Youth" went big in Minneapolis and "Boy of Mine," though more heavily advertised, fell down. But the fact is that "Boy of Mine" was not as heavily advertised as "Flaming Youth," because the latter, as a book, had been talked about by most of the female population of Minneapolis. In comparison, "Boy of Mine" was probably inadequately advertised and that's the answer with a lot of excellent pictures that sometimes don't go as they should.

Which brings us to the Better Films Committee Movement so ably sponsored by the National Board of Review and which we regard as one of the most sane, practical and beneficial movements in behalf of this industry. These committees are, after all, advertisers of good pictures. That, it seems to us, summarizes their work; and it is the most important work to be done today for the good and the progress of the picture. They get back of the picture which the public ought to know about and don't know about because it may not have a great star or a book on everyone's tongue or some other great and already made advertising asset; and they tell people about the picture when the exhibitor's posters or other lame effort tells very little to a very few.

IT is the customary scheme for certain directors (according to studio gossip) to take as much time as possible in the production of a picture. Which isn't the way Frank Lloyd works. This director has evolved a plan for saving time while taking scenes for "The Sea Hawk." He saves eight hours in the delivery of fresh film and prints of shots made the preceding day by chartering an aeroplane for his daily trips between the studio and the ocean locations.

F. E. ADAMS, in a leading article in the Cinema of London, sees American banking interests out to gain control of British cinemas in behalf of the American film trade. Which gives, to say the least, a novel viewpoint of American banks, the constant criticism of which over here is that they devote themselves too much to domestic trade and have made but little effort to parallel the extension to other countries of the British and German banking systems. Again, if Mr. Adams is correct, we of the American trade have a just cause for quarrel with American banks, which, so far as production and distribution are concerned, do not by any means fill the American industry's financial void. Mr. Adams speaks of "the extension of American banking interests into every department of the film trade." Most every American film concern wishes fervently that this were true, and not one concern will claim that the "extension" is complete enough. On the other hand, some "banking interests" already in are looking for a way out of their "extension."

Just what does Mr. Adams mean by American banking interests? May we call attention to the fact that we have no central bank in this country, no chain banking system. Before the Federal Reserve Bank came along, our banks from coast to coast were largely unrelated, and all of them occupied with their local situations. That is still true. Our Federal Reserve Bank is a rediscount institution designed to facilitate trade banking operations in normal times and in crises to give elasticity to financial strain.

Now the local banks over the country do have a lot to do with their home town theatres; in fact, as these have grown in size, they have become heavily dependent upon banking aid and in order to get it, their building partakes largely of a realty operation involving stores and offices which the bank considers more stable as investments.

So much for the theatres.

In New York, through stock exchange and promotion operations, some producer-distributors have enlisted the aid of financial interests as is indicated by their Boards of Directors; again some New York and Los Angeles banks help finance certain producers. But there you have the "American Banking Interests." They don't control the film trade; they are not heavily in it; we hope they will be for credit operations are badly needed; no financial monopoly whatever exists over here, except in the minds of a few half-baked reformers who want the Federal government to gobble up the film business and put it away in a bureaucratic pigeon hole.

We have a sturdy respect for Mr. Adams, head of the Provincial Theatres, Ltd., of London, but somehow or other the British film man cannot look at the American film trade without seeing bugaboos. We have no bugaboos, Mr. Adams, other than the bad economics that infest young industries; well, yes, pictures the public don't like are bugaboos to us.

FROM Macon, Mo., comes a rare one (if true). Recent dispatches from that city stated that the patrons of a motion picture theatre there had been given an added thrill when a dog, that had accompanied his master to the show, made an attack upon a tramp flashed on the screen during the screening of a comedy. With lusty barks and growls the animal rushed from a point in the rear of the theatre toward the screen, but was stopped before he crashed through. The tramp must have been unusually realistic to inspire a dog to chew up the scenery.

FILM PROGRESS the Monthly organ of the National Committee for Better Films, gives place to five Metro pictures in its list of best documents of 1923. We have no cause for complaint in its selection of "Long Live the King," "Scaramouche," "Trialing African Wild Animals," "Where the Pavement Ends" and "The White Sister."

THEATRE owners who are showing the Yale University Press "Chronicles of America" have declared that audiences are universally impressed with the strong resemblance of the actors to the famous historical characters portrayed in the pictures. This quality is regarded as one of the strongest reasons for the box office success of the series, since the unique appeal of the Chronicles depends upon absolute realism and authenticity.

Behind this point of outstanding excellence, however, lies a production problem to which the Yale University Press is giving a vast amount of time and effort. In "The Gateway to the West," which is scheduled for a quick release, George Washington at the age of twenty-four plays a prominent part. To locate the correct type for young Washington, several hundred actors were considered and screen tests made of ninety of the most promising candidates. For "The Declaration of Independence," which is now in production, over six hundred actors were interviewed and nearly one hundred tests made before the cast of eighteen principal players was completed. The same care is being exerted in casting the thirteen leading parts for "Yorktown."

According to Bill Wright, who is handling production for the Yale Press, elaborate tests are necessary, since a wig and a colonial costume frequently so change a man's appearance as to destroy the likeness which is apparent when he is considered in modern dress. These tests, however, are of value to the actor, since they place him in line for consideration as any one of the hundreds of historical characters used in the thirty-three pictures of the series.

The Yale University Press has declared that this matter of good casting, while troublesome and exceedingly expensive, is given most careful consideration in justice to the exhibitors of the country.

AN exact replica of Tom Mix's ranch bedroom at Mixville, Calif., was built at the William Fox West Coast Studios, Hollywood, where the star is busy making his new production. The set was dressed with twenty pairs of Tom's boots, valued at more than $800. There were ten suits and numerous overcoats hung on a clothes rack brought from Mr. Mix's home.

There was the famous Mix $1,500 leather trimmed saddle with sterling silver which he sometimes uses when riding his famous cow pony Tony, and another saddle which had seen service when Tom fought in the Spanish-American War and was U. S. Marshal in Oklahoma and other states. A Navajo blanket, given him by an Indian chief on the Oklahoma Reservation, was on the bed, and in a glass-enclosed rack, also brought from his home, were eight of his favorite rifles and several pistols given the star by numerous admirers.

WHAT may be called a complete and authentic contribution to the literature of the screen is the publication by J. B. Lippincott Company of Frederick A. Talbot's book, "Moving Pictures" (How They Are Made and Worked).

Since the publication of the volume in 1912, the industry has undergone amazing development. The far-reaching changes effected through progress and invention have inspired its author to re-write the work entirely. Mr. Talbot gets away from technical phrases as much as possible — his object being to familiarize the millions of film patrons with the methods employed in production and exhibition.

It might be called an encyclopedia of the moving picture art. It introduces the reader to the innermost secrets of the silent drama. It features the preparations of marvelous ingenuity that go into the making of picture plays. It traces the development of the pioneers of the industry — and of the beginnings of Hollywood and the studios. No element which composes the photo drama is neglected. We are acquainted with the production of trick-pictures, the color schemes and inventions, the risks assumed by photographers and players, the making and costs of the elaborate films — and instructed and entertained with a host of ideas which concern the vitals of this gigantic industry.

It is a book which should prove invaluable to any one concerned with the industry and should make highly interesting reading to those not affiliated with the newes of he ars. It unfolds facts and reveals a fine technical knowledge of the forces and elements which go into the manufacture of films.

MARION DAVIES' new picture "Yolanda,"—which may be called a companion picture to "When Knighthood Was in Flower," in the sense that it is written by the same author, Charles Major, and introduces the star in a colorful tale of adventure and romance in the days of chivalry—had its premiere Wednesday night before a most distinguished audience.

Prominent among the guests were several consuls-general of foreign governments stationed in New York, numerous city officials, leaders of society, motion picture stars and celebrities of the theatrical and musical worlds. In attendance from the celluloid world were Rudolph Valentino, D. W. Griffith, Sidney Olcott, Robert G. Sunday Case to Ohio Supreme Court

Tribunal Will Decide Whether Picture Exhibition is a Theatrical Performance

THE Ohio supreme Court, February 13, decided to hear upon its merits a case involving whether a motion picture exhibition is a theatrical performance.

The case to be heard is the appeal of Walter K. Richards, Findlay, Ohio, theatre owner, who was convicted on a charge of exhibiting motion pictures on Sunday during the Sunday closing battle that was waged several months ago.

Several previous attempts by owners or exhibitors to have the Ohio supreme court go into the merits of such cases have failed, the highest tribunal merely sanctioning the lower courts by refusing to review their action. Lower courts in Ohio have held that motion pictures are theatrical performances, and thus are prohibited on Sundays by state law.

Richards' appeal, however, raises a somewhat different question that previously has been presented in that it seeks to establish that all motion pictures are not "theatrical performances." Presented in this manner the case will become "a test case," on which the eyes of all Ohio exhibitors are being turned and if a decision favorable is handed down it will end a fight that has been waged in many Ohio cities for the past two or three years and close a "Blue Law" that has been somewhat expensive to many exhibitors.

It was charged in the complaint against Richards that he had violated the Sunday law against "theatrical performances" by operating his picture house, not designating that the pictures shown were in fact pictures of theatrical performances.

Last week the Mayor of Canton, Ohio, notified all motion picture theatres that they must keep closed the following Sunday and every Sunday thereafter. This announcement came on the heels of the arrest of eleven exhibitors, who operate the Canton movie houses, accused of operating contrary to law. As late as last Saturday, the exhibitors agreed to close on Sunday. At the last minute, however, they decided to stay open. And they are open again this Sunday and will continue to be open on Sundays until such time as the State Supreme Court has passed its verdict on the Richards case.

The Canton case was up for a hearing February 16 before Judge Bowman. Oscar Abt of Canton represented the exhibitors at the hearing. He asked for a continuation of the case until the Findlay case had been settled. The Ministerial Association opposed a continuation excepting only if the movies would remain closed until the next hearing. Attorney Abt pointed out to Judge Bowman that the exhibitor losses under such an arrangement would be tremendous, and cited precedents where the theatres were allowed to run pending a decision. Abt prevailed, and Judge Bowman granted the exhibitors a continuation of the case, with the privilege of keeping open on Sunday, further stating that he was not sure of the intent of the Supreme Court, and that he wanted to continue the case until he got more information on the subject.

To Draft Statewide Bill on Admission of Minors

THE Miller bill in New York state relating to the handling of unaccompanied children in picture theatres, originally drafted to pertain solely to New York city, is to be redrafted in order that it may embrace the entire state.

There was a hearing scheduled for the bill one day during the past week, but it attracted little attention and at the time it was stated that another bill would shortly be substituted which would make the provisions statewide rather than confined solely to New York City.

The bill provides that unaccompanied children may be admitted to theatres which maintain a matron, the children to be segregated and the theatre to have a special license of fifteen dollars annually.

Seattle Censor Board Stands Pat on Its Policy

Anonymous letters and telephone messages threatening a united church campaign to close picture theaters in Seattle and other cities in the state of Washington on Sundays, unless the Seattle Board of Motion Picture Censors banned "wilting love" photoplays, had no effect on the Board, when, at a recent meeting in Seattle, it decided to stand pat on its present policy, which it declares to be sufficiently strict.

By a majority vote, the Board also decided not to prohibit the exhibition of any Mabel Normand pictures in Seattle theaters, on the grounds that any private affairs were in no way related to the public entertainment afforded by her photoplays.

Pending the final outcome of the strife now on among the members of the Board over the question of a sterner censorship attitude toward portrayal of the human emotions and affections, it was voted to allow no reports of matters at the meetings to be made public except through the chairman. A request to the body to stop the showing of championship prize fight pictures, which were recently exhibited in Seattle, was turned down.

Ontario Fixes Wage for Women Employees

A Board of Inquiry of the Ontario Provincial Government was held at Toronto on February 14th under the direction of Dr. J. V. McMillan, chairman of the Minimum Wage Board, regarding the wages of female employees in theatres of the Province. Dr. McMillan announced that the ruling of the Board with respect to women employed by theatres in Ontario, regardless of the nature of the employment, was as follows:

"The minimum wage shall be $12.50 per week, except in the case of an employe working less than 40 hours per week, in which case she shall be paid not less than 30 cents per hour. No working period shall be reckoned for payment as less than two hours."

The Government ruling applies principally to ushers, cashiers, attendants, office employes, scrub women and a few others, many of whom already are receiving more than the minimum prescribed.

T. N. T. HOTEL ASTOR, MARCH 29.

"Keep Up Tax Repeal Fight"—MacGregor

REPRESENTATIVE CLARENCE MACGREGOR journeyed from Washington to Buffalo on February 13 to address a joint meeting of exhibitors and exchange men in the New Hotel Statler on the admission tax. Mr. MacGregor, who was the original sponsor of the bill for the repeal of the tax, impressed upon the exhibitors the necessity of keeping up the fight and continuing to send letters to their representatives in Congress until the measure has been passed.

Mr. MacGregor predicted that the entire admission tax will soon be removed from theatres. J. H. Michael, manager of the Regent theatre and chairman of the executive committee of M.P.T.O. of N.Y., Inc., introduced the speaker. The affair was planned by Mr. Michael, Sydney Samson, manager of Bond Pictures corporation exchange and president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo and Gerald K. Rudolph, manager of the Fox exchange.

New Theatre for Southern Enterprises

Right on the heels of the report that Jake Wells, in staging a "come back" throughout the south was negotiating for a house in Greenville, S. C., comes the announcement that Southern Enterprises, through Louis Cohen of the Real Estate Department, has closed the deal for a lot in Greenville next door to the Ottaray Hotel upon which will be built a new theatre with a seating capacity of two thousand.

Financial matters and terms of lease have been definitely settled and work is already progressing on the actual plans of the building. It will be one of the finest theatres in South Carolina, equipped to handle any kind of an attraction. Southern Enterprises already operate two theatres in Greenville.

Mysterious Personages for Naked Truth Dinner

The mysterious John T. King and the equally mysterious Henry Mann, will make their first public appearance on the night of March 29, acording to the startling announcement of A. M. Botsord, chairman of the entertainment committee of the A. M. P. A.

The occasion will be the annual Naked Truth Dinner, to take place this year at the Hotel Astor. Just what the team of King & Mann will do is being withheld as a surprise.

All indications point to the most successful Naked Truth dinner in the A. M. P. A.'s history. The tickets are limited to 1000. Ticket distribution is being superintended by S. Charles Einfeld at Associated First National Pictures.

Maibelle Justice's Mother Passes Away

The many friends of Maibelle Heikes Justice, novelist and photo-dramatist mourn with her the passing of her mrother, Mrs. Grace J. Hawkins. Mrs. Hawkins passed away in New York city on February 15, a victim of pneumonia.

In addition to her daughter, Mrs. Hawkins is survived by two sisters.

Charge Denied by Harding Secretary

Requests Nomination Withdrawn

A DENIAL that he had attempted to interfere with the Federal Trade Commission's action against Famous Players-Lasky was made in Washington, February 20 by George B. Christian, Jr., secretary to the late President Harding.

The charge had been made February 16 by Huston Thompson, Chairman of the Trade Commission, before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which was considering whether it should vote to recommend to the Senate confirmation of Mr. Christian as a member of the Commission.

Mr. Christian's denial was incorporated in a letter to President Coolidge, in which he requested the President to withdraw the nomination. This the President did, transmitting the letters of withdrawal to the Senate on Wednesday last.

In his letter to President Coolidge, Mr. Christian said: "Since you sent my name to the Senate, Huston Thompson, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, has appeared before the Committee, and has informed the Interstate Committee in substance that in May, 1921, I had made inquiries with respect to the Commission's proceedings against Famous Players-Lasky, in such a way as to convey the impression that I was endeavoring to interfere with their proceedings.

Christian's Statement

"In view of the facts, Mr. Thompson's impression of our conference has amazed me. I called Mr. Thompson to the executive office in the performance of an official duty solely and for the sole purpose of securing information as to the status of this case. I frankly stated to him that representations had been made that this company was under investigation and that a hearing had been denied them. I further stated that I knew nothing of the method of procedure of the Commission or its rules of practice and asked him for the facts.

"Mr. Thompson was most courteous and painstaking in explaining the Commission's procedure to me and that explanation made it perfectly plain that the company involved had no reason whatever to apprehend that any Governmental action respecting it would be taken without the fullest opportunity to protect its rights. I made no request of Mr. Thompson. I made no suggestions and voiced no criticism. I expressed my appreciation for his coming to the office and thanked him for the information.

"Of course, Mr. President, I should be very reluctant to serve on a Commission a member of which was objecting to my appointment, so I respectfully request you to withdraw my name from consideration of the Senate.

"I am sure that it will please you to know that I have a very desirable and agreeable business association which holds every prospect of giving me an opportunity for useful services and future success. Permit me, Mr. President, to assure you of my warm personal regard and my steadfast political support."

Mr. Christian had been invited to appear before the Senate Committee Saturday of this week.

Chairman Thompson, in his testimony, declared that "Mr. Christian attempted to use pressure on me to prevent the issuance of a complaint against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation."

"I was summoned to the White House by Secretary Christian in May, 1921," Mr. Thompson said, "while the Commission was discussing the issuance of an anti-trust complaint against Famous Players and affiliated companies. I was quizzed by the Secretary as to the status of the pending complaint."

"Did you feel that this proceeding on the part of Christian was improper?" queried a Senator.

"My feeling, and I believe it was the feeling of the other Commissioners with whom I talked later, was that this was pressure being brought upon us to prevent the issuance of a complaint," Mr. Thompson responded. "I do not think the President, Mr. Harding, had anything to do with it. He was not in the room at the time and I'm confident he did not know of it."

"We were told frequently by our field agents," Mr. Thompson continued, "that we would never bring out a complaint against Famous Players. We were further told that something would happen before we issued the complaint."

Thompson's Testimony

Field agents, he added, conducted an investigation to build up the case and he declared "certain parties came from New York, following the issuance of the complaint, trying to get us to eliminate certain parts of the case."

At the White House, Chairman Thompson went on, Mr. Christian said to him: "I understand you have issued a complaint against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. What do you mean by issuing a complaint against them without giving these people a hearing?"

"I told Mr. Christian," Mr. Thompson continued, "that we had not issued a complaint, but contemplated seriously doing so. I said repeatedly to him that I could not understand how he had learned that we were about to issue the complaint.

"I returned to the offices of the Commission and told my fellow-commissioners that I did not know what was to happen. 'We have completed an exhaustive investigation but now the White House seeks to stay our hand', I said to them. After I had told them what had happened at the White House they voted unanimously to issue the complaint."

"Did it occur to you that there was an impropriety in Christian calling you to the White House instead of his going to the offices of the Commission?" Senator Bruce of Maryland asked Mr. Thompson.

"It wasn't customary to be called to the White House," Mr. Thompson replied. "I don't recall it ever having occurred before."

"Did you think you were being sent for by the Secretary or by Mr. Harding?" Mr. Thompson was asked.

"By the President, of course," Thompson answered. "I thought the summons a move to prevent issuance of the complaint. It seemed to confirm the threatening stories brought here by field agents and persons unknown to us." He said that Mr. Christian expressed a feeling of "great seriousness when told that the usual procedure would govern the case."

Senator Bruce asked Chairman Thompson if he got "the impression that Mr. Christian was connected professionally with the film company."

To which Mr. Thompson replied: "I felt he was interested or he would not have asked the questions he did."

Eastman Cuts Price of Positive Film 25 Per Cent

THE Eastman Kodak Company has announced that, effective March 1, prices on film will be reduced as follows:

Eastman positive film, standard width, nitro-cellulose base, in black and white and tinted base, perforated—1.5 cents per foot.

Eastman news stock, standard width, nitro-cellulose base, in black and white and tinted base in three colors, perforated—1.3 cents per foot.

Announcement of the reduction, which is understood to be the largest single cut in prices ever made by Eastman was sent out to motion picture producers late last week. The reduction represents a cut of about twenty-five per cent.

Balaban and Katz Show Net Profit Increase

The report of Balaban & Katz Corporation, Chicago, for the last half of 1923, has just been issued and shows an increase of 14 per cent in the net income over the corresponding period of 1922.

For the six months ended December 20, 1923, operating profits were $1,048,946, from which $106,956 were deducted for depreciation and $106,713 for federal taxes, the net income being $734,937, equivalent after preferred dividends, to $2.40 a share on the common stock, or on an annual basis of $4.80 a share.

In addition to the five large theatres now operated by Balaban & Katz this company is engaged in the erection of a large theatre at Broadway, Lawrence and Magnolia Avenues, Chicago, which will have as large a seating capacity as the Chicago, about five thousand, and will have a long time lease on a large theatre which will be part of the new Masonic Temple on Randolph Street in Chicago's loop; also a long term lease on a south side house at 63rd and Kedzie, now in the course of construction by Fitzpatrick & McElroy.

Censors Reappointed by Portland Council

Mrs. F. O. Northrup and Gus A. Metzger have been reappointed members of the Portland, Oregon, censor board to serve for another year. The appointment was made by the City Council. It is said that the appointees will again elect Will S. Hale as the third member.

Motion Pictures and the Radio

By Alfred J. McCosker

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The author of this article for more than a year has been giving weekly talks on "Current Motion Pictures" from L. Bamberger and Company's radio station WOR in Newark, N. J. He is well-known in the industry as a writer and advertising man.

What this article will attempt to tell is the results which followed broadcasting of twenty minute intimate movie chats to the astonishingly large radio audience.

Summed up in a single sentence, it has been proved to my entire satisfaction at least, that the result of the radio talks has been decidedly beneficial to the exhibitor, hence, indirectly beneficial to every branch of the motion picture industry. It may be added this development is in contradiction to the expressed fears of a great many professional doubters who cried out in alarm when they learned that motion picture reviews and gossip were to be broadcast by radio.

These earnest men saw the advent of the radio only in its competitive phases. "How," they demanded, "can the people be expected to attend the movies and at the same time be at home listening-in to a radio programme?"

The answer is — they cannot. That is, they cannot be expected to be at both places at the same time. But it is equally unreasonable to expect them to be one place all the time. What one can do without recourse to phenomena, is to be one place and at the same time desire to be some other place. And, the more attractively the other place is painted to the imagination, the more one desires to be "the other place."

Builds Business for Theatres

Well, this desiring to be "the other place" is precisely what the radio movie chats have brought about. Stay-at-homes have figuratively been seized by the ear-pieces and information about motion pictures which the writer has attempted to make interesting then sounded in the homes of America. It will be conceded that this is the place from which most self-respecting motion picture theatre audiences start.

The information thus imparted awakened a lusty and full grown desire to witness at an early opportunity, some of the pictures described and when this takes place you have the radio audience or a portion of it in the process of transformation into a motion picture theatre audience. I know this to be true because many hundreds of listeners-in have written me they went to see pictures after hearing of them by radio. What was even more gratifying to me, because unfortunately or fortunately, I do not own a theatre, they added that they found them just as described.

Now this fact is not attributable entirely to the magic of the microphone, which is the little hard-boiled mechanical instrument into which the radio talker speaks. But, it is, in my opinion largely attributable to these frequently abused allies, Confidence and Friendship.

If you wish to learn how potent the voice is in begetting confidence and registering conviction, the blind, who are almost entirely dependent upon it in appraising casual acquaintances, will tell you. They will tell you in addition how seldom they are mistaken in judgment of character which they have estimated by the voice only.

"Hollywood" McCosker, who gives the radio audience reviews and gossip of the screen each week from WOR

It happened that my voice was a confidence builder with the radio audience and on this foundation I was careful to rear a structure of dependability. The radio talker's voice has a "setting" in that it takes on dignity when it comes in by radio; just as an unimportant comment frequently is dignified when it appears in type. I have never said anything about a motion picture over the radio that I did not believe.

When I was in possession of facts concerning a production, I stated them but when I was merely expressing a viewpoint, I said so clearly. To sum up, the voice earned confidence and my words earned friendship. It is easy to "sell" a good product to a friend and he usually comes back for more.

One must be impersonal in judging anything which later is to be passed upon by a miscellaneous number of others. Although my personal tast is not for red neckwear and green suits observation has taught me that quite an appreciable number of he-men wear one or the other or both.

Good Pictures Are Helped

I have attempted to keep in mind constantly while talking over the radio, the great diversity of opinion existing as to what constitutes an entertaining, a thrilling, an absorbing or a humorous motion picture and have considered it better to "lay-off" pictures that in my opinion did not measure up to any of the diverse standards of judgment. The radio audience was alert to this and saved my joining the ranks of obnoxious "panners."

Radio talks may not have been good for all motion pictures released during the past year but they have been good for the better ones. Radio-movie fans write me asking: "Why, Oh, why, do they exhibit such pictures as, '———.' The story is inane, the characters stiff and unconvincing. Though it took an hour or more to show on the screen, the worst might have been over in five minutes, ten at the outside. Now I know why you did no air it over the WOR radio." Just try to laugh that off.

Or, a correspondent writes, "We really do rely on your opinion of the pictures and find them usually as you criticise them. I shall certainly make it a point to see, "—— ——" as I regret to say I did not while it was at the ——— theatre.

These are word for word excerpts taken from actual fan letters. Do they seem to you like testimony?

Hundreds of requests from the radio audience have reached me during the past six months asking that certain well known screen stars be induced to talk to them by radio from station WOR. You of the trade will appreciate this is not an easy order to fill. When the majority of the more important players are in the East their limited time here is occupied with conferences with the producer executives and in attending evening performances of the new stage plays either socially or as a matter of business comparison.

However, many of the stars to whom these requests were made known agreed to talk to the radio-movie fans from station WOR at Newark, N. J. The talks with one exception were made in the evening at which time it is computed the audience is much larger and in every instance their radio "appearance" was billed as the leading attraction of the programme. Also, in every instance the artists told me later that the radio effort, made without any financial compensation and in most cases at some personal inconvenience, was a pleasant experience which induced wide publicity and a large mail from the ready letter-writing radio audience.

Stars Give Talks

Among the more important players who have addressed the WOR audience are: Charlie Chaplin, Lou Tellegen, Bryant Washburn, Baby Peggy, Elliott Dexter, Mrs. Wallace Reid, Richard Barthelmess, Mickey Bennett, Charles Ray and others. Tom Terriss, John Robertson and Emory Johnson, all well known directors, have also spoken from the same radio station with very satisfactory results and Forrest Halsey, the scenarist, sent over air a series of intimate talks on writing for the screen.

Chaplin's radio work was typical. He went on the air and told the fans that they knew of only one of his abilities, "a mediocre one, my screen acting." "Do you know," he continued, "I play beautifully every instrument of a jazz orchestra?"

It had been previously arranged to have a complete jazz aggregation in the studio and one by one these artists did their stuff. Chaplin meanwhile with short comments spoken into the microphone put over the impression that it was he who was playing the various musical instruments. He appeared to be greatly enthused as the radio act was closing and he burst forth with, "By Golly, I'll play them all at once." Then followed a selection by the orchestra and Chaplin tucked in a closing word to the effect that "it was all in fun." This went over big and in addition to bringing him advance publicity and a big mail was also the occasion for the metropolitan dailies and photo news services sending cameramen for pictures which later were widely printed.

There are very definite classifications of programes from radio stations as there are in every other form of the amusement field.

Super-Specials vs. Varied Program

Second Installment of Survey

AS announced last week, MOTION PICTURE NEWS is conducting a survey among representatives classes of the public throughout the country on the long picture vs. the varied program. Views are also being sought on what the public thinks admission prices should be, both in the downtown and neighborhood houses.

The first instalment of these opinions was printed last week. Following is the second installment. Others will appear in subsequent issues:

KANSAS CITY—Twenty-five persons were interviewed. Of these only three voted for the ten or twelve reel feature at advanced admissions. The overwhelming majority declared for the five or six reel feature, with news reel, comedy and scenic.

As to admission prices, the majority wanted 40-50c as the maximum downtown, and 25c the minimum. The average maximum admission for the neighborhood house was 25c, with 10-15c as the minimum.

One of the interesting developments of the Kansas City canvass was that 75% of the women interviewed voted for the diversified program.

OTTAWA, ONTARIO—President of Retail Merchants' Association: I am very much in favor of short subjects. I like the news weekly as much as the feature and I appreciate anything of an educational nature. Occasionally, I see a big production that is well worth-while. I believe the average person gets his money's worth when he pays an admission of 40 or 50 cents, and I think these prices are fair for downtown theatres. Twenty-five cents is a fair price at a neighborhood theatre.

President of Business Men's Service Club: I like a great big picture occasionally, but not always, because I look for variety. I want to see the short pictures as much as the longer features. Forty cents is not too much to pay for the usual show.

Bank Manager: I never go to see a special picture of elaborate nature. The feature of ordinary length seems to be all right, and one that delighted me was "Nanook of the North." In order to give a show that is attractive, a theatre requires to charge 35 or 40 cents.

Girl fan: I always like to see a really big picture because it is always so complete in every detail. With the average five-reel picture, the story is often cut off so abruptly that the audience is left to wonder what happens. I am willing to pay 75c to see a special production but 35c or 40c is enough for the average program. I cannot see how the small theatre can get along on 15c admission.

Another girl fan: I am strong for the big picture because the producer does not leave out a lot of the story. I like a five-reel feature, too, when it finishes off well. Shorter features appeal to a man, I know, because he likes a program that is broken up. Fifty cents is enough for the average program at a downtown theatre and sometimes it is worth only 35c.

CINCINNATI—Mayor George Carroll, who is an ardent fan, prefers the shorter features at 50c maximum and 25c minimum downtown and half those prices in the neighborhood houses.

Manitoba Collects $272,324 Amusement Tax

THE revenue derived by the Manitoba Provincial Government through the amusement tax in 1923 amounted to $272,324.68, according to a report brought down in the Provincial Legislature at Winnipeg on February 12. The budget for 1924 contains an estimated revenue of $250,000 from the Provincial tax on theatre admission tickets, so it is evident that the Government officials expect the amusement houses to secure a smaller share of business during the current year than was obtained last year.

Horace Potter, Managing Editor, Cincinnati Enquirer has the same views as Mayor Carroll.

Two men fans vote for the larger features. One is willing to pay $1 top; the other $1.50 top. Both think the neighborhood scale should be 30-50c.

Woman teacher: prefers the shorter features, and accompanying short subjects at 25-40c downtown and 20-30c in the neighborhoods.

The total vote in Cincinnati was 2 to 1 for the varied program.

TAMPA, FLORIDA—The women interviewed were for the varied program by a large majority. Following are typical opinions:

Postmistress of Tampa: prefers the variety programs. Like stories of human interest and does not care for big sets and mob stuff. Thinks 35c is high enough, with 25c minimum.

Business woman: wants the varied program. Believes 25c should be the regular admission price and 50c maximum for special attractions.

Woman teacher: votes for diversified program. Thinks 25c should be the popular price.

Stenographer: prefers varied program. Believes 25c is high enough for pictures and willing to let that stand as minimum as well.

Another woman teacher: prefers the big productions and thinks fifty cents should be top for these, with about 25c for regular shows.

Girl clerk: prefers varied program. Votes for 35c as maximum, with minimum as low as the theatre can afford.

Of the men interviewed, the overwhelming majority wanted the diversified program. Mayor Percy G. Wall was an exception. He declared for big pictures at advanced prices. An interesting sidelight was given by a physician, who said he preferred the varied program, but his family wanted "the big ones." He believed that 50c was sufficient for any production, with 25c as the average price for the run of shows.

PHILADELPHIA — Col. George E. Kemp, Postmaster: I wouldn't go four blocks to see the so-called super-special, but I would walk a mile to see a good comedy and a news reel. I like the news reels best of all. Fifty cents is enough to pay for any picture. The price scale should vary to fit every pocketbook. The neighborhood house is the poor man's entertainment. The price should be within his reach at all times.

George Elliott, Assistant Director of Public Safety: I personally prefer the longer and better grade of pictures, with a short lead thrown in. The prices of admission admit of so many ramifications and conditions vary that I would not feel at liberty to suggest a scale to apply to either downtown or small neighborhood houses.

Daniel Baird, bank president: On Saturday afternoons I take in the picture show that offers me a good feature, a comic, scenic and the news of the day and a little singing and good orchastral music thrown in. I pay 75c for it, and feel I have not overpaid. People who appreciate this sort of entertainment should be able to enter for 35c. The smaller house should run its prices from 10c to 25c.

Woman lecturer: People flock to a big picture with historical significance, for many weeks, and I am always one of the crowd. Other productions come and go by the score in the meantime. If I carried home an historical event well established in my mind I do not feel I have overpaid at $1.50.

Real estate dealer: I am a regular patron of the movies. I like the sort that sends me out of the theatre lighter in heart and mind than when I went in. The varied program seems to hit the spot better than the long production. The scale for a good show should be kept below the dollar mark, with 35c as a minimum.

Financier: Candidly, I belong to the masses in my picture entertainment. A little romance, intrigue, laughter and current events make up a pleasing bill for me. When picturess get beyond 75c they reach the danger mark. 25c is enough for the small nearby house. Fifty cents should be the minimum for the downtown theatre, and 15c for the other.

George E. Fletcher, Internal Revenue Agent: I prefer the varied program to the long, and frequently overdrawn, big production. I further believe that the maximum admission charge for a program of this sort in the right atmosphere should not exceed 50c. Twenty cents should be the peak for the small neighborhood house.

Retired manufacturer: I belong to the public that likes its entertainment short and snappy. Give me a good story in five or six reels, a really funny comedy, a news weekly, and a novelty and I go home refreshed. Sit me through ten reels of one story and I want to go home. I'm tired. Keep the admission charges to the good theatre within the reach of the majority at 50c and 15c or even 25c at the neighborhood houses, and the box-office will show more at the end of the year.

Lawyer: Give me a picture of about an hour's run, a good comedy, a news reel and educational picture and I have been more refreshed than sitting through a long picture. Keep the prices from 25-50c for big houses, and 15-25c for small ones.

Further opinions from the public will appear next week.

Edison Guest of Industry at Luncheon

Three Hundred Meet Him at Ritz

SMILING urbanely and smoking as it he enjoyed it, Thomas A. Edison sat through four hours of speeches, mostly about himself and highly laudatory, Friday Feb. 15th., when he was the guest of honor at a banquet given by the motion picture industry at the Ritz Carlton hotel.

The specific reason for the function was the 77th birthday of the noted inventor, occuring the previous Monday and the fact that he has been very properly called the "father of the films."

The luncheon was conceived by George Kleine, one of Mr. Edison's oldest friends and with whom he was closely associated in the early days of the motion picture business, when Mr. Edison was head of the producng company which bore his name and Mr. Kleine a distributor.

The luncheon was also an event characterized by a number of outstanding incidents. It not only brought together practically the whole of the Eastern end of the business but all who came did so with a deep appreciation of the debt that motion pictures owe to the inventor.

Mr. Kleine was chairman of a general committee who promoted the function. Others of the committee who worked faithfully to make the affair a success are, Peter J. Brady, Paul H. Cromelin, Sydney S. Cohen, Joseph Dannenberg, Dr. Lee De Forest, George Eastman, John Emerson, William Fox, D. W. Griffith, Burton Holmes, Aaron Jones, William A. Johnston, J. J. Kennedy, Carl Laemmle, Marcus Loew, Harold Lloyd, Charles L. O'Reilly, Elmer Pearson, Edward S. Porter, Watterson Rothacker, Terry Ramsaye, S. L. Rothafel, Richard A. Rowland, Charles M. Schwab, A. E. Smith, Courtland Smith, Frank Tichenor, J. D. Williams, Adolph Zukor and William Brandt.

Prior to the luncheon which was given in the Ritz grand ballroom, a reception was held and afterward two of the old Edison Company's picture's were shown. The two films were "The Great Train Robbery" well known to every one in the picture business, and a short comedy strip said to have been the first photoplay telling a story ever produced. The title of this strip was "The Kiss" which if, at this late date has no other virtues, at least was descriptive of its title. That's what the picture was. A kiss, long drawn out and burlesqued.

At the luncheon Will H. Hays presided as toastmaster and a notable array of speakers were present.

Before the speech making began a number of telegrams from prominent people offering congratu'ations were read, among which were highly laudatory messages from President Coolidge and David Lloyd George.

Mr. Edison did not speak, professing stage fright but a short message written by the inventor was read by Mr. Kleine.

"I believe," Mr. Edison wrote, "as I have always believed, that you control the most powerful instrument in the world for good and evil. Whatever part I have played in its development was mainly along mechanical lines.

"The far more important development of the motion picture as a medium for artistic effort and as an educational factor is in your hands. Because I was working before most of you were born, I am going to bore you with a little advice.

"Remember that you are the servants of the public and never let a desire for money or power prevent you from giving the public the best work of which you are capable."

Among the distinguished guests present and a speaker was George Eastman of Rochester. Mr. Eastman paid high tribute to the inventor.

He was followed by Terry Ramsaye, who sketched Mr. Edison's early career in the development of pictures and picture machines, with which he has become exceedingly familiar in the course of his work of writing a history of motion pictures, running for the past two years in Photoplay.

Speakers Pay Tribute

M. J. O'Toole representing the M. P. T. O. of A. was the next speaker. Mr. O'Toole was succeeded by Prof. Hudson Maxim who contributed an original poem laudatory to Mr. Edison.

Dr. Lee F. De Forrest also paid a fine tribute to his fellow inventor when he stated that that the development of the wireless telegraph and radio in which Mr. De Forrest is an expert was founded on an earlier invention of Mr. Edison's.

Other speakers were Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, Rupert Hughes, and Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma.

Senator Owen's address was of a serious nature touching on the place motion pictures occupy as an educator and moulder of public opinion.

After the last of the regular list of orators had finished Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, also special guests, were called upon for impromptu remarks. Doug responded with a characteristic story or two and then Mary made a fine, earnest little speech about "being proud to live in the same age with Mr. Edison" and said that she would try to make pictures that would live up to Mr. Edison's advice. Mary closed her remarks by throwing a double handed kiss to Mr. Edison who not to be outdone made his way, quickly, from the center of the long table to Mary at one end, where he proceeded to hold her hands, much to the delight of the audience.

Mr. Edison then wrote on Mary's menu card, "To the darling of America" after which he settled back to screen once again the two pictures from his studio mentioned in an earlier paragraph. Other guests at the speakers' table were Raymond Benjamin, Frank Munsey, Police Commissioner Enright Adolph S. Ochs, Frank H. Hitchcock and Charles Edison, son of the inventor.

Misquoted on Tax Repeal, Senator Curtis Claims

SENATOR CHARLES CURTIS of Kansas, who has received several heated letters from Kansas exhibitors following his proposed amendment to the Mellon plan, which would retain admission taxation to meet the demands for a soldiers' bonus, has shifted the blame to newspapers, alleging that he was misquoted.

A letter from Senator Curtis to Conrad Gabriel, Gerden City, Kas., exhibitor, said:

"I have your letter of January 21 and judge from what you write that the paper you read did not give my statement as I gave it out. My suggestions were only intended for consideration and I heartily agree with you that the smaller theatres should not be taxed and, so far as I am concerned, I would be willing to remove the tax on admissions below fifty cents. But my idea was to have them increase the tax on large admissions to prize fights, sporting events, clubs and other places of amusement where high prices are charged.

"I thank you for writing me and assure you that I always want to hear from my friends at home, and I have no desire to do an injustice to any industry."

One station sends out a uniformly high class program while another broadcasts comedy and jazz entertainment. Station WOR has consistently maintained its position among the former class of stations.

I would not approve of telling the entire story of a picture in making radio talks on the new films. Neither is it well to leave the fans suspended in mid-air because this is aggravating to the average person and let it be understood right here that radio audiences are made up of "average" persons. My plan is to "sketch" the film, enumerate the cast, classify the story as society drama, comedy, romance or whatever the fact is, and never assume the facetious or the know-it-all attitude. The so-called "breezy" style of presentation appears to be most approved by radio listeners which isn't strange considering the method of reception.

The letter from the radio audience which to me had the biggest wallop was sent by a matron of a home which houses 700 blind persons. She wrote the appreciation of the patients saying the movie-radio talks were the only connecting link between the stricken inmates and the world of motion pictures.

"Advertising" is positively taboo at the station from which I talk and this is not only a 99 per cent radio broadcast law but it is a wise policy. Therefore I contend the radio is one of the strongest allies of the motion pictures. The public has had ground for suspicions of film news that reaches them in many ways but not so with radio broadcasting from a non-commercial station.

Direct "selling" of motion pictures by radio is neither permitted nor attempted but it follows after the fashion of the prayer offered by the Old Maid, who kneeling down each night and morning was overheard to say: "Please, God, I do not ask anything for myself, but do send Mamma a son-in-law."

Austrian Film Conditions Change

Special by Jerome Lachenbruch

WITH the gradual, but sure economic recovery of Austria, a revived market for American photoplays presents itself to enterprising producers. The recovery of Austria has been due to direct aid by the League of Nations and a group of international bankers. Business men can now borrow money easily; pictures can be financed; and all legitimate enterprises can find financial support. This does not apply only to Austria proper, especially when one speaks of Austria as a film market. In a business sense, one thinks not only of the comparatively small territory known as Austria, but also of the several states (some of them new), that lie geographically close to her. The Austrian territory consists of Austria proper, Hungary, Zeecho-Slovakia, Poland, Jugo-Slavia and Roumania, with their clearing house and commercial capital in Vienna. This is quite a large territory, and now supports 2,200 motion picture theatres. It can support a great many more. Vienna, with its 200 theatres, is the centre of trade for all these states, and what is successful there usually is successful in the surrounding territory.

There is business to be done in this territory, now at last reawakening to full commercial activity after the sterile days of the war and the slow reconstruction period.

Unfortunately for American business interests in Austria, our producers have not exploited this market with the care and the diligence it deserves. They have contented themselves with local Austrian agents who have disposed of American pictures for whatever they were able to obtain; and in pursuing this policy they have been laying down a principle of low prices. Heretofore, Austria has not been as good a market as it should have been; and that for two reasons which react upon each other. Concisely stated, these reasons are poor theatres and low admission prices.

Theatres Old-Fashioned

The theatres, for the most part, are about ten years behind those of other large countries. They are sloppily run, not nearly as clean and as well decorated as they should be, and charge admission prices ranging from 7 cents to about 25 cents. Consequently, they draw only the poorer population and exclude the large middle class which would attend better kept theatres and better conducted shows. The interest of this large body of the public has not been sufficiently engaged, and the film business suffers thereby. By not asking slightly higher admission prices, the theatre owners and managers are unable to pay higher prices for pictures. The few exceptions to the rule have found that it pays to cater to the middle class; and these progressive managers can pay good prices and make good profits.

That the attitude toward their public is a false one is being proved daily by the splendid beginning which Mr. P. N. Brinch, the American manager of the newly opened Paramount branch office in Vienna has already made. He has actuallyl created a demand in certain localities for Paramount Pictures, and at prices that are extremely high for the Austrian territory. Together with his selling campaign, which is conducted through a selling arrangement with the large Sacha concern, Mr. Brinch is conducting a heart to heart educational campaign for better theatres.

Huffman Re-Elected Head of Clorado M. P. T. O.

H. E. Huffman. owner of the Blue Bird and Bide-a-Wee theatres, Denver, was re-elected President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Colorado at a state convention held last week.

Other officers elected were: Harry T. Nolan, Denver, first vice-president; C. E. Marguand, Loveland, second vice-president; F. W. Bronte, Yuma, third vice-president; Max Schaback, treasurer; and Charles Gillan, secretary.

Paramount has again demonstrated its business sagacity by sending over a personal agent to study the field and to adapt its selling campaign to the conditions he finds. Nearly, if not all the other American companies represented in this market, depend upon Austrian agents who have not the detached vision of a representative trained in the world's best film school. Besides, if an Austrian agent writes to his American headquarters, his reports are not taken with the seriousness they merit. The American parent concerns often conclude that their Austrian agent is apologizing for his own poor salesmanship when he reports that certain American pictures are not suitable for the Austrian market.

Poor Presentation

In the matter of theatres, Austria lags far behind Germany. And so far as presentation goes, she is a novice. A pianist, and occasionally one or two additional instrumentalists, furnish all the music. No special care is given to the selection of a musical program, to the decoration of the house, or to the comfort of the audience. With real understanding of the situation, Mr. Brinch, in an interview, hit the nail on the head when he said that Austria and the surrounding territory is showing 1924 pictures in the 1912 manner and in 1912 theatres.

So far as the city of Vienna is concerned, there is a very good reason for not building new theatres now or remodeling old ones. Building restrictions are innumerable. The housing situation is deplorable; and all efforts to rebuild old theatres or to construct new ones are turned aside by the authorities who urge the building of apartments and other dwellings instead. The housing shortage is the result of the large influx of population from Hungary, Germany, Zeecho-Slovakia and other neighboring states, a condition resulting from changed business and social conditions which have their causes in the war. In time, the shortage of theatres will be remedied.

What is more important than temporary difficulties, however, is the fact that Austria and the surrounding countries are overcoming their former psychological antagonism to American films. Everyone in Vienna speaks or is learning to speak English; through the banking affiliations with England, the relations with English speaking peoples has become very close, and you can always delight an Austrian by talking English to him. And when the housing conditions improve and new theatres are built, I look for a very active consumption of American films.

Heretofore, all Central Europe has been hostile to our films because their subjects and treatment did not correspond to the thoughts and the depressed conditions of the people. They had lost a war; they were starving; their thoughts played with scenes of violence and excesses of all kinds. (We have seen this in America in various German pictures that have been sent over.) It is quite understandable, therefore, that they should turn away from lighter, more cheerful and hopeful subjects, however well presented, with the comment that life as America presents it, is neither true nor real. Their own sorrows made the glamour of American pictures seem false. However, the Austrian nature is fundamentally gay and pleasure loving; it is elastic and rebounds quickly from sorrow to gladness; and now that material conditions have improved tremendously, Austrians are now beginning to look forward to every new American production.

Demand for American Films

American pictures for Austrian consumption must nevertheless be selected with care, for European psychology, bound up as it still is with conceptions of monarchy, cannot grasp our indifference to titles of nobility. Consequently, American pictures which ridicule the ancient order of things are likely to injure other American productions that might be highly acceptable.

One indubitable advantage that American films have over all continental ones is in the superior prints we use. A picture printed on Eastman stock is incomparably better than anything I have seen in Germany, France and Austria. American producers who want to break into the Austrian territory should bear this in mind and not send over negatives, but first class Eastman prints.

The few large Austrian producing companies, chiefly Sacha and Vita, know their local markets thoroughly and are well established. There are fewer fly-by-night companies in Austria than in America or in Germany; and the solid companies have no trouble in obtaining financial backing from the banks. Last November, the Vita concern, whose American agent is Alfred Weiss (formerly with Goldwyn), reorganized on a large scale, and it is now exploiting the European market with considerable success.

None of the Austrian companies pursue a definite policy of underselling one another in a mad scramble for business supremacy. It is done, to be sure, but not to any great extent. And I hold it extremely unwise for any American company to enter the field and try to compete by underselling. In conclusion, let me emphasize again that price cutting to kill competition will not bring business to American producers who are seeking a Central European market. It will merely place all film prices on a level so low that no one can obtain a satisfactory return on his investment. No single concern is strong enough to inaugurate a price-cutting policy in the hope of killing off competition. The company that pursues such a course will chalk up a big deficit as a result of so poorly advised a program.

To Broadcast All But Food at Naked Truth Dinner

THE Press Agents are going to whoop it up on the night of March 29th at the Hotel Astor so that they will be literally heard all over the United States, Canada and England.

The A. M. P. A. has completed arrangements whereby Station WJZ will broadcast by radio the program of entertainment that will feature their annual festive gathering and at the same time provide the general public with an earful of "naked truth" about the movies.

It will not be the usual "Naked Truth" dinner. It will, in fact, be forty Naked Truth dinners given simultaneously, with the activities centering at the Astor, because in forty of the key cities of the United States, as well as in London, members of the local film exchanges will gather at their usual meeting places and listen in at the entertainment in New York. Everything but the food will be broadcast, it is announced.

Harry Reichenbach sailed from New York Saturday to complete arrangements for the London entertainment via radio, while the branch managers will look after the local festivities in the various key cities.

Oklahoman Charges Fraud Against Concern

S. B. Callaham, proprietor of the Callaham Telephone and Electrical Company of Broken Bow, Oklahoma, reports that he has been the victim of an alleged bunko concern, said to be operating out of Los Angeles.

According to Mr. Callaham he was approached by a Mr. Montgomery and contracted to have some local views taken. Prints were supposed to have been forwarded to Chicago three months ago. They have not yet arrived. Mr. Callaham in the interim has not been able to locate the concern.

Sunday Opening Measure Defeated in Jersey

Despite the fact that the Assembly Judiciary Committee of the New Jersey Legislature has rejected a measure giving municipalities authority to choose Sunday amusements, exhibitors of Hudson County declared they would continue to operate on Sunday, as no definite interference had appeared.

It is expected some kind of action will be taken by the authorities shortly, but the theatres have been open the past five Sundays. The state "blue laws" are supposed to prohibit Sabbath shows.

Dominick Retires from Famous Directorate

At a board meeting of Famous Players early in the week Gayer G. Dominick tendered his resignation from the board of directors because of pressure of business. Mr. Dominick is of the firm of Dominick and Dominick, Wall street brokers, who have handled Paramount stock issues. No successor has been named to Mr. Dominick on the board.

EVERYBODY'S STEPPING OUT. MARCH 29. T. N. T.

In and Out of Town

DR. W. E. SHALLENBERGER, President of Arrow, has returned from a trip to Boston.

E. RUSSELL, of London, a director of Educational Films Corporation, arrived last week from London.

HARRY RATHNER, sales representative for Principal, is on a six weeks' sales trip through the West.

HIRAM ABRAMS, who has been to the Coast and visiting United Artists' exchanges en route East, was expected back in town the end of the week.

ALLEN MORITZ, special representative for Preferred, has returned from a business trip which included Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit.

JOHN C. FLINN, vice-president of Hodkinson, has returned from a flying trip to the Middle West.

JOE BRANDT, President of C.B.C., is back in New York after a short visit to nearby exchanges. He will leave shortly for an extended trip throughout the country.

ADOLPH ZUKOR, President of Famous Players-Lasky, and S. R. Kent, distribution manager, attended the premiere of "The Ten Commandments" at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, February 18.

FIRST National executive committeemen in town this week included Sam Katz, of Chicago; A. H. Blank, of Des Moines; M. L. Finkelstein, Minneapolis; and Harry M. Crandall, Washington.

SIG SAMUELS, of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, has returned home after a short visit.

EDWARD GROSSMAN, state right buyer of Chicago, is in town looking over the independent market.

AL. LICHTMAN, general sales manager of Universal, has gone to Los Angeles. He will be away from New York about a month

MAJOR H. C. S. THOMSON, managing director of F. B. O., and Vice-President Joseph I. Schnitzer, are on the coast.

German Authorities Cut Entertainment Tax

FOR the first time in the history of German film production the German authorities have voluntarily reduced the high entertainment tax the exhibitors of that country have to pay on the admissions received.

It has just been reported that the senate of Hamburg has decided to cut the cinema entertainment tax for the leading Hamburg house, where the Decla production of the Ufa, "Cinderella" is running at present, to 10 per cent.

The Hamberg senate has made this step in order to make it possible for every citizen, rich or poor, to view this picture.

Broadcasters Put Ban on Taxable Music

MEMBERS of the National Association of Broadcasters from all parts of the country, met at the Hotel LaSalle, Chicago on February 15th, to discuss plans for the fight against the "music tax" imposed on broadcasters, as well as motion picture theatres, hotels, dance halls and other places of public amusement, by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

In order to bring the composers, authors and publishers to terms it was proposed to refrain from broadcasting or playing any of the society's copyrighted music, and motion picture theatres were urged to co-operate in this movement.

Plans also were discussed for the formation of a bureau which would supply music to the broadcasters and others interested, such as motion picture theatres, at cost. The bureau, according to the plans, will assemble a large library of suitable vocal and instrumental music, and authors contributing to this library will do so under contract to refrain from placing a "tax" on this music at any future date.

Rothacker Slogan Contest Awards Due Soon

Selecting the prize winner in the Rothacker slogan contest is proving a bigger job than the judges anticipated. Yet the announcement of the awards may be expected in the very near future.

The task of deciding who is to get the gold is a hard one for two reasons: First: So many slogans were submitted, that the list which the judges have to consider is a very long one. Second, so many good slogans were found in the list that elimination is somewhat difficult.

Watterson R. Rothacker offered $100, $50, and $25 in gold for the three slogans best expressing Rothacker Prints and Service. The Judges are James R. Quirk, William A. Johnston and Martin J. Quigley.

Cosmopolitan Leases Park Theatre in Boston

Announcement has been made that Goldwyn Cosmopolitan has leased the Park Theatre in Boston until September 1st in order to assure itself a big first run theatre in the New England territory.

Cosmopolitan's Marion Davies picture, "Little Old New York," is now in its fourth week at the Park.

When it has completed its run there, it will be followed by Cosmopolitan's "The Great White Way," now running at the Cosmopolitan Theatre in New York, then by Cosmopolitan's "Under the Red Robe," and by Goldwyn's Elinor Glyn production of her novel, "Three Weeks."

Keith Interests Acquire Union Hill Houses

Keith interests have taken over the Capital and State theatres in Union Hill, N. J., according to report. The houses were built by the Capital Theatre and Amusement Company two years ago.

JOY'S BIRTHDAY. MARCH 29. T. N. T.

Eddie Silton Opens Own New York Offices

EDDIE SILTON, formerly of the Edward Small organization, has gone into business for himself.

Joining forces with Mr. Silton, is Miss Rebecca, also of the Small organization. The new company will be known as Rebecca & Silton, Inc. They have well equipped offices on the fifth floor of the Powers Building, 723 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

The foundation principle of this new organization will be dependable service with intelligent originality and specialization will be made in the direct needs of the producer.

Previous to his association with Small Silton was in the exchange end of the business where he acquired a composite knowledge of picture values and of the various artists.

David Smith Will Direct "Captain Blood"

David Smith will direct "Captain Blood," Rafael Sabatini's novel which President Albert E. Smith, of Vitagraph, purchased while in London last fall.

The selection of David Smith was announced at the executive offices last week by President Smith. Plans for the production have been going forward rapidly. C. Graham Baker submitted the first outline of his continuity to Mr. Smith and George H. Smith, managing director of Vitagraph in London.

Production will begin about April and "Captain Blood" will be one of the early fall releases.

Scenes from a current Universal production, "The Man from Wyoming," featuring Jack Hoxie

Richard Talmadge is the star in the Truart production, "In Fast Company." The supporting cast includes Mildred Harris, Sheldon Lewis, Charles Clary, Douglas Gerrard, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Snitz Edwards and Jack Herrick

Rowland Defines 1st National Policy

Door Will Always Be Open, He Says, to High Class Product from Independents

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, who returned from the Coast this week, after conferences with First National production heads and allied producers, declared that "any rumors to the effect that First National plans an extension of its own producing units, thereby lessening its need for pictures from outside sources are without any basis of fact.

"We are going ahead with our own production," Mr. Rowland said, "but I want to take this opportunity to correct any false impression concerning our policy. The door of First National will always be open to high class product from independent producers.

"As stated in the past, I believe that more pictures should be made in the East, and my last visit to the Coast in no way altered this decision. Within the next six months, I hope to bring several First National units East where there will be closer contact between headquarters and the producing staffs. This does not mean more production activity on our part, merely a change of base."

Mr. Rowland spent considerable time with Frank Lloyd, who was making the sea scenes for Sabatini's "The Sea Hawk", and saw enough of the production to convince him that it is destined to be the biggest picture ever released by First National. It is planned to give "The Sea Hawk" a Broadway showing at a legitimate theatre in the spring and it will be placed in long run theatres in other large cities by Frank Lloyd Productions, Inc.

First National's production manager is no less enthusiastic about the Corinne Griffith production, "Lilies of the Field" and Richard Walton Tully's "Flowing Gold."

"The Woman on the Jury" looks like another winner, according to Mr. Rowland, as does Colleen Moore in "The Perfect Flapper." "I have seen 'Secrets' and feel that in her wonderful portrayal of the elderly woman, the middle aged mother and the girl, Norma Talmadge, surpasses anything that she has ever done", he continued.

Film Guild Directors are Named at Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Film Guild held last Friday, the following Board of Directors were named:

Maude Adams, H. J. Cook, vice-president of Equitable Trust Company; Francis W. Crowinshield, Editor of Vanity Fair and director of the Conde Nast publications; Walter Fahy of the firm of Lyman D. Smith & Co., Townsend Martin, R. L. Skofield, director of the American Can Company; Louis E. Stoddard, Frederick Waller and Dwight Deere Wiman.

Present officers of the Guild are: Dwight Deere Wiman, president; Frederick Waller, treasurer; Townsend Martin, secretary; Frank Tuttle, first vice-president; Osgood Perkins, second vice-president.

Paramount Signs Menjou to Long Contract

Famous Players Lasky Corporation has signed Adolphe Menjou to a long term contract, according to an announcement made this week by Jesse Lasky, vice president of the company.

Mr. Lasky said that one of Mr. Menjou's vehicles will be the romatic comedy-drama, "The King," which, starring Leo Ditrichstein, had a successful engagement at the George M. Cohen Theatre in the season of 1917-18.

Motion Pictures as Banking Market

Cecil De Mille Declares Industry Profitable Field for Banks in Every Community

THE connection between banking and the motion picture industry from the business viewpoint is set forth by Cecil B. De Mille, director-general of Famous Players-Lasky, in the January number of The Bank Director.

Mr. De Mille is vice-president of the Commercial National Bank of Los Angeles; vice-president of the Federal Trust and Savings Bank of Hollywood; and a director of the Bank of Italy, Los Angeles.

Pointing out that "entertainment has been one of the best paying industries for thousands of years," Mr. De Mille says: "Speaking purely as a banker, with a knowledge of the entertainment industry, I would consider a loan on a Mary Pickford or a Harold Lloyd production far more safe and less fragile than the apples or wheat mentioned. The sole difference is that I can touch the apples while the thing that makes the names of Lloyd and Pickford worth any amount demanded is intangible, is the insatiable demand of 100,000,000 people willing and anxious to pay from ten cents up, to see the reflection of their personalities on the screen."

Discussing loans to exhibitors, Mr. De Mille writes: "Suppose a man appears before your board with a proposition to build a theatre in a certain section. He shows you title to or lease on a certain piece of real estate. That part is simple. You know in an instant just how much you safely can loan on that portion of his assets.

"Then he presents to you contracts indicating that he has signed up with reputable wholesalers of amusement for types of entertainment particularly adapted to the clientele of the district he serves.

"He has, in these contracts, assets just as valuable as bills of sale for goods en route. For, while he cannot actually line up in front of you one thousand people and say, 'These will all pay fifty cents to see my show, on such an such an evening,' past experience of entertainment has proven that when arrangements have been made for a steady flow of the amusement they like, the public can be depended upon for a certain average of attendance just as the haberdasher knows his customer has to buy collars every so often. Entertainment is a necessity. Man must have it. If you cannot supply the kind he likes, he will go elsewhere—but he must have it.

"There is just one thing to be demanded of a dealer in amusement, and that is a consistent record of success in giving the public something which renders it ready and willing to surrender money in exchange for two or three hours of relaxation."

It is Mr. De Mille's belief that "there is money in entertainment for banks in every community. But a small percentage, however, is tapping the profits to be had in this field. And the reason lies in the fact that the manufacturers, merchants and professional men, who make up the average bank board, do not understand the distinctive patois of the entertainment industry.

"Progressive banks will do well to place on their boards at least one representative from the amusement field. They will then be enabled to handle intelligently an important banking market. Where a merchant or a manufacturer might find his search for loaning facts obscured by unfamiliar terms and assets, a man whose life has been spent in purveying amusements would find absurdly simple problems which have befuddled his uninitiated associates."

Elsewhere in his article, Mr. De Mille declares: "As chairman of the Motion Picture Loan Committee of the Bank of Italy, I would, all things being equal, vote for a loan on a Douglas Fairbanks picture just as quickly as upon a shipment of Gillette razors. The names of Fairbanks and Gillette are equally potent as money-getters in their particular lines."

Penn. Censorship Board Cuts Down Expenses

IN an effort to keep the budget of expenses of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors within the limits prescribed by the last session of the State Legislature it was announced at the capitol in Harrisburg on February 11, that four inspectors, one picture machine operator and one file clerk, employed by the bard, have been dismissed.

The original law fixing the number of employes provided for thirteen inspectors at $1.800. Their duties are to visit theatres in all parts of the state and report violations of the censorship laws.

The censorship board is now a bureau of the Department of Labor and Industry, having prior to the Pinchot administration been a separate department.

No Request for Hearing on Censorship Repeal

Up to the present time there has been no request received at the State Capitol at Albany, N. Y., for a hearing on the bills introduced calling for the repeal of the present motion picture censorship law in that state. There has been no progress in the bills which are still in committee.

Samuel I. Berman of the M. P. T. O. of New York state, visited the capitol during the past week, but had nothing to say relative to censorship. Chairman George H. Cobb, of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, was also at the State Capitol during the week, but it was said that his visit was entirely in connection with the budget from which the expenses of the commission are met.

Yeggs Steal $500 from Seattle Theatre

Thieves who gained entrance by breaking in one of the rear doors early one morning last week, knocked off the combination of the safe, pried it open with a crowbar and escaped with more than $500 in cash from the Princess Theater, one of the leading downtown second-run houses in Seattle.

The robbery was discovered by a policeman, who immediately notified Manager O. R. Hartman. Investigation disclosed that the robbers had also ransacked the office, looting desks and drawers, before their departure. The looted safe was a small steel cabinet affair, which did not offer serious resistance to the burglars.

Clemmer Elected Head of Washington M. P. T. O.

Dr. Howard S. Clemmer of the Clemmer Theatre in Spokane was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington for the ensuing year, at a recent meeting of that body held in Seattle. L. A. Drinkwine of Tacoma was chosen vice-president, and J. M. Hone was retained as executive secretary and treasurer.

First National Month Sets Sales Record

"First National Month," the drive which introduced five First National pictures to exhibitors during January, was the most successful sales campaign in the history of that organization, according to the tabulation of returns recently completed at the Home Office.

E. A. Eschmann, First National's general manager of distribution is now in the field and is personally congratulating the managers in the twenty branches he will visit. "Team work, confidence and enthusiasm were staunch allies during the month," Mr. Eschmann wired, "Everybody put one shoulder to the wheel to get started and both shoulders as the pace increased.

"With the conclusion of First National Month, the 'First National 20' are now presented."

Camera Work Completed on "Clay of C'lina"

Camera work has just been completed at Universal City on Herbert Rawlinson's April release, "Clay of C'lina," a story of high class gamblers written by Calvin Johnston and published last year in the Saturday Evening Post. Alice Lake plays opposite Rawlinson. It is an Irving Cummings production, and was adapted for the screen by Raymond L. Schrock.

The east includes Robert Walker, Jim Blackwell, Edwin J. Brady and Harmon MacGregor.

"Clay of C'lina" is scheduled for release April 21st. It is now being cut and edited at Universal City.

Dorothy Farnum to Prepare "Babbitt" for Warners

Dorothy Farnum, who was brought to the Warner Bros., West Coast Studios to prepare the screen version of Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel" and "Lover's Lane" has been signed by the Warner Bros., to write the scenario for "Babbitt"—Sinclair Lewis' novel. This is to be Miss Farnum's next work.

"Babbitt" is soon to go into production on the Warner lot under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Willard Louis has already been cast for the role of George Babbitt.

Woods Signs Harron With Dorothy Mackaill

Frank E. Woods announces that John Harron has been signed to appear opposite Dorothy Mackaill in the production he is starting this week at the Fairbanks-Pickford studio for release through the Hodkinson Corporation. No title has been selected for the subject.

New Producing Company in Hollywood Field

ANOTHER film producing company has entered the West Coast field. Hollywood Photoplay Productions is its name; it is headed by Leland Stanford Ramsdell, nephew of the founder of Stanford University and owner of the Bullock-Jones chain of stores. Its financing backing is placed at $1,000,000. Mr. Ramsdell's organization is to begin production as an independent film company in the immediate future, starting operations with a single unit.

Gordon White has been selected to star in Hollywood Photoplay Productions' pictures, and Randall H. Faye is to prepare and edit the scripts. Other members of the new organization have not been named, but work is already under way to select supporting players, and screen tests are being made. Negotiations for studio space have not yet been closed, but according to a statement by Mr. Faye, the F. B. O. studios, formerly Robertson-Cole, will probably be chosen.

Clergymen See Shooting of "Never Say Die"

Some 300 members of the Ministerial Association of Los Angeles representing all denominations, witnessed the shooting of the first scene of "Never Say Die," Douglas MacLean's next production for Associated Exhibitors.

Through their action this picture became, it is believed, the first photoplay ever launched with the official God-speed of an organized body of clergymen.

Dr. W. E. McCullough, president of the Ministerial Association, made a short address, congratulating Mr. MacLean on his production of only clean, wholesome photoplays in the past and bespeaking success for him in the new picture. The gathering marked the first visit of the association to a motion picture studio and it is expected to cement friendly relations between the picture industry and the churches of southern California. The clergymen, Douglas MacLean's father among them, and the star himself in their midst, had a group photograph taken at the studio.

Paramount to Start Work on "Code of Sea"

Jacqueline Logan and Rod La Rocque will be co-featured in Victor Fleming's Paramount production, "The Code of the Sea," which soon will be started at the Lasky studio. Bertram Millhauser is now engaged in writing the scenario of this original screen story by Byron Morgan, which deals with the thrilling life of those engaged in the United States Lightship Service.

Truart Completes Deal for "Fires of Fate"

A deal was consummated this week whereby Truart Film Corporation has acquired the production "Fires of Fate," produced by Tom Terriss for A. C. and R. C. Bromhead. This production, was pictured almost entirely in Africa, the scenes being laid in Cairo and in the Libyan Desert. In making "Fires of Fate," which is an adaptation of Sir A. Conan Doyle's novel "The Tragedy of the Korosko," Director Terriss is said to have had the co-operation of the British Government in Egypt.

Wanda Hawley is the star of the production and in the support are Nigel Barrie and Pedro de Cordoba.

"Fires of Fate" will be franchised by Truart on the independent market. The picture is now being edited and titled and will be ready for release within thirty days.

Baby Peggy Starts Work on "Helen's Babies"

Having completed "Captain January," from the story by Laura E. Richards, Baby Peggy, star for Principal Pictures Corporation, has started work on "Helen's Babies," the narrative by John Habberton, according to advices from Los Angeles just received by Irving M. Lesser, vice-president of Principal.

William Seiter is directing "Helen's Babies." The continuity is by Hope Loring and Louis Leighton. Production is under the personal supervision of Sol Lesser and the business management of Mike Rosenberg, secretary of Principal.

"Beau Brummel" Premiere Set for New York

The Broadway premiere of "Beau Brummel," Warner Brothers screen version of the Clyde Fitch play, is set for sometime in March, according to the announcement from the home office. John Barrymore will be seen in the title role.

Willard Louis Signed to Play "Babbitt"

Willard Louis has signed to play the part of George Babbitt in the forthcoming Warner Brothers production of the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Babbitt."

Rock Vitagraph General Manager

Son of Company Founder Will Fill Vacancy Left by John M. Quinn Death

JOHN B. ROCK has been appointed general manager of Vitagraph, Inc., to succeed the late John M. Quinn, according to an announcement made by President Albert E. Smith at the executive offices in Brooklyn last week. The announcement was in the form of a telegram addressed to all members of the Vitagraph organization by the president. It read:

"The history of Vitagraph is well known to all. Started a quarter of a century ago by Mr. William T. Rock, Mr. J. Stuart Blackton and myself, Vitagraph for many years stood at the head of the industry. The death of Mr. Rock in 1916, plus the loss of Mr. Blackton in 1917, handicapped Vitagraph for a time. Last year I announced Mr. Blackton's return to the fold and now I take great pleasure in informing you that Mr. John B. Rock will try and fill his father's shoes by filling the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Quinn, who, I am sure, if he knew, would be happy at my choice."

The return of Mr. Rock to active service in Vitagraph whom he represented for ten years from 1906 to 1916 in Chicago, restores to the film industry three pioneer names. His father, William T. Rock, was active in Vitagraph from 1897 when he, with Messrs. Smith and Blackton, organized the company until his death in 1916.

Mr. Rock assumed charge in his new office immediately. The business policy of Vitagraph will undergo no change under his management.

At the time of the announcement of Mr. Rock's appointment, President Smith also announced that A. Victor Smith would return to active service as assistant to Mr. Rock. Mr. Smith is well known to the trade as well as in the production field of pictures. He served as general sales representative and as assistant to the president and production manager at the Brooklyn Studios. He left that office to enlist with the Motor Transport Corps in 1917, where he served as Adjutant in the Chief Purchasing Office, A. E. F., after which he returned as special sales representative in the home office.

"I am sure Vitagraph men all over the world will welcome the return to active service of the son of one of the founders," said President Smith before his return to Los Angeles last week. "There is hardly a picture making unit in the United States that has not within its membership at least one 'Vitagrapher.' For many years our own staff has been as one family. For that reason, and because Vitagraph has an established reputation for stability in personnel, I am more than happy that Mr. Rock returns to active duty.

"My short visit East in spite of the sad mission which brought me to New York has given me no little gratification in my review of the business progress Vitagraph is enjoying."

Cosmopolitan Productions Open on Coast

Two Cosmopolitan productions received their first showings in Los Angeles last Sunday when "The Great White Way" opened at the California Theatre and "Under the Red Robe" at the Rialto Theatre.

Pathe Appoints Two New Branch Managers

Oscar Hanson, who has been in charge of the Pathe branch-office at Omaha for the past two years, has been appointed manager of the Pathe exchange at Detroit.

T. G. Meyers, who has been serving as salesman from the Pathe office at Chicago for over seven years, has been promoted to the managership of the Omaha exchange, succeeding Mr. Hanson at that post. These changes become effective at once.

Vitagraph Chief Welcomes Brother from London

GEORGE H. SMITH, managing director of the Vitagraph Film Company, Ltd., of London, arrived in New York on the Berengaria last week to visit his brother, Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph. President Smith arrived in New York from Hollywood and met the head of the British distributing corporation upon his arrival

The visit celebrates the twenty-sixth anniversary month of the organization of Vitagraph. President Smith established the foreign office in London in 1905 under the direction of his brother. Mr. Smith will go to Hollywood with President Smith and this will mark the first reunion the family has held in several years. President Smith's father now resides in Hollywood, W. S. Smith is studio manager, and David Smith is now directing "Borrowed Husbands" there.

Pathe Appoints Feature Representative

A further indication of the elaborate plans which Pathe has under way for the launching in the near future of its new feature product comes this week in the form of an announcement that Frank Harris, formerly branch manager for Pathe at St. Louis, has been appointed as a special feature representative.

Part of the feature product which will engage Mr. Harris's attention in his new capacity includes the new Harold Lloyd comedy production, "Girl Shy;" the Hal Roach novelty feature, titled "The King of Wild Horses," which presents an untamed stallion in the title role; and another forthcoming Hal Roach feature release, "Somewhere in Kansas."

Independent Plan Would Stop Piracy

Secret Code Number for Each Release Suggested by Special Committee

THE piracy of film as well as disputes or court actions regarding the ownership of positive prints which often get outside of territory, will be a thing of the past in one important branch of the industry at least, through the adoption of the recommendations of the committee on film identification of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association.

A special committee composed of Arthur N. Smallwood, chairman, Jack Cohn and John Lowell Russell, has been investigating the situation for the past few weeks having conferred with George A. Blair, Manager, motion picture department of the Eastman Kodak Company, and with representatives of some of the laboratories.

It was agreed during these conferences that nothing could be accomplished in the way of a protective measure, by photographic or mechanical processes, either at the source of raw stock manufacture, or at the film laboratories.

Mr. Blair related to the committee some of the experiences of the Eastman company, in connection with experiments conducted by it, also the attempts of the older producing and distributing companies to promptly identify their prints before release from the laboratories.

The committee finally decided that each company should adopt a secret code for each release, which is to be inserted at different intervals on the margin of all reels. The form in which the secret code is to appear on the film will be carefully guarded by each company, which will keep a record of the particular code assigned to each release.

Such action will not only prove of direct advantage to each concern but will be a great step forward in the united effort to eliminate film piracy, as this new means of identification will make it possible to promptly restore any lost print to its lawful owner.

The recommendations of this committee have been approved by the Independent Association, and each company member has been requested by President I. E. Chadwick to inaugurate the new system at the earliest opportunity.

The adoption of this practical plan should effect a very great saving to the distributors, exchanges and state right buyers handling independent products, eventually solving one of the most trying problems with which the motion picture industry has been confronted since its inception.

Gruman Assistant Sales Chief of Selznick

David R. Blyth, director of sales and distribution of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, announces the appointment of S. Edward Gruman as assistant director of sales.

Mr. Gruman is well known in film sales circles, with which he has been associated for the past five years. For more than two years he was connected with the sales department of film booking offices. His first position in the Selznick organization was as secretary to General Manager Woody. After Mr. Woody left the organization, Mr. Gruman transferred to the sales department, where he has been ever since, acting as assistant to Mr. Blyth for some time past.

Ruth Roland and Browning Form Own Company

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in Los Angeles this week that Ruth Roland, well-known serial star, and Tod Browning, the director, have formed Co-Artists Productions to star Miss Roland under Browning's direction.

"Extravagance" will be the initial production, and it will be filmed at the F. B. O. studios, according to the announcement.

Miss Roland is one of the best known stars on the screen, having appeared in a number of Pathe serials and several features. Mr. Browning has directed many successful productions, notably for Universal.

Sigrid Holmquist Signs with Chadwick

Sigrid Holmquist, international star, has been signed by Chadwick Pictures Corporation for a principal role in "Meddling Women," which will be produced jointly by Ivan Abramson and Edmund Lawrence.

Lionel Barrymore, who is now starring in "Laugh Clown Laugh" at the Belasco theatre, New York city, will head the cast of players. Another star who will also appear in "Meddling Women," is Dagmar Godowsky.

The engagement of Miss Holmquist was consummated this week, contracts having been signed in Mr. Chadwick's offices in New York.

"Meddling Women" is one of a series of twelve productions that Chadwick Pictures Corporation will produce and release in the independent market during 1924-25.

"King of Wild Horses" Due April 13

"The King of Wild Horses," the love story of an untamed stallion, will be available for showing on April 13. This is a Hal Roach feature produced under the direction of Fred Jackman.

Universal Will Start on Race Track Story

Irving Cummings will start production at Universal City in a few days of Gerald Beaumont's Tia Juana race track story, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." Creighton Hale, Ethel Shannon and George Cooper will head the cast of players.

The story, originally published in the Red Book magazine, will be filmed as a feature production and released in five or six reel length.

Vitagraph Names "Between Friends" Cast

President Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph has announced the all cast selected for "Between Friends," a picturization of Robert W. Chambers' novel, which J. Stuart Blackton is producing at the Hollywood Studios.

Lou Tellegen has the principal role. Alice Calhoun has the leading feminine role. Others selected are Norman Kerry, Stuart Holmes, and Anna Q. Nilsson.

Grand Meeting Independent Producers on Coast

FOR the purpose of meeting independent producers and signing up with them for eighteen features and a number of special productions, Samuel V. Grand, President of the Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation, accompanied by Edward M. James, attorney for the organization, arrived in Hollywood from New York this week.

According to Mr. Grand, the system of distribution which will be put into effect by Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation is a development of and improvement upon that recently outlined by General Manager Samuel Bischoff. On or before March 15th, he states it will be in full working order and will afford practically 100 per cent distribution for independent productions.

Fox Starts Production on "Circus Rider"

Production was started this week on "The Circus Rider," the latest program feature in which William Fox will star Charles Jones. William Wellman is directing this picture at the Fox West Coast Studios. The story was written by Louis Sherwin and the screen adaptation is the work of Doty Hobart.

Marian Nixon, who played opposite Jones in "The Vagabond Trail," which will be released March 9th, also has the leading feminine role in "The Circus Rider." The others in the cast include: Jack McDonald, Ray Hallor, Marguerite Clayton and George Romain.

YOUR IDEA

AN example of the sort of managerial thoughtfulness that pays was given recently by Manager Oral D. Cloakey of the Regent theater, Ottawa, while the crowd was waiting for the second evening performance of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

The night was bitterly cold as hundreds of people were lined up in a queue from the entrance of the Regent, the lobby of which is comparatively small, so that the expectant patrons could not be accommodated within the outer doors, and when Manager Cloakey sized up the situation he immediately sponsored a "treat on the house."

He got into touch with the proprietor of the Belmont Pharmacy, just across the street, ordering "all the coffee that the crowd wanted." The hot drinks were soon forthcoming, individual cups and saucers being provided on trays which attendants carried down the line. At first the people in line were shy and did not seem to quite catch the offer until Manager Cloakey announced that the coffee was being presented as a special treat by the Regent theater without charge.

Eventually 200 cups were dispensed and, literally, many warm friends were made for the theater by the kindly act. The people stuck to their waiting after they had had the hot drink, and Manager Cloakey believes that, apart from the advertising value of the treat, many of the people continued to wait for admission who otherwise would have decided that it was too cold to do so.

An unusual added attraction was the appearance nightly of the entire choir of the Basilica, the large French Roman Catholic church of the Canadian Capital.

While you're selling pictures, don't forget to sell your theatre as a community institution.

A NOTEWORTHY piece of community service on the part of theatre managers in Toledo has come to our attention, done in connection with National Thrift Week.

The Toledo Blade each year gets behind this movement energetically, and this year its campaign consisted of four pages of advertising. One of these was on the day designated as "Share-With-Others Day," and urged systematic giving to schools, churches, hospitals and the like. W. E. Myers, advertising manager of The Blade, realized that if the page were underwritten by these institutions themselves, it would have little effect, since such a message would have to come from disinterested parties. He decided to approach the theatres, in company with the theatre man on the Blade staff.

The result was that the page was oversubscribed in a few hours. There was no theatrical advertising on it; merely the notation that the page was paid for by the Alhambra, B. F. Keith's Ohio, Empire, Loew's Valentine, Pantheon, Princess, Rivoli, Savoy, Horater's Temple, World and The Toledo theatres.

This sort of public spirited activity goes a long ways toward establishing the theatre in the community and overcoming the effect of unfavorable publicity.

Any stunt is new if it's never been done in your town.

FOR the purpose of issuing instructions to members of the theatre staff, correcting errors and carelessness, and making each person feel his full responsibility, Manager E. D. Turner of the Imperial theatre, Asheville, N. C., has worked out an admirable memorandum system.

Turner believes that sending a general notice from the manager's office and allowing it to filter through the deparment heads, or posting it on the bulletin board, does not carry sufficient weight, because the notice or instruction is after all only general, and loses its force.

When he is obliged to issue instructions he has an original and a sufficient number of copies made to reach every employee in the theatre. The original goes with the carbon copy, and serves as sort of receipt, so that in Turner's file he knows that every member of the staff has received the instructions, because the original, which is returned to him, is so initialed.

In turn, everybody in the theatre has a binder, in which they keep the instructions under the classifications by which they are issued. That is to say, there are three classes of instructions. The first is known as general. It defines the policy of the theatre in relationship to the patrons, and in regard to the type of entertainment that the house is specializing in. The instructions in this classification are permanent. Every member of the staff is required to know them, and every new addition to the staff must learn them before being regarded as a permanent member of the theatre organization. This is a strict rule.

The second classification is known by Special Instructions, and covers breaches in theatre discipline, such as leaving a post without relief, failing to report exit lights out, or some weakening of the chain in a particular spot. No names are ever mentioned on this type of memo, but the instruction carries a polite reminder that a repetition of the offense will mean dismissal.

Memo Instructions is the third of the series. These are issued when there are last-minute changes in the program requiring a revision of the usher's schedule because of the consequent change in the running time of the show. They are "spot" notices taking effect only over a given time.

This system, according to Turner, has welded his organization together. When everybody in the theatre knows what is expected of him, and those around him, he can work intelligently and with a sense of responsibility possible to achieve no other way.

White space costs as much money as the other kind, but it's worth it.

THERE is perhaps nothing more effective, when it is desired to make an extra "flash" in the lobby, than the building of a set-piece on the order of a small stage. It is really an amplification of the silhouetted shadow box idea, with all the effectiveness of that form of display plus the added value of size.

Elaborate lobby piece used by the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa., on "Potash and Perlmutter" (First National).

Such displays need not of necessity be especially expensive. The principal item of labor, and if the exhibitor is himself handy with the brush so that he can do the work himself, the cost is little, for the compo board, light sockets, and other paraphernalia can be used repeatedly.

The display here shown is that built by the management of the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa., during the showing of "Potash and Perlmutter."

Built of compo board, it was ingeniously painted so as to present an artistic appearance. The stage was built in the center, and posters of the fashion models and dancers were cut out and mounted to decorate this space. Turrets at each side contained cut-outs of Abe and Mawruss, each holding a telephone. All around the stage, turrets and the platform in front were rows of lights, producing a brilliant effect that could not be passed by.

AND OURS

An idea of this sort might be supplemented by the loud speaker idea, having, instead of the familiar phonograph, a man at the other end of the wire quoting some of the sayings of Abe and Mawruss culled from the subtitles of the picture.

Good pictures are the fuel in the gas tank, but exploitation is the lubricator that keeps it running along smoothly.

NOW and then a real human interest angle develops in connection with a publicity stunt that gives it an unexpected "kick." Such a one happened the other day in Toronto during a popularity contest.

Manager J. Bernstein of Loew's theatre, Toronto, was conducting the familiar "Popular Shop Girl" contest to publicize his showing of "Only a Shop Girl."

The winner of the competition proved to be a 70-year-old widow who had been employed in a Toronto laundry since 1902. She won by a majority of 3,000 votes over her nearest competitor, an attractive young lady. Her candidacy met with popular favor and thousands of patrons who had never heard of her before cast their votes for her.

Toronto newspapers devoted prominent space to her victory, giving the details of her life. It developed that she had been born in Toronto, near the place where she was employed, and had never been more than 45 miles from the city. Since the death of her husband, 23 years before, she had supported a grand niece and grand nephew.

She was given an overwhelming ovation when she stepped onto the stage to receive her $100 prize. Such a human interest angle gives a flavor to a stunt of this kind which it seldom possesses, and when such can be found it should be played to the fullest.

Send us that latest exploitation stunt of yours. If it's worth doing, it's worth passing along to the other fellow.

ABOUT a year ago, R. J. McLean of the Palace theatre, Washington Court House, Ohio, started a policy of using a permanent 24-sheet stand with changeable spaces for a three-sheet and four one-sheets. That it has proved profitable and successful is shown by the fact that he is still using it.

The latest attraction on which he used this 24-sheet stand was "Flaming Youth," but unfortunately the photograph was not suitable for reproduction here.

The board has a permanent white background, with the slogan in large letters: "You Always See a Good Show at the Palace." Borders have been printed on this background, in which the one-sheets and three-sheet are placed.

This stunt permits of the use of a variety of paper; if desired, a one-sheet on a short subject may be used, or a special block one-sheet for an added attraction; there is an economy in paper, since only seven sheets are used, and the bill-posting problem is simplified and cheapened.

In addition, where a theatre desires to build up a permanent community prestige, there is a certain value in the uniform appearance of this board, week after week.

Have you used the German mark ballyhoo yet?

IT is often the simplest and least expensive stunt that brings the most publicity, an instance of which is shown by the recent experience of Manager Dewey Mousson of the Knickerbocker theater, Nashville, in putting over "Potash and Perlmutter."

The idea, which is applicable to any comedy picture, was that of offering a prize to anyone who could sit through the picture without smiling. Those who wished to compete were given a special ticket, and were watched during the showing.

So much word of mouth publicity developed that Nashville merchants were glad to donate the prizes. Mousson saw to it that there were a few winners, and the publicity more than repaid him for the few passes.

MORE practical than many accessories, and filling a genuine need, something new in the line of advertising material has been gotten out by Film Booking Offices. This is a series of Special Merchandising Window Cards, to be issued on F. B. O. pictures.

The first samples to reach this desk is the series gotten out on "The Lullaby." There are six cards in the group, each designed to be used with a particular sort of window display. The cards are ready for use, the addition of the theatre imprint being optional, and easily done if desired.

Each card centers around a tie-up between Jane Novak, the star, and a particular line of merchandise. One, for instance, reads: 'A Film Star's Shoes. A film star must wear the best in shoes. Footwear that is not only in vogue but practical. We carry footwear for the entire family—mother, father and the children. See the Stylish Shoes Worn By Jane Novak in "The Lullaby." The billing of the picture is in red, occupying nearly the lower one-half of the card, and the other matter is printed in black, including a cut of the star.

The cards are of a convenient size, 11 x 14 inches, and the exhibitor should have little difficulty in placing them. They are neater in appearance than the average hand lettered card, unless done by a professional, and represent a considerable economy.

Even in the badly over-seated town you'll usually find at least one live showman who keeps his house filled regardless.

PLEASINGLY different from the usual run of advertising is the accompanying display on "Maytime," picture, by the way, which has been receiving somewhat more than the usual amount of artistic advertising.

Art ad on "Maytime" (Preferred) used by James' Grand theatre, Columbus Ohio

The use of the eccentric style of drawing has resulted in ample white space within the figures themselves, and the hand lettering is light in tone. The ad has not been cluttered up with excessive billing credits, and the copy used has been well chosen.

The theatre name has been placed conspicuously at the top of the display, which ran three columns in width by seven and one-half in depth.

James' Grand theatre, Columbus, Ohio, was responsible for the advertisement in question, which appeared in the Sunday issue of the Columbus papers, on the date of opening.

There is often a tendency in these hand lettered displays to use a fancy, "trick" lettering, resulting in an ad next to impossible to read, but this has happily been avoided here through the use of a plain, line letter.

UNUSUALLY far reaching in its scope, a new national tie-up has been arranged by the exploitation department of Metro. The concern involved is Vivaudou, Inc., maker of beauty preparations, and the campaign will embrace all of the feminine stars appearing in Metro pictures.

The tie-up is already in effect. Full page ads on Barbara La Marr appear this month in Pictorial Review, Delineator, Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Red Book, Motion Picture Magazine and others, hooking up closely with "Thy Name is Woman."

Other players who will appear from time to time in this series are Mae Murray, Viola Dana, Alice Terry, Jean Tolley, Kathryn McGuire, Enid Bennett and Norma Shearer. The arrangements extend over a period of one year.

The manufacturer is having designed a series of window displays, tying up with each star and picture, which will be furnished to their dealers at the time of playing of the picture Metro is informing exhibitors of the tie-ups, and Vivaudou is writing its dealers, so that cooperation may be as close as possible. In addition, each package of the manufacturer's products will contain a minature booklet with pictures of the stars.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Name the Man—
An intensely interesting picture that pulled well. (East.)

Unseeing Eyes—
One of the best snow pictures yet produced, yet nothing exceptional outside of that. A little slow at times, and patrons were somewhat disappointed at Lionel Barrymore's performance. Business just fair. (West.)

In the Palace of the King—
Opinions divided somewhat, but held up splendidly throughout run. (Middle West.)

Little Old New York—
A great picture, but it was a bad week in town, and it did only fairly well. (Middle West.)

Reno—
This picture did a fair week. Title attracted interest. Picture brought favorable and unfavorable comment from press and fans. (Middle West.)

FOX

You Can't Get Away With It—
Poor picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Kentucky Days—

Cameo Kirby—
Just an average picture which held its own and nothing more. (Middle West.)

The Governor's Lady—
An excellent film. Well received. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

Cupid's Fireman—
A good picture but the wrong title. Business was pretty good. (Middle West.)

Mile-a-Minute Romeo—
Excellent Mix picture. (East.)

South Sea Love—
An entertaining little picture, revolving on rather a well-worn theme. Did a very nice business however. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Twenty-One—
Attendance for the week was better than the average. (Middle West.)
Patrons were glad to see Richard Barthelmess get away from the costume picture and return to a modern story. This one was well liked and did a very pleasing business. West.)

Black Oxen—
Big attraction that drew large audiences and sent them away satisfied. (Middle West.)
This picture attracted very good houses, due to reputation of book large advertising campaign, and popularity of the star. Picture itself was well liked by some, but others did not care for it. Held over for the start of a second week, however. (West.)

Her Temporary Husband—
Pleased our audience and in connection with anniversary week, it did big business. (Middle West.)

METRO

Scaramouche—
On second week's showing the box office showed a return that warmed the heart. Everybody liked it. Was shown at smaller theatre. (Middle West.)
Did splendidly with it. First showing at popular prices here. (Middle West.)

Fashion Row—
Very good and considered Mae Murray's best. Box office receipts very good. (West.)

Rouged Lips—
A good drawing card, which held up well all week. (Middle West.)

In Search of a Thrill—
Fair picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)

The White Sister—
Picture is lauded on all sides. It is doing satisfactory business, but nothing startling. (Middle West.)

Pleasure Mad—
This picture is the sort that appeals to those who like the elaborately gowned kind. It was good and did a very good week. The weather was also favorable. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

Humming Bird—
Many considered this best thing Gloria Swanson has done. She has a large local following and they all supported her royally. Middle West.)
Very good picture. Attracted attention and held over for second week. Receipts very good. (West.)
Splendid picture that pleased the immense crowd. (East.)

Pied Piper Malone—
Thomas Meighan always draws well here. The picture played to a good week's attendance. (Middle West).
Hit a popular chord. Should take well most anywhere. (Middle West.)

Flaming Barriers—
Better than average picture of its kind. Played to average business. (Middle West.)

Ruggles of Red Gap—
An entertaining picture, well acted and mounted. Well liked by patrons. Business excellent. (East.)

Don't Call It Love—
Picture pretty good, but business only fair. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Hunchback of Notre Dame—
Wonderful picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)
The best box office attraction in many months. Played for three weeks to large crowds. (Middle West.)
A winner from every angle. (East.)

Sporting Youth—
Plenty of speed and action in this one, and that, combined with the star and good cast, was responsible for very good business. Held over for a second week. (West.)
Fast moving, entertaining, racing story. Went over big. (Middle West.)
Biggest audience picture we have played this year. Coupled with Jazz Week, we filled the house continuously. (Middle West.)

Darling of New York—
Fairly diverting comedy drama which drew well for a week. Baby Peggy quite popular at this house. (East.)

Thundering Dawn—
Very good. Proved popular attraction. (Middle West.)

The Jack of Clubs—
Good program picture. We had very good business with this picture. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Leavenworth Case—
Fair picture, but considered too sensational by many. Receipts fair. (West.)

SELZNICK

Modern Matrimony—
Fair picture. Receipts good, aided by other attractions. (West.)

Woman to Woman—
Betty Compson fans pleased with this feature. Did big business. (Middle West.)

ALLIED P. & D.

Richard the Lion-Hearted—
Failed to make good under bad conditions. Somewhat disappointing. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Call of the Wild—
Fairly good business for the week on this one. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

Conductor 1492—
Johnny Hines' best effort to date. A very entertaining comedy that pleased the patrons and did a very favorable week's business. (West.)

F. B. O.

Lights Out —
A good melodrama that appealed to audiences that were in search of that type of entertainment. Business pretty good. (West.)

Judgment of the Storm—
The storm scene attracted the crowd and brought business. (East.)

After the Ball—
Not a good drawing card. (East.)

Alimony—
A mediocre offering from every viewpoint, but patrons thinking it sensational flocked in and box office recorded fair business for a seven day run. (East.)

ASSOC. EXHIBS.

Courtship of Myles Standish—
Splendid audience picture as well as educational production, with Ray appearing in person was a hit. Capacity business. (Middle West.)
Did better than expected, mostly on account of curiosity. (East.)

Going Up
A real laugh-getting comedy success. Full of pep and clean. Good business. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Broken Hearts of Broadway—
Nothing extra on this. Business only fair. (Middle West.)

Temporary Marriage—
By playing up Mildred Davis as Mrs. Harold Lloyd, was able to arouse some interest in an otherwise average program picture. Business good for week. (East.)

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Production listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News — first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Strong Selling Copy Tells of "Ashes of Vengeance"

George Schade reverted to "just plain talk" without explanations or adjectives when he showed "Ashes of Vengeance" at the Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio. He announced it in advance as "the biggest attraction in Sandusky" that week. All he mentioned after that was Norma Talmadge's name, the story adaptation and some of the characters.

He worked on public psychology by repeating this ad for several days before the opening, prefixing each bit of copy with a line as to how many days it would be before the picture reached his house.

Schade made one distinctive touch that shows how important it is for a theatre manager to be a part of his community and to know who's who. He saw the name of Kenneth Gibson in the cast. Knowing Gibson's real name and the fact that he was a Sandusky boy, with relatives in the town, Schade played this up.

"Her Temporary Husband" Given Teaser Stunt

Milton D. Crandall, head of the publicity department of Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh, proved that the classified columns of newspapers are a mighty medium when the time is ripe, to exploit a picture. One day in the week previous to the showing of "Her Temporary Husband," he had inserted in all of the newspapers of Pittsburgh a three-inch classified ad, calling attention to the fact that a young lady twenty-two years of age, desired a mate in matrimony. The heading of the ad was "A Temporary Husband" in bold type. The ad contained some humorous lines, such as "prefer a man who does not expect to live longer than a week."

And then the returns. The ad was inserted on Wednesday the address given being "Burns and Burns, Liberty theatre." Thursday morning at ten o'clock there were telegrams from towns so far distant as Akron, Ohio, special delivery letters from all parts of Pittsburgh and surrounding towns. It was almost found necessary at times to install a special telephone operator in the Liberty to take care of the innumerable calls from aspirants willing to be a temporary husband to the young lady for a monetary consideration.

One young man, an inventor from the West, while touring through Pittsburgh, saw the ad and came to see Crandall in person. He was deadly in earnest, which attitude he maintained even when interviewed by newspaper reporters. It was strictly a "business proposition" with him, as with all the others. Everyone connected with the management of the Liberty was besought to use influence in behalf of aspiring claimants.

The Pittsburgh Post made quite a story out of the whole procedure, quoting verbatim excerpts from a few of the hundreds of letters and telegrams that were received. The whole transaction demonstrated what big returns may come from small beginnings. That little ad caused a bigger flurry in Pittsburgh than anything that has happened in quite some time. Crandall did not allow the temporary husband discussion to die, for he kept it alive by running an ad on the opening day of "Her Temporary Husband" recalling some of the incidents that had occurred during the few previous days.

"BIG BROTHER" LOBBY PIECE
Manager Howard Waugh of Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, used this display recently on "Big Brother" (Paramount).

Mission Theatre Campaign on "Judgment of Storm"

When "Judgment of the Storm," played at the Mission theater, Los Angeles, the engagement was preceded by an intensive campaign. One hundred and fifty 24-sheet stands were posted. Advance and regular newspaper space was enlarged and printers' ink carried the announcement of the opening in press columns and illustrations. Representative bookstores in Los Angeles and Hollywood gave window displays of the book, "Judgment of the Storm," with stills and a card announcing that the picture was now playing at the Mission theater. Every big department store also gave considerable floor space to a showing of the book with stills and card.

One of the most effective exploitation angles was a letter, mailed by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation to each one of their students in Los Angeles with the request to mail a copy, or similar letter, to at least three of their friends. The letter called attention to the coming engagement of "Judgment of the Storm" at the Mission theater, and, in addition, carried a message to aspiring screen writers with the suggestion they see the picture.

Large Beaverboard Bottle Aids "Brass Bottle"

In addition to a quantity of paper, posters and lobby frames, Manager Dewey Mousson of the Knickerbocker theatre, Nashville, Tenn., had an enormous brass bottle ballyhoo tour the city in connection with his showing of "The Brass Bottle."

The construction of this ballyhoo was an achievement. Made of beaverboard and measuring eight feet in height this vase shone in the sunlight. It had been painted gold. The sides were covered with silk cloth also painted gold. On the front was a one sheet on the production.

The color alone attracted attention and, while it lacked sensational features, the ballyhoo got notice simply by its originality.

WELL ARRANGED WINDOW DISPLAY GIVEN TO "SCARAMOUCHE" SHOWING IN DES MOINES
This window tie-up with a photographic store brought attention to the showing of "Scaramouche" (Metro) at the Rialto theatre, Des Moines.

"Long Live the King" Well Exploited by Contest

The newsboy contest, widely used to exploit "Long Live the King," was put over with good effect in Charleston, S. C., for the Princess theater recently. The campaign was executed by C. D. Haug, Metro exploitation representative in that section.

Haug tied up with the News and Courier and the Charleston News. These papers printed coupons daily with instructions for their readers to clip and either mail to the editorial offices or deposit in front of the Princess theater in a box for that purpose. The stunt interested thousands of people. The winning newsboy—the one the votes acclaimed as the most popular was given a Jackie Coogan suit of clothes while the four others in order of popularity were given a proportionate number of passes to see Jackie in "Long Live the King."

Haug also went to the schools and arranged for the thousands of children to see "Long Live the King" at reduced prices. The Princess management printed tickets which, with half the price of the usual admission, permitted all children under 12 to see "Long Live the King."

Silhouette Guessing Stunt On "Little Old New York"

Manager Harry F. Storin of the Leroy theatre, Pawtucket, R. I., employed an excellent publicity stunt for his showing of "Little Old New York." He took a 50-line advertisement in the Pawtucket Times, offering admission to the theatre to the writers of the letters received in which the silhouette reprinted in the advertisement was correctly identified.

Hundreds of letters were received from Pawtucket and the surrounding towns such as Ashton, Valley Falls, Abbot Run, Manville, Attleboro, North Attleboro, Plainville and other villages. The silhouette of Miss Davies as "Pat" O'Day in "Little Old New York" was easily identifiable and most of the replies were correct but the publicity received through the stunt was worth many times the cost.

Mr Storin took a photograph of the letters received in this contest and it was published under a two column head in a later issue of the Times, together with a little story about the contest.

Another feature of Mr. Storin's campaign was the Marion Davies slipper contest which was put on in co-operation with one of the shoe stores of Pawtucket. The store gave a special display of the shoe for two weeks together with stills and cards. Other merchant tie-ups were made with stills from the production which were used in window displays, such as a special card advertising the showing of the picture.

A prologue which proved very attractive to the patrons consisted of two children, one dressed as Marion Davies in girl's clothes and the other as Miss Davies appears in boy's clothes. The costumes were copied from production stills at a very slight cost, the mothers of the children making the costumes.

A full page advertising tie-up was obtained with the Times, which had accepted nothing of that nature for several years.

KENOSHA "BLACK OXEN" FRONT

Front of the Orpheum, Kenosha, Wis., under the management of Edward Dayton, during "Black Oxen" (First Nat'l). Willard C. Welch designed the display.

Six Pictures Exploited at Australian Movie Ball

American exploitation methods introduced recently into Australia have aided greatly in putting over campaigns for the pictures which have been released to the Antipodes this season.

Six of the latest pictures were publicized at the movie ball held recently in Melbourne, Australia. A herald, in costume, announcing the various attractions at the ball, carried a long trumpet from which hung a banner with the inscription "William Fox presents: If Winter Comes, Six Cylinder Love, The Silent Command, The Shadow of the East, Nro and The Shepherd King."

Each attraction was represented by a member of the Fox exchange staff in Melbourne, Ray Howe, the manager, was dressed as the admiral in "The Silent Command", Mrs. Rowe represented "Six Cylinder Love", Miss Hilda Laidlaw, an accountant, portrayed "The Shepherd King"; Miss Agnes Roe, "If Winter Comes" and Tom Lee, salesman, dressed as "Nero".

Radio Broadcasting Tie-Up Aids "The Acquittal"

At the suggestion of Jean Belasco, Universal exploiteer at Kansas City, Mo., Manager Balsley of the Liberty theatre in that city, arranged for the broadcasting of his theatre program over the local station.

This stunt, worked during the showing of "The Acquittal" and "The Darling of New York," attracted considerable attention not only to the picture being shown but to the house as well. The Western Radio company with whom Balsley made his arrangements, wrote him to the effect that hundreds of telephone calls were received daily regarding the reception of the Liberty theatre program, during the three weeks. This, they added, did not include the local and out-of-town retailers and customers that come into their store daily and mention the Liberty programs. In addition they received many post cards and letters from listeners-in in different parts of the country.

TWO OF THE WINDOW TIE-UPS OBTAINED BY WAUGH IN HIS RECENT "BIG BROTHER" CAMPAIGN

When Howard Waugh ran "Big Brother" (Paramount) at Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, he concentrated on window tie-ups. Two of the displays he arranged for are here shown.

"Hunchback of Notre Dame" Idea

Photoplay Basis of Many Tie-ups

SEVERAL novel exploitation ideas were put over by A. J. Sharick, Universal exploiter, in connection with his campaign for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Savoy theatre, Asbury Park, N. J.

Tying-up with the U. S. Navy, Sharick arranged to have all their street boards, used for recruiting purposes, carry a picture of the cathedral set from the Universal production and a legend advertising "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and is presentation at the local theatre. This assured the very best locations in town for the attractive and colorful displays.

The exploiteer arranged with Steinbach's (the leading department store) to give a theatre party to the members of the establishment having the most sales during the week. The store posted bulletins on each floor, donated a fine window display, and used stills from "The Hunchback" in all their regular newspaper advertising. "Hunchback" heralds were wrapped in all bundles sent from the store.

Window tie-ups were arranged with the leading book store, druggist and camera goods emporium; special lobby displays were placed in three of the town's other theatres, and a lavish distribution of paper was made. Asbury Park and its environs were billed for a radius of twelve miles, and heralds broadcasted throughout the territory.

Three thousand dodgers were put out in the schools offering a prize of five dollars to the boy or girl under 14 who brought in the longest list of names of Asbury Park residents who didn't know "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was playing at the Savoy theatre. Children canvassed their neighbors and friends, assuring word-of-mouth advertising in their endeavors to obtain the prize, which was paid by the theatre.

A special showing for teachers and school boards was held the Saturday preceding the opening. Nearly two hundred educators attended, and arrangements were made to accommodate special school parties at Thursday and Friday matinees. This resulted in the schools being closed early on Friday to permit the children to attend the matinee.

"BLACK OXEN" STREET STUNT

Manager C. R. Sullivan of the Fair theatre, Amarillo, Texas, used this street bulletin on "Black Oxen" (First Nat'l).

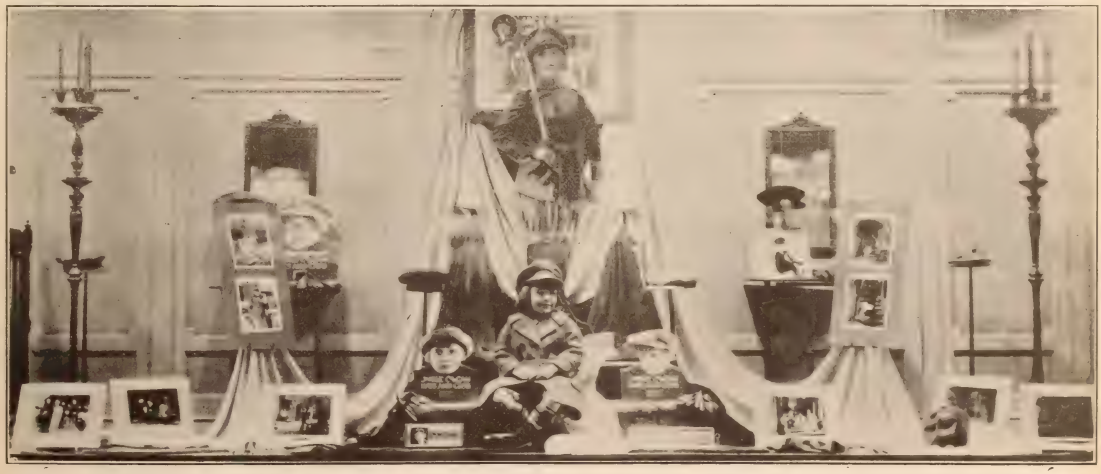
Sharick spoke before the Aerial Club and several women's organizations. Although unable to decide upon a day whereon to attend in a body, a sizeable contingent from the Aerial Club attended the Wednesday matinee. By means of the talks made to the women's clubs, hundreds of women were informed of the production, who helped to spread verbal advertising on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame".

Splendid advance newspaper publicity was obtained, and effective advertising placed. A carefully rehearsed five-piece orchestra, simple but artistic stage setting, attractive lighting and appealing chimes accompaniment assured a splendid presentation.

Novel Shopping Stunt

James Geller, "Hunchback" exploiteer in the St. Louis territory, obtained considerable free advertising in the St. Louis Times by tying up with one of the novel features of that newspaper. The daily conducts a half-page headed: Betty the Shopper, wherein that young woman chattily suggests bargains available in town, and offers household suggestions of interest to woman.

The exploiter inserted a small ad to the effect that "Screen Shopping for Entertainment, a New Fad. Had Brought Thousands to the Pershing Theatre where 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame' was playing to Capacity, etc." Betty the Shopper devoted twelve of her fifteen paragraphs to the Laemmle masterpiece. The paragraphs devoted to "The Hunchback" by the young woman were written in such a way as to fit in with her style of interpolating big secrets of human interest.



The stunt is recommended as being one sure of reaching women thus building up the matinees. Exhibitors are advised to tie-up with any similar features in their local newspapers when playing "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", as the production readily lends itself to exploitation of this sort.

Advertised for Circus as "Circus Days" Stunt

On "Circus Days" Manager R. E. Eady of the Palladium, Plymouth, England., staged a campaign along the lines of sound showmanship.

It was the circus parade that put the picture over but the oddity lay in the manner in which Manager Eady got his parade. He advertised for the lion and keeper, the elephant and keeper and a dromedary, even though he knew his chances were about 100

The parade did consist of a van wagon, six musicians, two mounted jockeys, four trained goats, a bear, fourteen clowns, the smallest Shetland pony in England, and an army of sandwich men and advertising signs.

ATTRACTIVE USE OF CUT-OUTS, STILLS AND OTHER DISPLAY MATERIAL ON "LONG LIVE THE KING"

Window display in Richmond, Va., where "Long Live the King" (Metro), played at the Bijou theatre. H. S. Ansley, Metro exploiter, arranged the tie-up

Boston Campaign on "Black Oxen"

Unusually Attractive Windows Given; Theatre Front Hand Painted for Run

USING a judicious mixture of old and new campaign stunts, a strong exploitation smash was put over for the showing of "Black Oxen," at Gordon's Olympia, Boston. Manager Frank Hookailo handled all the details around the theater and had the assistance of Jack Pegler, First National's Boston exploitation representative, who also looked out for the street angles.

Six special windows were arranged that deserved unusual comment. The Jordan-Marsh store made its debut in motion picture exploitation by contributing a full window for the book display. The Kresge stores and musical contemporaries featured window displays of "When Romance Wakes," the Waterson, Berlin and Snyder song that was tied up with the picture. Lampell's millinery store on Washington street made a display of women's hats duplicated from Corinne Griffith's headpieces in the picture. A handsome back drop of oxen heads, reproduced from the cover of the book, was painted for the exclusive use of this window. The Lenox Jewelry Shop dressed up a window on strings of pearls and offered a set of passes to the purchasers of each string. For this purpose the theater gave the first 20 passes and any over that amount were bought by the store at box office prices. Teddy's shoe store saw that Corinne Griffith's footwear was not neglected, for it displayed a complete line of the shoes worn by the star of and in "Black Oxen."

Owing to the large width of the Olympia's front Manager Hookailo was unable to use the 24-sheet cut-out. Instead he had the entire front hand painted in one of the most impressive fronts the Olympia has ever had. The letters of "Black Oxen," raised and shadowed, stood out in bold relief while a 20-foot figure of the Black Oxen figure stood in prominent display. Special spotlights were installed to flood this front at night time.

Five billion German marks were distributed as handbills, with the simple caption printed on them: "Mark This 'Black Oxen' at the Olympia is a Sensation." The mark may be of little value but the value of the stunt is that very few, if any, of the recipients threw this handbill away. The marks were in 100,000 denominations.

A man-flying kite was put in the air, first above the Commons and later above Washington street. The title was painted on the banner which measured 20 by 15 feet.

A pair of jet black oxen were being imported from Worcester, at the time of writing, for a street exploitation stunt during the second week.

Ties Up with Ice Carnival on "Hunchback" Showing

Manager O. D. Cloakey of the Regent theater, Ottawa, secured a tie-up with the Ice Carnival at the large new hockey auditorium in the Canadian capital on the "Hunchback of Notre Dame" by offering a special prize for the best "hunchback" character on the ice.

At the same time, the management of the auditorium invited Cloakey to be the chief judge in the fancy dress competitions. The carnival was held Friday evening, February 1, and the "Hunchback" opened at the Regent on Saturday, February 2. The result was that the Regent got some very timely advertising in the newspapers.

This snappy display on "If Winter Comes" (Para.) was designed by Arthur Swanke, ad manager of the Rialto, El Dorado, Ark.

Juvenile Circus Parade Is "Circus Days" Stunt

"Circus Days" was exploited from many angles when it was played at the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa. George Kruppa, manager and owner of the theatre, worked in conjunction with C. C. Pippin, exploitation man out of the First National exchange in Philadelphia.

Kruppa first worked up a big circus parade for the kids and not only ran announcements in the newspapers on Thursday and Friday preceding the opening on the following Monday, but had many thousand circulars printed and distributed over the entire city. The circulars were worded in the form of an invitation to the kids to join the big circus parade and march to the Aldine theatre. The latter theatre is also owned by Kruppa. At the Aldine they were awarded prizes for the best clown, best fat lady, best bearded lady, best skinny man, best snake charmer and best float.

On Saturday morning at nine o'clock more than a thousand children of various ages were at the starting point, where they fell in line behind a brass band and ten prancing white ponies. At the theatre the winners were selected and given an order for their prize to be secured at Donovan's sporting goods store. The kids then marched to the store followed by all those who were not lucky enough to secure a prize. At the store the prizes were awarded in the following order: First prize, air rifle; second prize, basket ball; third prize, boxing gloves; fourth prize, big sled; fifth prize, football. The tie-up with the store enabled Donovan's to get an enormous crowd of children in their store, many of which probably saw something that they liked and played on their parents sympathies until they purchased it.

During each day of the engagement the ponies were kept on the streets covering practically the entire city. Four were attached to carts and four were ridden by youngsters garbed in clown costume.

The lobby of the Hamilton was all dressed up like a real circus, it being arranged to represent a circus tent and toy animals perched in conspicuous places. A victrola was secured with a "cooch" dancing doll attachment. This proved to be a wonderful drawing card and no sooner than it was started than a great crowd swarmed around the entrance to watch the little doll move in unison with the music.

LARGE ROCKET AND SET-PIECE IN HART'S "GOING UP" ARRANGEMENT
The idea of the title was effectively used by Manager J. M. Edgar Hart of the Palace theatre, El Paso, in preparing his display on "Going Up" (Assoc. Exhibs.)

Campaigns Exploit "Eternal City"

Varied Angles Played Up on Film

ACE BERRY, Manager of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, saw to it on "The Eternal City" that students of Roman history were given their chance in the contest which was tied up with the Indianapolis Times. Because "The Eternal City" is noteworthy for its shots of historical places around Rome, stills showin gscenes like the Coliseum were reproduced each day for a week or more. The Times readers were asked to identify these pictures and tell what part each scene had played in Roman history. Fifty dollars was awarded the writer of the best essay.

The association of names having a publicity value helped the idea. The judges were: Mrs. William O. Bates, for many years identified with the Little Theatre movement in Indianapolis; Meredith Nicholson, the well known novelist and Test Dalton playwright and novelist.

With a few changes the successful campaign on "The Eternal City" at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, was duplicated when the picture played the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago.

In the Indianapolis metropolis, Manager Ace Berry, assisted by Irwin Franklin of the offices of Sam Goldwyn (not now connected with Goldwyn Pictures), used 146 twenty-four sheets as the leads for a generous paper campaign. The work was carried along educational lines through the newspapers as the result of stories which pointed out that it took 23,000 men 79 years to build one set for "The Eternal City."

Italian Heralds Issued

The Chicago campaign was worked with the co-operation of the Chicago American. A tie-up was made through the song "Eternal City of Dreams" which was played by Ted Fioritto's band at the exclusive Edgewater Beach Hotel. Department store tie-ups were made because the publishers of the song also ran the music department of that store and Fioritto came and played the song there.

LONDON "HUNCHBACK" DISPLAY STUNTS

These cut outs, mounted on tin, were used at the Empire theatre, London, on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (Universal).

Through the courtesy of Rothacker, a big window display was put in Hillmar's Store demonstrating "How Motion Pictures Are Made". As is the case with the demonstration of telephone operation, the different technical devices that help produce pictures were put on display and explained by cards. "The Eternal City" was used to exemplify the points and the novel idea aroused huge interest for the current attraction at the Roosevelt.

Appeal to Italian immigrants spelled business for "The Eternal City" at the Strand theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y. Ten thousand heralds on the picture, printed in Italian, were distributed around the foreign residence district.

A. C. Hayman, president of the Cataract Theatres corporation, declares that the idea was so helpful in drawing a class of patronage to which an appeal can be made only on special occasions that he is passing it on for use by any other theatre manager who has a large foreign element in his city.

Traffic Stunts Feature of "Drivin' Fool" Campaign

The theatre management, aided by R. C. Gary, Hodkinson exploitation man, put over an unusually extensive exploitation campaign for "The Drivin' Fool" when it was recently shown at the Orpheum theatre at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

He persuaded Mayor Hosey to start a campaign against fast driving to which all the newspapers devoted much space. The Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette carried a full page headline and a half column editorial on the subject. Mr. Gary secured a special permit from the Mayor and Chief of police to tie warning signs on the city's electric art posts. Two thousand cards admonishing the public against being a "Drivin' Fool" were posted five days before the opening of the picture. This was the first time that a permit was granted against the city ordinance forbidding the use of the posts for commercial purposes.

Another "flash" of the campaign was a tie-up with a taxi-cab company. Three hundred cabs carried stickers on their windshields stating "This car is driven by a safe and sane driver and not by 'The Drivin' Fool.'" Three hundred wheel tags were tied to the wheels of parked automobiles.

APPROPRIATE LOBBY DISPLAY FOR THE NORTHWEST PREMIER SHOWING OF "UNSEEING EYES"

Manager Beelman of the Rialto theatre, Wenatchee, Wash. dressed his lobby attractively for the run of "Unseeing Eyes" (Cosmopolitan) as here shown.

Strong Campaign in London for "If Winter Comes"

The English premiere of "If Winter Comes" was held at the Palace Theatre, London, where an extensive exploitation campaign was launched.

Special motion picture editions of the book and the song were issued during the London run of "If Winter Comes." An intensive advertising campaign in all the daily and weekly papers and in many of the weekly reviews brought the title of the picture to the attention of every Londoner. In addition to the billing which included the entire suburban districts, sandwich men paraded the streets and window cards were on view in clubs, stations, libraries, store windows, hotels and restaurants throughout the city.

The prologue at the Palace Theatre consisted of a beautiful stage setting of an English landscape. As the vocalist, who was invisible, sang the song "If Winter Comes," the scene gradually changed from Summer to Autumn then to Winter and finally to Spring. This was accomplished by means of transparent screens, cleverly illuminated by special lighting.

Coogan Resemblance Stunt Tied Up With Schools

"Long Live the King" played the Hippodrome theatre in Waco, Texas, recently, and Manager Harrison of the Hippodrome and W. G. Bishop, Metro exploiteer, put over the following campaign:

Each school agreed to select a child who resembled Jackie as closely as possible and to submit him as a contestant for a prize to be awarded by Waco's most prominent jurist, Judge Ritchey, of the Supreme Court, and Charles Braun, Manager of the Waco Chamber of Commerce, acting in behalf of the theatre that had announced prizes ranging from a first of $25 in gold and down the list, so that each school would be sure of capturing some prize.

Principals of all schools agreed to give "Long Live the King" publicity in their schools, and in several cases Bishop was asked and did address the whole body of children.

The newspapers were pleased that the contest was tied up with the schools and gave the stunt columns of publicity.

"FLAMING YOUTH" MARQUEE FRAME
Manager C. K. Rice at the Auditorium, Winston Salem, N. C., built up this display on "Flaming Youth" (First Nat'l).

"Ponjola" Stunt Is Pulled Before Immense Crowd

When "Ponjola" opened at the Olympia theatre, Boston, an exploitation campaign was put over by the theatre and Jack Pegler, First National exploitation man, that brought the picture before the attention of virtually every Bostonian.

The method was simple. A banner 30 feet long, carried by four boys, was borne around the Braves field between halves of the Brown-Dartmouth football game where 35,000 people were gathered. Another crowd watching the Boston game at the Red Sox field saw a similar banner. The next day, Sunday, a banner was carried between the halves of the Weymouth-Marquette game. One hundred thousand people were estimated to have seen the "Ponjola" sign at these two games.

At the same time the accessories consisted of 50 twenty-four-sheets, 500 one-sheets and 500 two-sheets. Seven hundred and fifty window cards were tacked.

For the especial benefit of motorists 20,000 traffic maps were distributed reading: "All Roads Lead to Ponjola at Gordon's Washington Street Olympia." The map, printed in black on green, covered the part of the city leading to the Olympia theatre which was designated on the squares.

Impressive Prologue Given with "Hunchback" Run

In several of the cities where "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" has played, original prologues have been devised, but, it is said, none of them surpass in appropriateness and beauty, the prologue originated, written and played by Frank G. King, manager of the Community Playhouse, Meriden, Conn.

Mr. King was formerly a producer, besides being an actor and singer of unusual ability. When he saw the production of "The Hunchback" in New York, and booked it for the Community, he felt impelled to arrange an original prologue, artistically consistent with the production yet different from any that had yet been presented, which is described as follows:

Drop in One, black if possible, which drapes up each side of center, large bronze bell, hung so that it will swing, hanging exact center in One and a half. Picture screen up stage with black curtain hanging in front masking screen entirely. Prologue opens in profound silence and darkness. Every light in house including exits must be out at the end of the regular orchestral overture. Start of prologue. Bell heard tolling. Draped drop in One slowly opens showing bell slowly swinging. Green baby spot from batten near bell falls on bell very faintly. After about six or eight tolls reciter who deliver prologue lines enters through cut in the back drape drop, dressed as Dom Claude in white Dominican monk's garb. Reciter comes down center to edge of front drop where he stops. Faint amber spot from above covers him. Bell stops tolling and reciter, with dramatic emphasis, recites a dramatic foreword.

As the reciter exits draped drop closes. Choral effects on Victro'a heard back of screen—singing Mozart's "Gloria" from Twelfth Mass. Bell on stage and draped drop are taken away into flies. Picture opens with exterior of Cathedral shown on black background for a second or two. Black background is taken away leaving picture on proper screen. Victrola still continues to play during interior scene in Cathedral at end of which orchestra lights are thrown on—Victrola stops—and the regular musical score follows.

CONVERTING THE THEATRE FRONT INTO A SIDESHOW, BANNERS AND ALL, FOR "CIRCUS DAYS"

Stunt on "Potash and Perlmutter"

Window Showing of Trailer in London During Run Evokes Unusual Interest

WHEN "Potash and Perlmutter" opened its London run at the Marble Arch Pavilion, an intensive exploitation campaign was put over, marked by two outstanding features, a tie-up with Selfridge's department store and a parade of 50 sandwich men.

Selfridge's is the department store of London. Thousands of shoppers and passersby were attracted to its windows when one of them suddenly disclosed, behind parted curtains, projection machine and a screen that flashed scenes from "Potash and Perlmutter."

Daylight and night time showings both were given. About 300 feet of film were used showing, mostly, the fashion models used in the pictures, giving an idea of some of the lavish display of gowns shown in the film and building up prospective trade for the store.

The idea was originally arranged between Ralph J. Pugh, managing director of Associated First National in England and Messrs. Selfridge's and the details were worked out by Horace Judge, First National's publicity director with his assistant George King and H. Seak, representing Selfridge's. A full sized projector was used, together with a special daylight screen during the noon hours. To avoid a blocking of traffic and possible interference by the police screenings were arranged at intervals of every ten minutes, the film itself taking three minutes to run.

Each screening would see a new crowd gathered before the window to take in the show.

Despite these precautions, however, the crowds became so great that on Thursday of the week the police asked Messrs. Selfridge to desist from this particular form of exploitation.

Originally the screening had been planned for a projection within the shallow depth of an ordinary window but in the last few days some alterations to the front of the store made it possible to get a larger window front and a longer throw. A platform was erected at window level, placed on pillars put in the excavation and the booth, projector and other paraphernalia were placed on it.

A five foot running electric sign on the street across the way from Selfridge's advertised the screening while a parade of 50 sandwich men did the same function in other sections of the city.

The physical details were carried out by the Kinematograph Equipment Company, represented by Sydney Bernstein and H. Tyrie and by Horace Oakenfold of First National's technical staff.

Map Worked into Lobby for "The Drivin' Fool"

When "The Drivin' Fool" played at Ascher's Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., R. C. Gary, Hodkinson exploitation man, aided Roy McMullen, manager of the theatre, in putting over some fine exploitation stunts.

One of the most novel of these was a lobby display made of comp board. It represented a map of the United States and was cut across horizontally leaving a small space between the fore and back ground. A platform was built in this space so that a toy auto could travel across the map. Hooked to this auto was a bicycle chain which was propelled by a motor.

A large billboard located in one of the best spots in Milwaukee was specially secured for the picture and a wrecked car was used for a ballyhoo.

Unique "Flaming Youth" Display

Brilliantly Decorated Lobbies Are Feature of Campaign on Photoplay

LIKE many other managers who have played "Flaming Youth," Manager Earle D. Wilson of Gordon's Olympia, New Bedford, Mass., worked out an elaborately decorated lobby display for the showing.

Two gross of bright, vari-colored balloons were used. These were effectively tied in clusters and separately to the green streamers that hung from the chandeliers in and around the inner an douter lobbies of the theatre. The result was striking. Balloons were also tied in bunches to every available spot in the lobbies and along the stairways, interspersed with gaily festooned streamers, one-sheet, three-sheets and specially drawn posters adorned every possible inch of the outer lobby and marquee.

Above the marquee, Mr. Wilson placed two immense cloth signs, forming a large V, pointed towards the street. Along the tops of these, red crepe paper cut to represent flaring flames, were attached. They were kept in constant flaming motion by two high-powered electric fans. At night, red fire was burned behind the signs, giving a startling effect that was visible almost the entire length of the city's main thoroughfare.

Silhouette Shadow Box

The guests of the Fentriss garden party got a dry swim in the window of the Owl Drug Store in San Francisco when "Flaming Youth" played Loew's State theatre. A silhouette shadow stage was arranged in the window. The title of the picture was lettered in distinctive outlines. The bathing figures were painted in on the sombre back drop.

The attention the display attracted had been bolstered up by advance reviews on the book and the picture.

The tie-up with the Owl Drug company was cemented by other window displays. The Colleen Moore perfume tale came in for considerable publicity as an honor to the featured player and the drug company used this as a further motive for giving "Flaming Youth" every kind of a break.

Police Extra Issued

The police extra worked well for the Majestic theater, Bridgeport, Conn., on the showing of "Flaming Youth." Manager E. A. Lund, who has been performing some admirable exploitation in the six weeks since his accession to the job, obtained the co-operation of the Bridgeport Star.

The police extra was issued with large red type across the front page. The paper was folded in half so that only the top part was visible at first glance, reading: "Police Reserves Called to Quell Mob Trying to Get."

The bottom, when revealed, read: "Into the Majestic theatre to see 'Flaming Youth.'"

Pennants Spell Out Title of "Ashes of Vengeance"

Manager H. B. Clarke of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., contributes a bit of novelty with his decorative scheme on "Ashes of Vengeance." Above the lobby entrance the title was spelled out in pennants, each pennant bearing a little of the title.

On the lobby floor a cut-out display was arranged with Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle as the centerpiece of a fleur-de-lys lobby stand. At each side an armed knight stood guard over the lovers.

Chicago Tobacco Shops Aid "Name the Man" Showing

A tie-up was effected by the Goldwyn Cosmospolitan exploitation department with all of the United Cigar Stores in Chicago for the showing of "Name the Man!" which played at Balaban & Katz's Chicago Theatre.

The tie-up was made directly with the English Ovals cigarettes. A window card, 12 x 34 inches was prepared in cooperation with the Chicago representatives of the cigarette manufacturers and of the United Cigar Store Company, and this was placed in the windows of tobacco stores throughout the city.

The card was printed in red and black on straw colored paper. It contained a picture of Conrad Nagel smoking a cigarette and a picture of Mae Busch. At the top of the card was printed in red type "Girls!" followed by, "The gift that always wins his heart is a carton of English Ovals cigarettes. You just 'Name the Man' to the clerk at this United Cigar Store and he will do the rest. Then go and see Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Patsy Ruth Miller in 'Name the Man!' the exciting love drama from the pen of Sir Hall Caine presented in a gorgeous program of original stage and musical gems."

Large Cut-outs Feature of "Jealous Husbands" Front

Manager Lacey of the Majestic theater, Portland, Ore., scored through the use of large cut-outs in his exploitation of "Jealous Husbands."

At the entrance to the theater a cut-out head of Earle Williams dominated the approaches. It was supplemented by a joint cut-out of the same actor with Jane Novak in the mother role.

Along the lobby on the interior a straight line of leading characters featured the photographic display. Ben Alexander, by virtue of his prominence, occupied the position nearest the entrance, and was followed in order named by Jane Novak, Earle Williams and Carmelita Geraghty.

Bookstore Hook-ups Boost "Palace of the King"

Many of the bigger book shops in Chicago were tied up in the exploitation of "In the Palace of the King" for its run at Balaban & Katz' Roosevelt theatre in Chicago.

Window displays of the photoplay edition of the novel, together with stills, portrait enlargements and a special half-sheet window card were displayed in a score of book shops.

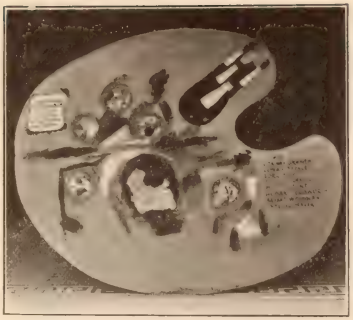
Tie-Ups With Navy Feature "Silent Command" Drive



A number of special tie-ups with the U. S. Navy authorities were used to excellent advantage by Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia theatre, Seattle, in arranging his exploitation on "The Silent Command," recently.

For a week before the engagment, and all during the run, Mr. Bender arranged with the authorities for the use of more than fifty "A" boards, the property of the Navy, on all of the downtown streets in the city. Several types of 1-sheets on the picture were displayed on these boards, which did not fail to attract their due amount of attention.

When the time for the engagment came, sailors under the direction of Naval officers decorated the entire front and lobby of the theatre with flags, pennants, banners and other apparatus peculiar to navy life. Decorations in the foyer of the house were carried out in the same general tone. All cutouts, cards and decorative matter in the lobby was made in the shape of naval life-preservers, with the official emblems prominently displayed, and the same tactics were used by Mr. Bender in the newspaper advertising done by the theatre that week.

An attractive display board, with actual photographs of U. S. Navy life, cruises and activities, loaned and arranged by the Naval department, was displayed in front of the theatre to good advantage. Similar displays, on a smaller scale, were used by a number of the large stores in the main business district of the town in their windows, where they also proved a source of interest and good advertising for passers-by.

Special advertising and publicity was used in the sections of town where sailors are known to congregate, and the docks of this city and the U. S. yards at Bremerton, only a few miles distant, were especially well covered in Mr. Bender's campaign.

APPROPRIATE "COMMON LAW" DISPLAY

T. L. Shields, manager of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., was responsible for this display on "The Common Law," (Selznick)

Novel Street Car Front for "Conductor 1492" Run

A lobby display that appealed to both eye and ear was used by Manager Dan Burgum in putting over "Conductor 1492" at the Rialto theatre in Des Moines recently.

Manager Burgum had an art display of a street car filled with passengers built across the front of the lobby. Entance to the lobby was gained through the doors of the trolley car and every time the door of the trolley car opened it sounded a loud gong similar to that used on real street cars. The car flash in the lobby resembled closely the car used in the picture. While the display itself was a puller, coupled with the clanging of the gong it made a real flash. The novelty of seeing a display street car with a gong that really sounded every time the door was opened proved a tie-up with the picture that kept the theatre before the public.

Manager Burgum used a tie-up that was good for both newspaper and word of mouth publicity by offering a free pass to all street car men in uniform the first part of the week. The Des Moines League for the Hard of Hearing were also given free admission and Burgum obtained considerable newspaper space on the strength of this party through feature stories giving the lip readers' version of what the various characters in the picture said in the various scenes. A morning party for children readers of the Evening Tribune was also good for space in the news columns.

"Rupert of Hentzau" Lobby Done by McFarland

In the issue of February 9, on Page 637, appeared an attractive lobby display on "Rupert of Hentzau," of unique design.

This was credited to the Queen theater at Dallas. It now develops that this should have been credited to the Queen theater, Houston, where the display was arranged by Manager Charles A. McFarland.

THE FRONT OF AN AMERICAN EXPLOITEER ARRANGED IN LONDON FOR "THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME"

This elaborate front on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (Universal) was arranged by Marc Lachmann, who went to London to exploit the showing at the Empire theatre.

Stunts Used on "The Hunchback"

Wichita Falls and Pittsfield Drives; Tie-ups Made with Local Associations

AN effective and comprehensive campaign on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was put over by the management of the Palace theatre, Wichita Falls, Texas, aided by C. J. Meredith, "Hunchback" exploiteer.

His first step was to obtain the co-operation and support of the Catholic clergy. By explaining to the local priests that the production contained nothing objectionable from the Roman Catholic viewpoint, Meredith was able to have the priests announce the fact from their pulpits on Sunday. The same result was obtained with the Knights of Columbus, whose support aided the run considerably.

A concession was made to all civic clubs to attend in a body of twenty-five or more. A reduction of twenty-five cents was made on each matinee ticket (Saturday excepted) sold to these groups.

Arrangements were made with the stage line drivers and Red Top Taxi Company to carry banners on the backs of their cars. One thousand post cards were mailed over the rural routes out of Wichita Falls announcing the engagement. Ten one-sheets and twenty-five half sheets were placed on all Army recruiting boards.

A special screening, to which leading club women were invited, secured the endorsement of those ladies, which was incorporated into a Sunday story. Through meeting these women Meredith was invited to attend two club meetings, where he spoke on the construction of the Cathedral set and Chaney's make-up.

Bulletin Boards Utilized

Arriving in Pittsfield, Mass., a week in advance of the showing of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Colonial theatre, Richard Weil of the Universal office in New York, co-operated with Charles W. Powell, the manager in putting over a strong campaign.

The Army and Navy recruiting stations and the Y. M. C. A. gave the courtesy of space on their bulletin boards, which are located in all parts of the city. A dozen stores carried special cards in their windows headed "Good Things To Know," besides listing their own wares each store listed "The Hunchback" among the good things. Mr. Weil addressed the members of the Rotary Club on the same program with Harry Lauder. He also addressed the local Kiwanis and several women's clubs. He also attended each performance at the Palace theatre, a vaudeville house and ballyhooed the picture from the stage, thereby reaching an audience that doesn't often get to the picture houses. Special shows were arranged for prominent public and social and professional people as well as for the school children.

Nautical Scene Over Lobby on "Anna Christie"

Painted seas against a background of faces helped put "Anna Christie" on the map in the lobby of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Oregon.

The body of the lobby was left untouched except for the framed photographs of Blanche Sweet in the girl-of-the-streets title role. Above the lobby entrance, however, a full width painted panel gave an inkling of the picture's atmosphere. This was a sea drop with a striped shield in the center bearing the title of the picture and small emblems at each lower side carrying out the idea.

The ribbed letters of the title formed a neat display, in pleasing contrast to the ordinary heavy lettering of titles, that is noteworthy.

BEHRENS "WAY OF A MAN" DISPLAY
This attractive display of cut-outs and artwork was prepared by Manager Chris Behrens of the Family theatre, Davenport, Iowa, on "The Way of a Man" (Pathe)

Personal Letter Stunt Is Used on "Virginian"

Conrad Gabriel, manager of the Garden theatre, Garden City, Kans., put over a circular letter stunt to exploit "The Virginian."

Ten days in advance of the picture's engagement at that house, a thousand letters, written on Preferred Pictures letter-heads, were mailed from New York City to the theatre's mailing list. These were signed by Kenneth Harlan and Florence Vidor, whose names head the cast. The letter read:

Dear Friend.—We know that you have read Owen Wister's wonderful story, "The Virginian," and that you have probably seen the play.

The Preferred Pictures Corporation have honored us with the leading parts, I as the Virginian and my co-star Miss Vidor as Molly, in the motion picture production of this noted story.

We hope that we have done justice to these great characters, and we would appreciate an expression of a frank and honest opinion from you. If you will write us a note direct, or care of the manager of the Garden Theatre of your city, he will relay your letter to us and it will help us greatly in future roles.

Thanks in advance. (Signed) Kenneth Harlan. (Signed) Florence Vidor. P. S. Photoplay to be presented by the Garden Theatre, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, January 24, 25, and 26th.

Personal Card Stunt Used to Aid "The Wanters"

Joel Levy, manager of the Capitol theatre, Reading, Pa., created quite a sensation in that city during the showing of "The Wanters." He secured the services of two stylish, vampish girls to stroll about the city giving out what looked like the personal card of Marie Provost.

It had on it the name and address of the screen star, and written across the corner the following: "I am a 'wanter.' Meet me at Capitol theatre." One girl worked one day giving out the cards and on alternating days the other girl handed out heralds made up in the form to resemble a blottter, such as is commonly used on every desk.

Leading Citizens' Opinions Exploit "Scaramouche"

In connection with the engagement of "Scaramouche" at the Garrick theatre, Minneapolis, Morris Abrams, Metro's exploitation representative in that territory, has succeeded in getting popular approval of the production in a very simple and effective manner.

To each prominent man and woman in Minneapolis, Abrams sent a card addressed back to the theatre, asking in brief their opinion of "Scaramouche." The card was sent with a letter and a free admission for two to the Garrick. In this way nearly every card was returned with comments since those who used the pass felt beholden to comply with the courteous request for their opinions. Abrams did the same thing for the St. Paul engagement.

The following day the comments were used in big newspaper broadsides, and the names of all these prominent people attached in praise of "Scaramouche" contributed in no small degree to the publicity on the "Scaramouche" engagements.

"Flaming Youth" is Given Strong Advance Stunt

A striking advance campaign was given "Flaming Youth" by Manager Willard Patterson of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, who declares that the direct value of exploitation was conclusively demonstrated by the large number of personal and telephone inquiries about the showing which followed.

The exploitation was featured by the strength with which the usual angles were cared for rather than by any novelties. The theatre tied up with its publicity opportunities is that it booked the picture for the same time that Colleen Moore, featured player of "Flaming Youth" and her husband John McCormick, First National's West Coast business representative, were going through the city. Both had a claim to being native Atlantans, having lived there at some time. This angle, coupled with Miss Moore's place in the picture, gave the newspapers their chance and they used up column after column. The reception committee numbered more than a hundred names and Manager Patterson saw to it that every name got in the papers.

Another typical angle of the campaign was the silhouette figure of the dancing "Flaming Youth" painted on the huge sign hung on the theatre building. This was an outline drawing, realistic and somewhat bold. Manager Patterson thought it free from objectionable features. At the same time he had an alternative all planned. If the sanctimonious ones acted according to form, got up on their hind legs and balked at the artistic novelty he was ready to override their objections. His plan was to take Eve's prototype, paint a calico draping over her and let it stand.

The sign measured a little over 17 feet deep and 53 feet long. The background of orange, with a shade of vermilion made a vivid contrast to the flame red lettering. The silhouette figure was done in black.

"ASHES OF VENGEANCE" MARQUEE

Towering display on the marquee of the Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo., on "Ashes of Vengeance" (First Nat'l).

Puzzle Stunt Effective on "Strangers of Night"

The 300 members of the Rotary club of Houston, Texas, who meet for their weekly luncheon at the Rice hotel and those advertising agents of Oklahoma City who style themselves The Pirates are still talking about the free luncheons they missed and the "E" puzzle they failed to solve.

Both these events, though far apart, were arranged by W. G. Bishop, Metro's exploitation representative in the Southwest, in connection with the presentation in those two cities of "The Eternal Struggle."

The "E" puzzle is one of the exploitation novelties that Metro has incorporated in its press sheet on this production. When the scattered bits are put together they form the letter "E" and the struggle which one undergoes to put it together sets the tie-up for the production. Bishop, through M. McFarland, manager of the Queens theatre in Houston, where "The Eternal Struggle" was to be shown, arranged to give each member of the Rotary club a free luncheon if he solved the puzzle. Each man in the huge dining room of the Rice hotel was given a puzzle and that day dinners were neglected—and the puzzle remained unsolved when time to return to the offices came.

The Pirates were no more successful. In both cities the stunt aroused a great deal of comment as the puzzles were carried back to office and home and that night there were many fireside groups with head bent together over "The Eternal Struggle."

Unique Ballyhoo on Truck Exploits "Three Ages"

A huge beaver-board ball, painted to represent the world and carrying on each side the legend, "The Whole World Will Laugh at Buster Keaton's New Photoplay, 'Three Ages,'" was mounted on an automobile truck and ballyhooed up and down the streets of York, Pa., for the Jackson theatre, where the feature length comedy played recently.

The Ballyhoo was devised by Frank Barry, manager of the Jackson theatre and Jay Emmanuel, Metro exploiter in that territory.

TEASER LOBBY DISPLAY USED BY MANAGER HART TO AWAKEN INTEREST IN "THE DRIVIN' FOOL"

These two photos show the lobby stunt used by J. M. Edgar Hart at the Unique theatre, El Paso, on "The Drivin' Fool" (Hodkinson). The theatre changed hands, so this "blind" front was used for three days, after which the display was opened up.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Offers Ten Short Subjects

Program Released Week Beginning March 2 Provides Fourteen Reels

DIVERSITY of short subject entertainment comprising ten subjects with an aggregate of fourteen reels is made available to exhibitors by Pathe for the week of March 2.

Will Rogers is featured in "The Cake Eater," a two-reel comedy, in which the cowboy comedian is ardently pursued by two romantic spinsters much to the delight of the rest of the boys on the ranch.

"Smile Please" is the second of the Mack Sennett-Harry Langdon series of two-reel comedies for Pathe. The action is laid for the most part in a photographic gallery where Langdon officiates as a cameraman. Alberta Vaughn, Jack Cooper, Madeline Hurlock, Tiny Ward and Jackie Lucas appear in the support.

"The White Man Who Turned Indian" is the third of the "Indian Frontier Series" and presents the story of a white boy who became a member of the Arapahoe tribe under dramatic circumstances.

The story is adapted to the screen from an account of the incident as related by Chief Yellow Horse of the Arapahoes and is described by Pathe as a short-subject drama of thrilling sequences and convincing atmosphere.

In "Hard Knocks," a one-reel Hal Roach comedy, starring Charles Chase the hero is invited to attend a birthday party and causes a furor by arriving at the formal function dressed up in riding togs. The social error is committed as the result of the villain of the piece convincing the hero that the "R.S. V.P." means "Riding Suits Very Proper."

"Herman, the Great Mouse," the Aesop Film Fable number, presents the cartoonist's humorous conception of what might happen in Jungleland if a magician started practicing his mystifying tricks on the populace.

The seventh chapter of the current Pathe-serial release. "The Way of a Man," is titled "Gold! Gold!"

Pathe Review No. 9; Topics of The Day No. 9 and the regular two Pathe News reels complete the heavy week's schedule.

Kinograms Films White, the Radio Speaker

Educational considers that the popular reception of the views taken by Kinograms, Educational's News Reel, of the interior of the Chicago Edgewater Beach Hotel radio station W J A Z, was so great, that the current issue of this news reel contains pictures of one of the best known radio speakers in the United States J. Andrew White, who speaks regularly from the Radio Corporation station W J Z, New York.

Mr. White gained radio fame when he broadcast the blow-by-blow description of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight at Jersey City. He has also given vivid descriptions by radio from the ringside of many championship fights held in New York.

Rudolph Valentino and Carmel Myers are shown in this two-reel re-edited society drama "A Society Sensation," re-issued by Universal

"Busy Buddies" is the latest Educational-Christie Comedy featuring Neal Burns and Vera Steadman

Fifth of Telephone Girl Series is Produced

F. B. O.'s new H. C. Witwer series, "The Telephone Girl," based on the author's stories current in Cosmopolitan Magazine, are progressing rapidly at the F. B. O. Hollywood studios under the direction of Mal St. Clair.

He is now at work on spisode five which is titled "King Leary." Albert Vaughn again is in the lead and Arthur Rankin plays opposite.

There will be 12 episodes in the first series with a likelihood of 12 others to follow.

Will Rogers Series for Rothschild Circuit

Will Rogers' series of two-reel comedies for Pathe have been booked by the Rothschild Theatre circuit on the West Coast. This engagement assures the presentation of the Will Rogers comedies at the California or the Granada, two first-run houses in San Francisco.

The current group of comedies, starring Will Rogers, includes "Jus' Passin' Through," "Hustlin' Hank," "Uncensored Movies", "Two Wagons — Both Covered," and "The Cowboy Sheik."

"The Cake Eater", another number in the series, will be made available on March 2nd.

Screen Snapshots No. 12 Released by C. B. C.

Marion Davies and Rudolph Valentino being crowned Queen and King of Filmdom at the Theatre Owners' Ball, appear in the current Screen Snapshots.

Also in this subject are Fannie Brice, Eddie Cantor, Paul Whiteman, Ann Pennington, and the Tiller girls.

Another unusual feature of the reel is a visit to Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, with the boys of the American Legion.

Commodore Stuart Blackton, and his children; T. Hayes Hunter, directing Eugenie Besserer and George Hackathorne in a new picture; Dorothy Phillips as guest of honor at the breaking of ground for a monument to dead Presidents; Will Rogers talking over old days on Broadway with Willie and Eugene Howard, and Ben Turpin and a group of bathing beauties shown in slow motion are additional features.

Two Pathe Comedies for Loew's N. Y. Circuit

The new "Our Gang" comedy release, "Tire Trouble," and the first of the Mack Sennett-Harry Langdon comedy series for Pathe, titled "Picking Peaches," have been booked by Marcus Loew for presentation in the Loew Theatres throughout Greater New York.

Booking of these two Pathe comedies by the Loew management followed their presentation on Broadway recently.

"Tire Trouble" appeared on the program of the Mark Strand theatre during the week of January 27th, while "Picking Peaches" was presented at the Central.

These scenes are from the fourth of the Telephone Girl Series, "Money To Burn," featuring Alberta Vaughn, based on H. C. Witwer stories and distributed by F. B. O.

Pathe News Shows Lenin's Funeral

Views Shown on Broadway Screens February 10 — Cameraman in Prison

PATHE News issue No. 13, depicts the last demonstration of homage paid the founder of the Soviet Republic.

There are views of the hundreds of thousands swarming through the snow-covered streets and the great Red Square in Moscow, the cordons of Soviet troops vainly striving to preserve some semblance of order among the surging masses, the bon-fires at which thousands pause to seek temporary relief for their numbed limbs from the merciless cold, the resting place of Lenin beneath the Kremlin wall, and the endless streams of mourners passing before the bier in final tribute to their departed leader.

Prior to the funeral, the Soviet authorities posted strict prohibitions against the use of cameras during the obsequies. Hundreds of thousands crowded the Moscow streets intent on paying their last tribute of respect to the departed leader.

In the press of this huge throng the operation of a motion picture camera would have proved an arduous task even if all other circumstances were favorable.

However, with a temperature of 35 degrees below zero numbing the fingers into almost utter inactivity and thousands of Red police and soldiers alert and ready to pounce upon anybody displaying a camera on his person, the obstacles presented were well nigh insurmountable.

Despite these difficulties, however, John Dored, Pathe News cameraman, succeeded in filming about 2,000 feet of the funeral scenes before he was detected by the Soviet police and placed under arrest, according to a news dispatch from Paris. The press report declares that Dored managed to get 600 feet of the film into the hands of a courier just before his seizure. It is these views, smuggled across the Russian border, that appear in the current Pathe News issue.

Pathe has cabled the Russian Foreign Ministry with a view to secure Dored's release, and has also appealed to the good offices of the Russian envoy in England and the unofficial Russian envoy at Washington for the same purpose. Representations have also been addressed to the United States representative in Latvia looking to the cameraman's release.

Pleads for More Short Comedies on Bill

A plea for more short comedies on the programs of big houses is contained in the review of the program at Clune's Broadway, written by Grace Kingsley in the February 11, Los Angeles Times.

"What a relief these bits of nonsense are after the heavy emotion of the feature" Miss Kingsley writes after her review of the Christie Comedy, "Fool Proof" with Neal Burns. "Why don't the larger houses follow the common sense plan of putting in a snappy two-reel joy-pager, instead of their everlasting grand opera?"

"It is always a joy to go to Clune's. You don't have to watch any second rate steppers prance, any third-rate singers warble nor get a crick in the neck looking up at the high-brow grand opera tabloids."

Two Educational Series are "Exceptional"

EDUCATIONAL Pictures, "The Secrets of Life" and the first four releases of the 1924 series of Bruce Wilderness Tales, are listed as Exceptional Pictures in the current issue of "Exceptional Photoplays" issued by the National Board of Review.

"These (The Secrets of Life) are truly remarkable pictures" says the review of these subjects in the National Board's Pamphlet; not only extremely instructive in the visual presentation of their subjects, but also entertaining to a degree which makes them compete with the best entertainment on the screen today."

The listing of the Bruce Wilderness Tales marks the third time these outdoor dramas have won this distinction from the National Board.

Prize Essay Contest for "Jamestown" Chronicle

A prize essay contest sponsored by C. Floyd Hopkins of the Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., boomed the theatre's showing of Pathe's Chronicle of America picture entitled "Jamestown."

In this novel bit of exploitation Mr. Hopkins received the wholehearted cooperation of the Harrisburg Telegraph.

The contest was declared open to all High School boys and girls, and a special admission price of ten cents was adopted for school children during the entire week that "Jamestown" was shown.

This resulted in a large juvenile attendance.

"The Lady Barber" Is New Harry Langdon Comedy

Harry Langdon is busy at the Mack Sennett studio on his next comedy for Pathe, which will be known as "The Lady Barber."

And now we have Will Rogers in "The Cake Eater," a Two Reel Hal Roach comedy for Pathe distribution

"Riddle Rider" Completed by Universal

WILLIAM DESMOND and Eileen Sedgwick are the co-stars in "The Riddle Rider," the fifteen espisode serial just finished by Director William Craft for Universal.

It is described as a thrilling story of the modern West with the oil derrick invading the land of the cattlemen and Desmond plays the mysterious title role.

Besides the two stars the cast includes Helen Holmes, Claude Payton, William H. Gould, Hughie Mack, Yakima Canutt, Albert J. Smith and Margaret Royce.

Harry McCoy in First Starring Vehicle

Under the direction of Noel Smith, Harry McCoy is appearing in "Stranded," the first Century Comedy in which he solely is starred. The picture is being made from one of the European stories Century's vice president, Abe Stern, brought back with him.

Among those who have already been engaged for important parts are Betty Young, McCoy's leading lady; "Fatty" Karr, erstwhile Fox star; Al Alt, who recently joined Century's permanent stock company, and Herbert Sherwood.

Cinema Club Sponsoring Short Subject Programs

THE Cleveland Cinema Club, which has as its basic object, the promotion of the Better Film Movement, has launched something new in its Chautauqua Series of Educational Pictures. The plan advanced by the Cinema Club went into effect last Saturday at the Knickerbocker theatre on the East Side, and starts next Saturday at the Capital theatre on the West Side. Feeling the need of short reel educational pictures, and realizing that a continued program of short reel pictures is not practical in the picture houses, the Cinema Club offers an afternoon of educational subjects every other week for covering a period of five weeks.

The first program, shown last Saturday at the Knickerbocker theatre was composed of the following subjects: "Cecho-Slovakia," 2-reels; "The Bee," "Romance of the Republic," to be run as a series of two reels each. This program will be repeated next week at the Capitol theatre. Other pictures included in future programs are "Nanook of the North," "Wonders of the Sea," "The Cricket on the Hearth," "Trailing Wild Animals" and Will Rogers' satire, "Two Wagons — Both Covered."

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Uninvited Guest

(Metro—6145 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

In producing this feature, the Williamson brothers has injected a valuable novelty angle, in that many of the underwater scenes are in so-called natural color. We have had underwater pictures before, but not in color. The beauty of the tropical submarine vegetation, fish and coral formations must be seen to be appreciated. For some of the other color scenes, we cannot say as much. Having the greatest limitations of the two-color subtractive process, the absence of yellows in the blazing tropical sunlit scenes is noticeable, producing a rather unreal effect. When the players are in shadow, giving a bluish tinge to things, the coloring is much more natural.

However, despite these limitations, many of the scenes are extremely beautiful, and add greatly to the production.

The submarine scenes, themselves, are the dramatic highlight of the picture, embracing sharks, an octopus, and such useful melodramatic aids. The story is frank melodrama, dealing with the fortunes of a young girl cast away on an island, together with two professional gamblers, one of them a woman. A ne'er-do-well sponge diver rescues her from the island after the gamblers have deserted her, fights his brutish partner to protect her, and later helps her to establish her identity when the gambler's wife impersonates her.

The best part of the picture is that laid on the trophical island. When the castaways return to civilization, it becomes just another movie, but the island scenes lift the opus out of the beaten track.

The picture brings to the screen a new face, Jean Tolley, whose photographs have graced numerous advertisements, Happiness candy boxes, and the like. Her acting is still a bit immature, and she touches no great emotional heights, but she does very well for a first picture, is distinctly easy to look at, and her lithe, athletic grace makes her the ideal type for the part. Mary MacLaren does consistently good work as the gambler's wife. Lefty Flynn gives a first rate characterization as the sponge diver, and Louis Wolheim is a convincing brutal type.

Ralph Ince has directed the picture capably. We class this as first rate entertainment, well presented.

THEME. Melodrama laid in tropical setting, centering about a castaway heiress, her attempt to regain her own identity, and the reformation of a ne'er-do-well sponge diver.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fight between Wolheim and Flynn. The fight with the octopus. The burning of the ship. The underwater scenes in color. The pleasing work of Jean Tolley. Lefty Flynn's characterization of the sponge diver. Louis Wolheim in a typical "hairy ape" part. The pictorial beauty of the production.

DIRECTION. Has done well with the material, for the most part. Has kept the melodrama well within bounds and introduced several excellent touches.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The underwater scenes. The natural color scenes. Teasers along the line: "Who is the Uninvited Guest?" If there is a Happiness candy store in your town, tie-up on Miss Tolley's picture on each box of the candy. Also, your druggist may have Pepsodent tooth paste displays with her picture, which would offer a tie-up.

DRAWING POWER. Satisfactory for any sort of house.

SUMMARY. An interesting and rather well told story, with the principal novelty in the underwater scenes. Local color is good and the island scenes are consistently interesting.

THE CAST

Paul (Gin) Patterson ..... Maurice "Lefty" Flynn
Olive Granger ..... Jean Tolley
Irene Carlton ..... Mary McLaren
Fred Morgan ..... William N. Bailey
Jan Boomer ..... Louis Wolheim

By Curtis Benton. Directed by Ralph Ince. Produced by Submarine Film Corporation. Photographed by Jay Rescher and J. O. Taylor. Natural color scenes by Technicolor.

SYNOPSIS. Olive Granger, an heiress, is cast away on an island by a shipwreck, together with a gambler and his wife. They escape, taking her credentials. She is rescued by a sponge diver who protects her and eventually returns to her civilization and aids her in establishing her rightful identity.

Yolanda

(Cosmopolitan—Ten Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

GORGEOUS in its background, exceptionally rich in its pageantry—and carrying production values which give it a vivid ocular appeal, Marian Davies' new picture may be called a fitting successor to "When Knighthood Was In Flower." If it equals the previous canvas in the opulence of its settings—in massiveness and skilfulness of design, it also suggests that Charles Major was not so inspired here in fashioning a moving story—one free from obviousness. The interest lies in the spectacular effects—and in the interpretation, for the plot is scant of ideas.

We have come to expect great pictorial highlights in a Davies picture. And we have not been disappointed here. Lavish expenditure is written all over the production. Would that the story was big enough to fit the frame. We discover that the early reels drag because of so much characterization and incident to be planted—and if we lose contact with it in the sense that it fails to grip us, still we are caught in a tight embrace by the individual scenes.

As mentioned above the settings are immense—settings which are as magnificent as any that have ever been shown. In this respect it may be said to dwarf "Knighthood," which carried color, opulence and personality. The story is well scenarioized—and the direction is inspired in creating spectacular effects. Particularly fine is the shot of Burgundy's army arrayed against the French forces.

Miss Davies is resplendent in a dual role—and she never looked more appealing. Indeed she is perfectly cast—and gives a performance which substantiates the verdict that she has become an accomplished actress. Holbrook Blinn is every inch the king in a portrayal which stands out with cameo clearness. Every move is a picture—a highly symmetrical performance. Others who give well-rounded studies are Johnny Dooley as the Dauphin and Lyn Harding as the Duke of Burgundy. The scenic mounting, the costumes, the handling of the crowds—and the vital performances mentioned above make 'Yolanda" an outstanding picture. But its production values far outweigh its dramatic values.

THEME. Historical romance revolving around conflict between Burgundy and France during reign of Louis XI—the latter ambitious to marry his daughter to the idiot son.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The massive sets. The gorgeous backgrounds. The accurate atmosphere. The ocular appeal. The scene on the bridge. The clash between the two armies. The fine acting by Miss Davies, Mr. Blinn, Leon Errol, Mr. Harding, and Johnny Dooley.

DIRECTION. Has mounted it with a splendid scenic investiture. Handles players and crowds well. Composition of scenes carries fine pictorial value.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as a fitting sequence to "Knighthood." Exploit it in dignified manner. Put on atmospheric prologue. Mention the cast—and bill it as one of the most sumptuous productions of the screen.

DRAWING POWER. For first-run houses.

SUMMARY. A pictorial masterpiece which seems lacking in plot material so that the action drags until concluding reels. Individual shots fine—and so are the individual performances of the leading players. Gorgeously mounted and rich in atmosphere.

THE CAST

Princess Mary of Burgundy (Yolanda) ..... Marion Davies
Charles the Bold, Duke of Burdundy ..... Lyn Harding
King Louis XI ..... Holbrook Blinn
Bishop La Balue ..... Maclyn Arbuckle
The Dauphin, Charles, Duke of Paris ..... Johnny Dooley
Maximilian of Styria ..... Ralph Graves
Campo-Basso ..... Ian MacLaren
Olivier de Daim ..... Gustav von Seyffertitz
Queen Margaret ..... Theresa Maxwell Conover
Count Jules d'Hymbercourt ..... Paul McAllister
Innkeeper ..... Leon Errol
Antoinette Castleman ..... Mary Kennedy
Castleman ..... Thomas Findlay

By Charles Major. Adapted by Luther Reed. Directed by Robert G. Vignola. Settings by Joseph Urban.

SYNOPSIS—Historical romance of period in fifteenth century when Louis XI ruled France. The Duke of Burgundy is ambitious to marry his daughter off to the idiot dauphin, but she escapes and finds true romance with young prince traveling, incognito, in Switzerland. He finally rescues her from the monarch of France.

Ride For Your Life

(Universal—5310 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT may be that the program audiences who cater to wild and woolly westerns will enjoy this Hoot Gibson picture better than some of the humorous offerings in which he has starred in of late. To our way of thinking he is best in those semi-burlesques of westerns since he possesses a fine sense of comedy values. This number is the weakest one he has had in a long while—and it has the earmarks of being "shot" in a hurry. There is a suggestion that the company went out on location and were put through their paces as the director happened to think up some new incident.

The central character is an indolent rancher who is repulsed by the heroine because she has a high regard for a masked bandit. He has robbed the passengers of the stagecoach, but does not molest her beyond taking a ring for a keepsake. Meanwhile the conventional melodrama is being unfolded. There is a villain who holds a mortgage on the home of the girl, but he is willing to forget it if her father, the sheriff, is willing to have him for a son-in-law. There being a price on the bandit's head the incident features a pursuit by a posse. But the bad man stumbles into the hero's home and dies. No mention is made of the disposal of the body. But the idle rancher assumes the bandit's disguise to win the girl.

Then the story begins all over again—showing the villain as the power of a boom town. The gaps are noticeable in several instances. It is planted that the action is of a period long before prohibition. Yet they show an American Railway Express coach—which looks out of place with the stagecoaches and the old-fashioned attire of the heroine and villain. Again the hero is covered by the gambler's henchmen—and makes his escape and bobs up in his bandit's disguise. There was no indication that he lugged this outfit to the boom town.

The scenes are developed to make speed from the action, but there is no suspense because of the stereotyped incident. The finish brings the forces of law and order to the rescue—and the villain gets his punishment. There is no evidence of continuity—and the picture is below the average of its immediate forerunners.

THEME. Western melodrama based upon indolent rancher winning respect of girl by assuming disguise of bandit who has thrilled her with his courage. He rescues her from danger—and is instrumental in cleaning up community.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The tinting of the night scenes. The atmosphere. The speedy action. The gun-play in climax. The good work by Robert McKim as villain. The effective backgrounds.

DIRECTION. Hasn't much of an idea—and indications are director shot his scenes as they came to mind. Incident is entirely stereotyped—the character and plot being familiar. Several gaps are noticeable which emphasize lack of continuity. Best features are the backgrounds and atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Gibson has following. Tell them that star is seen in wild and woolly western. Feature cowboy quartet, etc. Play up Laura La Plante and Robert McKim as members of cast.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses.

SUMMARY. A sterotyped western which hasn't much direction in it. Is episodic and lacks suspense, though action is speedy enough. Finish seen far in advance. Conventional all the way. Not up to standard of Gibson's recent releases.

THE CAST

Bud Watkins	Hoot Gibson
Betsy Burke	Laura LaPlante
"Plug" Hanks	Harry Todd
"Gentleman Jim" Slade	Robert McKim
Dan Burke	Howard Truesdell
The Cocopah Kid	Fred Humes
Tim Murphy	Clark Comstock
Dan Donnegan	William Robert Daly
Mrs. Donnegan	Mrs. George Hernandez

By Johnston McCulley. Scenario by Raymond L. Schrock and E. Richard Schayer. Directed by Edward Sedgwick.

SYNOPSIS. Shiftless rancher is unable to inspire romance. The girl of his devotion is attracted to fearless bandit. When latter stumbles into his home—the rancher wins his confession before he dies. He assumes the bandit's disguise—and prevents the villian from compromising the girl. Assists the vigilantes in cleaning up community and destroying the power of the villain. Gets reward for capturing bandit.

Flowing Gold

(Tully-First National—8005 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH the tempest in the Tea Pot Dome oil scandal being given pitiless publicity it is quite apropos that the screen should reveal a melodrama framed against a Texas oil town. It is hokum but it is graphic in its outline—and there is enough conflict and atmosphere to entertain most anyone's attention if the picture was edited. Rex Beach, who fashioned this tale, has not written anything comparable to "The Spoilers." It is not as rugged as that melodrama framed against a gold boom in Alaska. In fact it is a jumpy picture which never draws you into its action and makes you an actual participant.

Characters and events develop too suddenly to appear convincing. For example the hero, a stranger, is represented as a "down-and-outer"—with just three cents to his name. Yet a jeweler trusts him with untold riches in gems which he disposes of to a family of nesters who have struck it wealthy in oil.

The hero is a dominant figure and he promotes a stock company and looks after the interests of the nesters. But the hokum comes to the surface and exposes the family as very movieish characters. They must ape the manners of society—and scenes are given up in showing them adopting fine feathers and what not. A good deal of the plot is developed through the captions. The hero is "out" to get the villain who has embarrassed him during the late war. The latter has a few early scenes and then fades into the background until the conclusion.

Several scenes could be eliminated which would condense the action and make it more convincing and less suggestive of comedy relief. It doesn't build well because of its abrupt incident. The finish is melodramatic but furnishes a thrill when the heroine rescues the saviour of her family from death during a storm. The lightning strikes the oil derricks—and the action is truly colorful here. Yet both victims emerge from the scene—with nary an indication that they have registered anything from their frightful experience. The characters are not clearly defined because there is so much "off-screen" incident to plant. However Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Alice Calhoun and Craufurd Kent strive to be convincing. Cissy Fitzgerald emerges from oblivion to lend color to her role.

THEME. Melodrama of young adventurer who comes to oil town and aids nester to strike it rich. Falls in love with latter's daughter and crushes his enemy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmosphere. The making over of the Briskow family. The scene when adventuress is shown up in her true character. The climax revealing a melodramatic punch—when oil derrick is struck by lightning. The rescue of hero.

DIRECTION. Does not make story even. A lot of incident explained through captions. Might have dispensed with fight scene which is crude. Talky plot in several scenes. Is best with climax. Conventional treatment.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Since the country is reading and talking of oil, it would be a good angle to feature this as a lively melodrama of an oil boom. Play up cast—and mention author and producer. Bill it as exciting picture carrying a vivid climax.

DRAWING POWER. Should please the everyday patron.

SUMMARY. Somewhat hectic in outline is this melodrama of an oil boom. It is crude in places and uneven in its continuity—and much action is planted through captions. Is vivid in climax—and fairly well played. Conventional in treatment, however.

THE CAST

Allegheny Briskow	Anna Q. Nilsson
Calvin Gray	Milton Sills
Barbara Parker	Alice Calhoun
Henry Nelson	Craufurd Kent
Buddy Briskow	John Roche
The Suicide Blonde	Cissy Fitzgerald
Ma Briskow	Josephine Crowell
Pa Briskow	Bert Woodruff
Tom Parker	Charles Sellon

By Rex Beach. Directed by Joseph De Grasse.

SYNOPSIS. Young adventurer, down and out, comes to Texas oil town, and aids family of nesters who have suddenly struck it rich in oil. They place him in charge of their interests—and he frustrates plans of his enemy who would ruin them. Strikes up romance with daughter, who becomes piqued because he is also attentive to another. He saves the boy from being compromised into marriage—and is rescued from death by heroine.

Fair Week

(Paramount—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WE sadly suspect that this one has been "laying on the shelf" for many moons and is now being dragged into the light of day after much discussion as to the advisability thereof. It is a picture that smacks of other days and other methods in production, direction and acting. It is a tale of a small town "jack of all trades," who foils the efforts of a Desperate Desmond, masquerading as an evangelist, to leave town with the bank deposits as the town folk gaze skyward to observe a balloon act by Madame LeGrande brought to the big fair by another crook.

This ballon act, undoubtedly supposed to be the highlight of the picture, is so obviously trick stuff that much of its punch is lost. The "act" is really the situation in which a balloon suddenly starts skyward taking with it Slim Swasey and his little orphan pal, Sally Jo. Both have been practicing acrobatics on the ground so when they get in the air they repeat their stuff and are able to make a safe landing.

The locale of the story is Rome, Missouri and there is much play in the subtitles along the lines of "When in Rome dos as the Romans do," "the Rome circus maximus," etc.

Walter Hiers is Slim Swasey and supplies a few comedy moments. Constance Wilson, Lois' sister, has the principal feminine role but is not called upon to do anything. Earl Metcalfe puts up a good fight with Hiers in the church loft but succumbs when Walter puts his full weight upon him. The rest of the cast is fair. This is a picture for second class houses, neighborhood theatres and the towns. The latter, especially, may enjoy it.

THEME. A rural comedy drama dealing with the efforts of the village fat boy to rid the town of a couple of crooks and win his sweetheart back from the slickest of the two. Incidentally the real mother of his little orphan pal is found to be the balloon lady.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The balloon ascension which is only fairly well done. The chase and fight between Slim and Mark Bulger. The comedy moments contributed by Walter Hiers.

DIRECTION. Not so good. Smacks of other days and other methods. Has permitted too much "posing" stuff of both individuals and groups. Has put over a few comedy situations and packed a little pep into the climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Might be a good stunt to send up hundreds of toy balloons announcing the coming of the picture. A balloon ascension is one of the "thrills" of the picture. Turn your lobby into a miniature county fair. Put up a lot of little booths and put on a fat man, thin man, missing link, hula-hula girl prologue as suggested in the ballyhoo scene in the picture. Play up the name of Walter Hiers. If you play this one when your town has its fair, tie-up with the fair advertising.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, community theatres and especially the towns.

SUMMARY. This is just a fair program picture which undoubtedly was made quite some time ago. It has nothing original in the way of plot and the one thrill of the picture is quite poorly done as to realistic staging. The acting is fair, with Walter Hiers supplying most of the comedy. There is some action toward the close.

THE CAST

Slim Swasey	Walter Hiers
Ollie Remus	Constance Wilson
Madame LeGrande	Carmen Phillips
Jasper Remus	J. Farrel MacDonald
Dan Hogue	Bobbie Mack
Sally Jo	Mary Jane Irwing
Mark Bulger	Earl Metcalfe
Isadore Kelly	Knute Erickson
Mary Ellen Allen	Jane Keckley

By Walter Woods. Directed by Rob Wagner. Scenario by Tom Geraghty. Photographed by Bert Baldridge.

SYNOPSIS. Deals with the arrival in town of a couple of crooks. One brngs along Madame Le Grande, who is to do a balloon stunt for the folks during fair week. In the guise of an evangelist, the other crook wins the confidence of the natives and then robs the bank, but he is caught by Slim Swasey, village jack of-all-trades. It also later develops that the child he has been bringing up is none other than the long lost daughter of the balloon lady. Slim wins Ollie Remus who was on the verge of eloping with the crook-evangelist.

The Marriage Market

(Harry Cohn Production-C. B. C.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WHILE several situations in this picture are beyond the realm of possibility and there is a tendency to moralize over the attempts of certain parents to "auction off" their daughters to the highest bidders, regardless of whether there is love in the match, this offering is well acted and possesses a wealth of comedy situations.

The ballet number and the tableau scene showing the ancient marriage market are quite artistic bits. There is a thrill or two, especially the one in which two autos are chasing another. The first machine just gets by as a train flashes across the road forcing the other two machines to slide into a ditch.

Some real comedy is injected in the scenes in which Pauline Garon as Theodora Bland, expelled from school, gets off at the wrong station in a storm and finds shelter in the home of Wilton Carruthers, who is informed by the girl that she is the refugee from the reform school. She is seeking adventure and romance. She gets both as a result of her hoax.

Miss Garon is decidedly attractive in this picture and shows promise of becoming a clever comedienne. Jack Mulhall and Alice Lake do fairly well with their respective roles and the remainder of the cast is adequate.

There is some fast action in the climax as Theodora saves the girl who escaped from the reform school from capture by the Sheriff after the latter has come to the rescue of Theodora, denying to the gathered family the announcement by a jealous girl that Theodora is the real reform school refugee.

THEME. A light comedy drama dealing with an adventure-loving flapper who refuses to be placed on the marriage block and picks out her own husband in a very romantic manner.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes in which Theodora passes herself off as an escaped reform school girl and is saved by Carruthers from officers seeking the refugee. The ballet numbers. The race of the three autos with Theodora just escaping being struck by a train. Pauline Garon's acting and personal charm. The good cast.

DIRECTION. Has done fairly well with a story that is not very convincing as to plot incident. Has put over a good auto-chase-near-train-wreck thrill. Has injected some comedy moments and brought out the fact that Pauline Garon has in her the makings of a charming little comedienne.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The fine cast. The title. Make a play for the women's interest by playing up the theme that the picture shows the workings of the modern marriage block. Put on a ballet prologue as suggested by the dance scenes in the picture.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for program houses, neighborhood theaters and the town.

SUMMARY. A rather diverting little comedy drama in which the situations are not very convincing but which is fair entertainment because of its comedy moments and the acting of the good cast. Pauline Garon is good to look at and does some real acting. The picture is artistically acted and well photographed and should do business if well advertised.

THE CAST

Theodora Bland	Pauline Garon
Lillian Piggott	Alice Lake
Wilton Carruthers	Jack Mulhall
Dora Smith	Shannon Day
Miss Blodgett	Mayme Kelso
Miss Whitcomb	Kate Lester
John Piggott	Marc Robbins
Mrs. Piggott	Vera Lewis
"Count Demitri"	Jean DeBriac
Seibert Peckham	Willard Louis

By Evelyn Campbell. Directed by Edward J. Le Saint. Photographed by King Grey.

SYNOPSIS. Expelled from a fashionable "finishing" school, Theodora Bland, helps a girl who has run away from a reform school. Alighting from the train during a storm at the wrong station, Theodora seeks shelter in the home of Wilton Carruthers and seeking adventure, the girl tells him she is the one who escaped from the reform school. He saves her from the officers. Reaching home, her aunt seeks to marry her off to an oil magnate. In the climax her aunt's daughter-in-law seeks to have her arrested as the escaped reform school girl, but the real culprit comes forward and Theodora is won by Carruthers.

Around the World in the Speejacks

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is the film history of the famous around-the-world cruise in a 98-foot motor boat by Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. Gowen of Cleveland who covered 39,000 miles in a 16 month period visiting such out-of-the-way places as Samoa, Fiji Islands New Guinea, Australia, India, Java and a number of South Sea islands. And the pictures which their cameraman Ira J. Ingraham formerly with Burton Holmes, made of the trip are among the most entertaining, instructive and fascinating seen in a long while. They are of especial appeal to school children whose studies are here visualized in vivid manner, but grownups also will find them intensely absorbing. We don't get a chance to see pictures like this every day and few of us would want to take a chance in a 98-foot boat to see the originals, especially those terrible faced, "polka-dot" savages of New Guinea.

The pictures are beautifully photographed and show some of the most wonderful natural settings ever filmed. All who see this picture will wonder at the scenes showing the firewalkers of Bequa, folks who trip gleefully over stones heated for 24 hours and which trick does not effect their "dogs" in the least. Even the fakers in India haven't dug up a stunt to equal this one. And then there are the genuine hula hula dances in which we see the native Java girls shaking some very wicked haystacks.

The scenes in India are also of great interest as well as shots as in other lands and ports visited. There are some fine maritime views as the yacht plunges on her adventurous junket. These pictures will delight all lovers of adventure and outdoor spot. The films give one new insight into the life of the savages in uncivilized parts of the world and show us queer customs such as that practiced in New Quinea where the "sheiks" prick their skin until it bleeds and then put on little wads of cotton making many and weird designs on their hideous looking bodies.

Many newspapers of the country published the detailed account of this strange honeymoon of the Gowens. Many are doing so today, so that in some cities exhibitors will be able to tieup with the newspaper printing the tale in serial form by getting their ads under the stories. This is a feature that can stand alone on any bill, but it also can be split up into a series consisting perhaps of two reels each. "The Cruise of the Speejacks," is one of the novelties of the season and should find a place in every house wishing to give its patrons a treat.

THEME. A travelogue of the famous 'round-the-world cruise in a 98-foot motor boat by Cleveland parties—a cruise covering 39,000 miles and touching the far off places.

PROUUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine camera work. The educational values as appreciated in shots of strange peoples. The firewalkers of Bequa. The scenes in India. The maritime shots. The thrils.

DIRECTION. No story here, the tourists taking along one of Burton Holmes' cameramen who has caught some marvelous scenes. Have not missed anything in cruise.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Splendid chance to tie up with newspapers, featuring the colorful cruise in the Speejacks. Tie up with schools, etc. Has great educational and pictorial values. Ballyhoo it as something out of the ordinary.

DRAWING POWER. Is colorful and instructive enough to be featured on any program. Good for any community.

SUMMARY. An animated "log" of a most colorful cruise—one carrying great educational and pictorial values. Acquaints spectators with far-off places and races. Carries suspense, too. A real treat of its kind.

THE ENSEMBLE.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. Gowen

Natives of South Sea Islands, Australia, New Guinea, India, Java, etc.
Photographed by Ira J. Ingraham.

SYNOPSIS. A moving record of a honeymoon cruise in a 98-foot motor boat, the tourists being Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. Gowen of Cleveland. The boat carried them to the far-off places where they visited tribes, etc., little known to civilization. The cruise took them sixteen months, most of which was occupied in visiting the South Sea Islands and India.

Ladies to Board

(Fox—6112 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TOM MIX is one actor of westerns who has enough foresight to break away from the stereotyped material and project something novel—something different. His newest expression takes him away from the open spaces and thrusts him in the East as the owner of an Old Ladies' Home, the property being left him by a cantankerous old woman whom he has rescued [illegible] West. The idea is quite original for the screen—and the arrival of the westerner and his portly pal to take up their abode in the home is sufficient to get the picture away with a fine flash of humor.

The author, William Dudley Pelley, has not made this a one character story. Indeed, he has incorporated several balancing elements which make the picture rather elaborate of its kind. Don't judge from the plot that the star isn't given opportunity to display some new stunts. But these are not so prominent as the romantic and comedy incident. The hero falls in love with a pretty nurse while his buddy is charmed by an equally rotund housekeeper. The majority of laughs are gained from their antics. For the note of pathos the author has introduced an elderly lady whose son has renounced her. It is the hero's duty to force this young scapegrace to realize his mistake. Meanwhile the westerner has made a great hit with the old ladies in scenes which carry a deal of heart appeal

It is a breezy comedy-drama, packed with sure-fire elements—and there is no question that it will entertain the Mix followers—and even those who have not selected him as one of their favorites. The romance is subordinate to the comedy element, but it introduces a speedy finish—one which features a double elopement. This episode is certain to arouse much laughter. The director has dove-tailed all the elements—and these are sufficient to find response.

In other words it is a first class audience picture and establishes Mix as a consistent picker of likely stories. The star sports a deal of originality in his sartorial attire.

THEME. Comedy drama carrying vein of heart interest when westerner comes East to inherit an old ladies' home. Has a romance and reunites a son to his mother.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy moments when westerner and his portly pal arrive in the East and inherit old ladies' home. The dinner scene. The incident. The heart appeal. The double elopement. The fast action. Convincing work by cast.

DIRECTION. Has packed picture with several balancing elements—though the comedy predominates. Projects some good incident, plenty of humor—and a note of heart interest. Gets good resuits from players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title will arouse curiosity. Play up that Mix is seen in a new kind of role. Make comment of central idea. Tie up with local store, etc. Put on a dance prologue. Feature it as something different in comedies.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw wherever Mix is popular.

SUMMARY. A first rate comedy-drama, carrying original humor, a substantial note of pathos, considerable heart appeal and plenty of action. It shows so many elements that its success is assured.

THE CAST

Tom Faxton	Tom Mix
Edith Oliver	Gertrude Olmstead
Evan Carmichael	Philo McCullough
Bunk McGinnis	Pee Wee Holmes
Mrs. Carmichael	Gertrude Claire
Model	Dolores Rousse

By William Dudley Pelley. Scenario by Don W. Lee. Directed by Jack Blystone.

SYNOPSIS. Elderly lady of cantankerous disposition is rescued by westerner when she loses control of her car while touring the open spaces. At her death she remembers his kindness and leaves him her state, consisting of an Old Ladies' Home in East. He induces his cowboy friend to accompany him—and both fall in love—the hero with a pretty nurse, the friend with a housekeeper. The westerner forces a lonely mother's son to return to her—and happiness is supreme all around.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"School Pals"
Fox-Imperial Comedy—Two Reels

TWENTY minutes of entertaining comedy are furnished in this bright burlesque of school days—with three chimpanzees conducting the high jinks. They seem to know their A B C's and how to carry on mischievous pranks. The introduction features a dream situation in which one of the tiny white-whiskered monks visualizes himself as an oriental king, while another is an oriental dancer.

From this point the idea features the schoolroom and a home—with the pals executing a lot of stunts. Their weazened expressions are effective in making them appear quaint.

The comedy is a good one of its kind and is particularly suitable for the juveniles.—LAWRENCE REID.

"The Very Bad Man"
(Universal—One Reel)

NED has his valet impersonate a much sought desperado, that Ned may collect the reward offered. The real desperado encounters his impersonator and beats him. Ned starts out to make the capture not knowing the true state of affairs. He is given a warm reception by the desperado, but induces the latter to shoot holes in his coat and hat that he might impress the sheriff with his bravery. When the last bullet has been used for this purpose Ned and the valet easily subdue the desperado and win the reward. The story is rather a poor one and the comedy incident not much better.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Peg of the Mounted"
(Universal—Two Reels)

PEGGY in the uniform of the mounted goes out to round up a boose smuggling gang who have desperately wounded one of the mounted police. The gang is led by a seven foot giant as Peggy discovers when she strikes the trail. Undaunted, she shoots holes in the barrels of hootch and is chased by the smugglers.

One thrilling escapade follows closely upon another, until by a clever ruse she captures the entire outfit and is accorded all the glory that goes with such a capture. This is a winner and rarely has the popular Baby Peggy been seen to better advantage.—CHARLES J. SMITH.

"Smile Please"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

ROUGH tactics by a rough comedian will amuse the lovers of the familiar old style slapstick comedy and all the old business is dragged back in.

This is the second of the Mack Sennett comedies featuring Harry Langdon and the action is placed in a photographic gallery with the comedian as the photographer.

Jackie Lucas is in the family about to be photographed and his antics help provide the comedian with most of his opportunities. The cast is good and the action fast throughout—TOMHAM.

"Cave Inn"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS alleged comedy of prehistoric caveman days is too silly to be at all humorous. Its principal comedy feature is the dropping of stones on the head of someone who is endeavoring at various stages, to abduct the fair damsel. Sid Smith, Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance are the featured players, but none of them adds any to laurels won in the past by this one.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Alice Day has just signed a long time contract to appear in leading roles in Mack Sennett Comedy Productions for Pathe

"The Cake Eater"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WILL ROGERS' followers will like this one and it will generally amuse but is not quite up to the recent standard set by this versatile comedian.

The sub-titles alone afford many chuckles as the star writes his own original absurdities. Some clever riding is shown and the local is on a Western ranch where cowboys play as usual instead of working.

Two spinsters acquire the property and they briskly vamp the bashful comedian who is smitten in turn by the visiting poor relation of the spinsters.

A specially made cake for the hero is accidently sprinkled with kerosene and he heroically bears up under the severe test. A subject somewhat above the average filler.—TOMHAM.

"White Man Who Turned Indian"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HERALDED as the third of the Indian Frontier Series this one presents what is asserted to be a "true tale of a white boy turning Indian." He is portrayed by Johnnie Fox Jr. in the early part of the film and becomes a chief in the tribe of Aropahoes. The story is produced under the auspices of a white rancher to whom it is related by Chief Yellow Horse. There are many dramatic moments and an abduction and rescue interwoven with a love element. Will please generally as a somewhat different offering.—TOMHAM.

"Hard Knocks"
(Pathe—One Reel)

CHARLIE CHASE is in love with his employer's charming daughter and he comes to a reception at her palatial home attired in sporting togs instead of formal evening dress.

A fellow clerk in the office told him that R. R V. P. meant "Riding Suits Very Proper." He quickly changes clothes with a butler almost twice his size.

After a lot of harrowing experiences he thwarts the "heavy" trying to rob his employer's safe. A good fight is staged in this comedy and it will get by in pretty good shape.—TOMHAM.

"A Society Sensation"
(Universal—Two Reels)

RUDOLPH VALENTINO has all the charm of manner and appearance in this two-reeler as in his more recent productions. The son of Mrs. Bradley, a social lioness, he is seized with cramps in bathing and is rescued by Margaret Fairfax. The latter is supposedly of noble lineage, the protege of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Bradley's rival for the social leadership. Young Bradley falls in love with his rescuer, who is loved also by Jim Cox, burly fisherman.

Margaret is driven from Mrs. Jones' home as an imposter when her claim to nobility seems to have been a false one. Later Jim Cox abducts the girl and she is rescued by young Bradley in his speedy power boat. The girl's father and friends suspect Bradley as being the abductor and he is threatened with dire consequences upon being captured with the girl. Explanations are hurriedly made, Margaret is apprised of the fact that she is of real nobility and a happy marriage follows. It is a fast moving story, well acted by Valentino, Carmel Myers, Zasu Pitts, Alfred Allen and Harold Goodwin. Although a reissue bound to be a winner in any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathe Review No. 9

CANYON country is shown in the Pathecolor section of the Review this issue and it is very impressive and beautiful.

"Photographic Gems," is a collection of picturesque views of Bermuda; "Head and Heels;" a slow-motion novelty showing a daring trapeze performer in action "A Lost Art Revived," a highly interesting insight into the methods of petal painting as practiced by the Leonardo da Vinci Art School, New York.—TOMHAM.

"Herman, the Great Mouse"
(Pathe—One Reel)

AN athletic mouse heads the cast this week and twists the steel wire in a mouse trap like a chef bends macaroni. He chases everybody and everybody chases him and he struts and "mugs" in comedy situations that will convulse the average person.—TOMHAM.

"Getting Gertie's Goat"
(Educational—Two Reels)

THE trials and tribulations of a young couple determined to elope are complicated by the fact that the girl's father is the town judge and decidedly opposed to the young man. Inadvertently he comes into possession of the marriage license, the thousand dollar bank roll and the steamer tickets.

The ingenious daughter conceives the idea of recovering them from the courtroom and to do so it becomes necessary to start a fire scare. A mad dash to the steamer via of a motorcycle with bathtub attachment and then the fact is revealed that they have forgotten the necessary detail of being married. Another dash back to an irate traffic cop who is persuaded to be witness to the marriage, and all ends happily. There is a lot of genuine humor in this picture and it should be well received almost anywhere.

CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Jumping Jacks"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is another of the clever Lyman H. Howe's Hodge Podge series which shows among other things some clever cartoons, types of different races and some exceptional scenic views. These pictures are cleverly arranged and should gain in popularity as they continue to maintain the high standard set by the producer. They are both educational and entertaining.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Picture Paragraphs

IRVING M. Lesser, vice president and Eastern representative of Principal Pictures Corporation, believes the phenomenal success of Harold Bell Wright's "When A Man's A Man," a First National attraction, now in its third week at the B. S. Moss Cameo, New York demonstrates that the public wants out-of-door pictures with real drama during the present year.

In analyzing the success Mr. Lesser said, "I have had our representatives in the cities where the test runs took place send in detailed reports on just what brought the crowds to the theatres. The gist of these reports is that the popularity of Harold Bell Wright was a big factor, for Wright has 50,000,000 followers in this country, according to D. Appleton & Co., and A. L. Burt & Co., the publishers of his books. But an equally strong element in drawing the crowds is the fact that the picture breathes the spirit of out-of-doors and is filled with tense dramatic situations.

THE announcement made by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation that a new series of Percy and Fredie Hall-Room Boy Comedies would soon be released, met with general approval, it is claimed.

A majority of the exhibitors are said to have evinced pleasure at the way the public has received the series by their requests from time to time for the theatres to play them.

SOMETHING of a distinct novelty in press books is being gotten out by the Hodkinson Corporation for the Samuel Grand production, "Try and Get It," starring Bryant Washburn and Billy Dove, according to the Hodkinson offices.

In size and in all general appearances, this press book will be almost a facsimile of The Saturday Evening Post, in which the story of the picturepiay was originally published.

This similarity to the famous weekly periodical is carried throughout the entire book.

Walter Hiers, who has been signed to star in Al. Christie comedies for Hodkinson release

"Try and Get It" is an adaptation of "The Ringed Tail Gallimampus" by Eugene P. Lyle.

MOTION picture subjects as topics for lectures have been in demand in recent months by a number of pulpit orators. Perhaps the best known of these ministers is the Rev. Allison Ray Heaps, pastor of the Lewis Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn.

Among the picture titles which have formed the basis for discourses by Dr. Heaps are "A Certain Rich Man," adapted from William Allen White's novel, "If Winter Comes," and "The Man Who Played God." Lately he has added "The Courtship of Myles Standish," Charles Ray's great screen success, to his collection.

THE latest Emory Johnson production "The Mailman," starring Ralph Lewis and being distributed by the Film Booking Offices, is receiving editorial comment in the columns of a number of metropolitan newspapers. The Boston Post ran a long editorial under the head, "Pay for Postal Workers" during the showing of "The Mailman," in Boston, while the editorial writer for the Davenport (Iowa) Democrat and Leader made in part the following comment:

"A popular ditty of a few years ago, if we remember right, voiced the inquiry: 'How'd you like to be the mailman?' We confessed that we would not like it, or at least we could conceive of many easier jobs, if we had to surmount some of the obstacles the mailman meets and overcomes, as shown in the screen story of the mailman's daily dozen of daring deeds now running at the Family."

WARNER Brothers have gone out of their way to make an original press sheet for "The Marriage Circle," the Ernst Lubitsch production which created such a furore in its recent Eastern premiere, and which is still going strong on its fifth week in Los Angeles.

The press sheet of newspaper size, contains a wealth of publicity and exploitation material. Reproductions are strikingly displayed, and the stories have the news quality that will help get them over the city editor's blue pencil. Especially deserving of comment are the posters, distinct departures from the average assortment of lithographs.

A piano solo by Francis Young, called "Beau Brummel," will be used as a musical tie-up by Warner Brothers, in connection with exploitation of their forthcoming March release, "Beau Brummel," starring John Barrymore.

Arrangements were recently effected through Carl Fischer, Inc., musical publishers. The number dedicated to John Barrymore, will be used as the musical theme for the screen presentation. It will also serve as a window display in music stores.

THE Frank A. Munsey Company has designed and executed an attractive herald on "The Confidence Man," the story by L. Y. Erskine and Robert H. Davis which is now being made into a Paramount picture with Thomas Meighan as the star. The front cover of the herald, attractively printed in colors, carries a reproduction of the cover of Argosy-All-Story Weekly's issue of March 15, in which "The Confidence Man" starts as a serial.

The magazine cover, as reproduced, is adorned with a portrait of Thomas Meighan and announces the story as that of Meighan's next Paramount picture. The picture will be released during the publication of the serial in the Munsey publication.

PYRAMID pictures' belief in exploitation and its desire to assist exhibitors to "put 'em over" has prompted the laying in of a large supply of the pointed dunce caps which have found such favor among exploiters of "What Fools Men Are." These caps are about sixteen inches high, and because of their conical shape will fit any head. They played an important role in the exploitation of the picture in its premiere at Cameo Theatre, when scores of men were hired to walk about town with these dunce caps perched upon their heads. The caps are black, with orange lettering, as follows: "Ask any woman what fools men are."

WHAT are believed to be the first sales of motion-pictures without the use of directly-spoken or printed words, are reported by the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Under the supervision of L. F. Guimond, Director of Advertising and Publicity, small records containing sales talks on the Selznick pictures "Woman to Woman" and "Roulette," were sent to exhibitors throughout the country. These records, made indestructible by a new patented process, were mounted on cards containing illustrations in colors, but no printed matter.

Before salesmen would follow up the campaign, a number of exhibitors took the initiative, after listening to the records, which gave casts and exploitation points, and booked the pictures, according to Selznick.

Albany

THE two big events of the week were a dinner and dance given to the film people of this district by William Shirley, managing-director of the Farash theatres, of Schenectady, on Thursday night, and the dinner-dance given by the employees of the First National exchange in Albany on Friday night at the Hotel Kenmore. Mr. Shirley entertained in the lobby of the State theatre, following the 11 o'clock show, the affair lasting until 3 o'clock in the morning. About 100 were present. An orchestra played for the dancing, while Harry Seed, manager of the F. B. O. office in Albany, Miss Renee Craven, of the First National exchange and others, entertained with individual acts, Miss Craven contributing a dance.

The First National dinner-dance was attended by about 25, including all the employees of the exchange and a few outsiders, these being Jacob Rosenthal, owner of the Rose theatre in Troy; Jack Krause, manager of the Bond Photoplay exchange, and John Toomey, an insurance man well known by the film people. The dinner-dance was preceded by a screening of one of First National's latest releases.

Thomas Martelli, who books pictures for the U. S. army posts, has been spending a few days in Albany, visiting various exchanges.

The past week has been one the quietest along Film Row in many a month; very few exhibitors were in town, the managers of the exchanges, finding that the exhibitors were not seeking them out leaving their desks and going after business throughout the territory.

Jack Bellman, eastern division manager for Renown, paid a flying visit to Albany during the week.

There is a new manager at the Pearl theatre in Albany, the change having occurred during the past week.

David Levy, a well known salesman for the Universal exchange here, was suddenly called to New York city during the past week, on account of his wife's illness.

Miss Jane Halloran, connected with the Selznick exchange here, spent the week end with friends in New York.

Sol Manheimer, business manager for the Robbins theatres in Watertown, left for New York last Wednesday, following a telegram to the effect that his father was dangerously ill.

It is expected that the Universal exchange in Albany, will become a buying office about April 1, making three in New York state, the others being in New York and Buffalo.

Nathan Robbins, of Utica, owner of a chain of theatres in central New York, is said to be contemplating the erection of a theatre in Syracuse on the site of the Manhattan hotel, which was recently badly damaged by fire.

There was plenty of fun among the employees of the Mark Strand theatre in Albany on Valentine's Day when every one at the theatre presented everyone else with a valentine. A big box received the valentines, unsigned, during the day. Manager Herman Vineburg opened the box in the evening and handed out the addressed valentines.

E. J. Smith, eastern district manager for F. B. O., was in Albany for three days during the past week.

Some of the theatres in this section are planning to run split weeks throughout Lent, while other managers, believing that if the proper pictures are shown, that they will stand a week's run, have ruled against split weeks during the forty days. At the Lincoln, in Troy, Manager Symansky is planning to put one or two Irish pictures on during the Lenten season.

Apparently Proctors Fourth Street theatre in Troy, which plays vaudeville and pictures, realizes the drawing power of pictures and is heavily advertising this feature of their weekly program.

In order to protect themselves from some of the cheaper houses, the Lincoln and Troy theatres are now carrying a line in their newspaper advertising to the effect that pictures they are running will not be shown in Troy at any other theatre within thirty days.

When Al Bothner manages a theatre, he is manager in every sense of the word, this being demonstrated beyond any question of doubt the other night, when Mr. Bothner forcibly ejected a patron who was creating a disturbance down front. Mr. Bothner had quietly asked the disturber to keep quiet. The noise continued, however, forcing Mr. Bothner to ask the man to leave. The objectionable patron showed no disposition to comply but failed to reckon with Mr. Bothner's muscular right arm, and found himself suddenly ejected into the street, a sadder but wiser man.

The Lincoln, in Troy, has a nice little system of checking packages for its patrons. The checking room is right off the lobby and on a Saturday night, it is not uncommon to see all sorts of packages ranging from a chicken for a Sunday's dinner to a ham being handled and checked by the doorman.

A force of carpenters is now at work repairing the Strand theatre in Troy, damaged several weeks ago by fire. The house will be reopened in about five weeks and will retain its old name. No doubt Al Bothner will continue as its manager.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy theatre, has recovered from the effects of a badly infected finger, and is once more bowling his old style game.

There is a rumor that Jake Rosenthal, present owner of the Rose in Troy, has been taking a look at the neighboring Astor theatre, with the possibility of opening it at least on Saturday and Sunday.

The Griswold in Troy is going over big these days, and is easily the talk of the city. In connection with double features last week, an eight piece jazz orchestra scored such a hit that the musicians each night were obliged to respond to encore after encore.

The Fisher Kids, which scored heavily at Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, two weeks ago, with pictures, are to be brought back there for two days this week.

The Capitol, in Troy, attracted a big crowd last Sunday night, when the North End orchestra was featured.

Pictures and burlesque at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany will probably be replaced by stock after May 1.

There was a peculiar incident at the Troy theatre the other night, when a man came to Manager Walter Roberts and said that he had lost a diamond ring, adding further that he had heard it roll after it struck the floor. After the show was over, Mr. Roberts and his assistant-manager, Ben Stern, equipped with flashlights, went over every inch of the floor, turning over programs and taking row after row, but without success, working until long after midnight. The strange part of the whole thing is that the man who professed to have lost the ring, never called back during the days that followed to inquire if it had been found.

Canada

WEEK in and week out, the moving picture theatres of Ottawa are still doing their bit for disabled soldiers of the Great War who continue to receive treatment at the local Government hospitals and institutions. Special tickets are used to permit the war cripples to enjoy matinee performances at any of the local moving picture theatres. These are issued by and signed by officers in charge of the hospital work. Quite a few are accepted by each of the theatres every week. Those co-operating include Harry Brouse of the Imperial, Capt. Frank Goodale of Loew's, Oral D. Cloakey of the Regent, Don Stapleton of the Centre, Joe Franklin of the Franklin and others.

The first of Canadian Educational's English feature releases, "Out to Win", played the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, for a week starting Saturday, February 16. This picture is an ideal production, Canadian Educational having secured the Ideal attractions for distribution in Canada. Manager Don Stapleton of the Centre was well pleased with the fast-moving British production.

The Kenora Theatre at Kenora, Northern Ontario, the proprietor of which was Joe Derry, was destroyed by fire on February 13 with a loss of $65,000, partially insured. The cause of the fire was unknown. Mr. Derry occupied apartments above the theatre.

Miller Stewart, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, for the past three years, has resigned and has been succeeded by J. A. Reich, who was a theatre manager in Minneapolis until recently. Following the resignation of Mr. Stewart, the whole house staff of the Metropolitan Theatre was dismissed. It is understood that Mr. Stewart will shortly join the Gordon Amusement Company at Boston, Mass., of which Charles G. Branham, formerly director of theatres for the Famous Players Canadian Corp., is now general manager. Mr. Reich had his own theatre at Estevan, Sask., some years ago, and later was manager of theatres at Calgary and Edmonton, Alberta.

F. G. Spencer, owner of several picture theatres in the Maritime Provinces, has been elected an active member of the Rotary Club of St. John, N. B., holding the classification of moving picture theatre exhibitor.

Two theatres of the Atlantic Coast section of Canada have permanently returned to exclusive picture policies. One is the Majestic Theatre at Halifax, N. S., which had a long season of dramatic stock presentations, and the other is the Queen's Square Theatre at St. John, N. B., which had been playing stock musical comedy.

THE Rialto Theatre in Wenatchee, formerly owned and operated by J. G. Beckman, a veteran exhibitor of this territory, was taken over in February by the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit of the Pacific Northwest, adding one more house to their string that now totals close to thirty. By the acquisition of the Rialto, the organization now controls every theatre in that city, having for some time owned and operated the Gem and Liberty Theatres there. L. A. Doudlah, who acts as manager for the Jensen-VonHerberg interests in Wenatchee and runs the two present houses, will undoubtedly take over the management of the Rialto, according to information made public here this week. Mr. Beckman has announced no plans for the future.

Vic Gauntlett, well known film and theatre man of the Pacific Coast, returned to John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre in this city last week as advertising and exploitation manager. Mr. Gauntlett was formerly associated with the Blue Mouse circuit, but left there a number of months ago to handle the publicity and exploitation for the Northwest showings of "Human Wreckage" for the Film Booking Offices. Following the completion of that task, he he came associated with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" company in the same capacity, and takes up his duties at the Blue Mouse now after having toured the states of Washington and Oregon with the Universal production, for several months.

The Princess Theatre at Anacortes was reopened the middle of February by Sam Mendelsohn, according to reports just received here. The house was formerly owned and managed by B. B. Vivien, but was closed recently and placed up for sale. Mr. Mendelsohn has remodeled and renovated the theatre, and plans to present strictly first run shows there.

William Rush, an exhibitor from Tacoma, recently announced his intentions of building a strictly modern five hundred seat house in Kent, and work on the building has already been begun. A new type Wurlitzer organ, practically the first used in any of the small town houses of this state, will be included in the equipment installed by Mr. Rush.

Peter Kostrometinoff, owner and manager of the Sitka Theatre in Sitka, Alaska, left this city recently for his home, after having spent the winter season here and in California. W. D. Gross, owner of the new Coliseum Theatre in Ketchikan, arrived on the last Alaskan steamer, and plans to spend a short time in this city arranging bookings of pictures for the string of houses which he operates in the Alaskan territory.

Leon Greenman and his eight melody men were engaged last week by Manager C. W. McKee of the Heilig Theatre to furnish the musical entertainment for that house, and began their engagemnet the middle of February. Mr. Greenman formerly was conductor of the Blue Mouse Theatre concert orchestra, and since that time has been directing the symphony orchestra at the St. James Theatre in Boston.

The Gem Theatre at Pateros, Wash., formerly under the ownership and management of A. R. Dodd, was recently taken over by Oscar Miller, and is now operating under the name of the Paramount Theatre.

The Grand Theatre at Aberdeen, formerly the legitimate playhouse of that city, is now being remodeled by George Nye, owner and manager, according to information received here. When finished, the theatre will be reopened under a strict picture policy, which is expected to go into effect some time in March.

The American Theatre at Woolston, one of the small towns of this state, was taken over recently by Gus Berkstrom, after having been operated up to this time by Tom Watkins.

All film inspectors from every exchange on Seattle's Film Row were the guests of Manager George P. Endert of the Famous Players-Lasakey exchange one afternoon last week at a private screening of a special film brought to this city by Earl J. Dennison, traveling supervisor of all Famous Player exchange inspection departments. The film was specially prepared in the Famous Players laboratory, and showed the danger to film through bad patches and repairing. Mr. Dennison spent three days in this city, and from here proceeded to Portland, on his tour of all the Paramount exchanges.

Gerald K. Rudulph.
New Fox Exchange Manager at Buffalo, N. Y.

Morris Segal, formerly employed in the booking department of the local Famous Players office last week was announced as salesman in the Spokane territory by Mr. Endert. H. S. Hoke, former head of that district, will now work the territory out of Seattle, according to present plans.

Celebration along Film Row was general early February, as the result of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gage. Mr. Gage, following the announcement that both Mrs. and Master Gage are doing nicely, thank you, declared his intention of starting the young man to work at the Educational exchange immediately.

Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox exchange, was scheduled to leave here the second week in February for Los Angeles, where he will confer with officials of the Fox organization concerning the company's output for the coming season. During the ten days or two weeks that Mr. Navarre expected to be out of the city, the exchange was to be under the direction of Jack Cohn, assistant manager.

Charles W. Hardin, manager of the United Artists exchange, has recently returned from a two weeks' road trip to a number of the territory's key cities, including Spokane, Walla Walla, Portland, Butte and Missoula. Upon his return he announced that Jack Rue, formerly the manager of the Universal exchange in Butte, has joined the local United Artists sales staff and will cover the entire Northwest territory.

The biggest week's business in the history of the local First National exchange was reported early in February by Fred G. Sliter, manager of the local office, just before leaving this city for a week's trip into the Eastern Washington circuit on a drive to keep up the city's record. H. W. Boehme, First National's Western Washington representative, left recently for a flying trip through the Eastern part of the state, and following his return Eastern Washington was to be taken over for the company by Clint Montgomery. Mr. Montgomery was formerly associated with the Warner Brothers exchange in this territory.

L. J. Shlaifer, manager of the Universal exchange, returned to the city last week after an absence of a number of weeks, during which time he attended the Universal branch managers' convention in Chicago, and also spent a number of weeks in Los Angeles and Kansas City.

R. C. Hill, manager of the Hodkinson branch office, has again taken up his work in this city, after having just completed a road tour that kept him in the Washington and Oregon territory for several weeks.

J. B. Sparks, exhibitor from Primaville and Redmond, Oregon, spent a number of days on Film Row early in February. Ray Grombacher, of the Liberty Theatre in Spokane, and Ed Dolan and William Ripley of the Ripley-Dolan Enterprises in the Grays Harbor territory, were also seen along the Row the same week.

THE management of the Fredonia Opera House has changed, Charles H. and C. O. Tarbox having negotiated for the purchase of the lease held by Miss Edith N. Curtis and having secured from the Board of Trustees of Fredonia permission for the transfer of the unexpired lease, which is extended three years. The new proprietors agreed to pay $1,200 a year rental. Charles H. Tarbox, who assisted C. H. Landers in the management of the house for several years, and who has been in charge of booking pictures for the Chautauqua assembly grounds for a few years, will have active management of the house. Some improvements are contemplated.

One of the events of the week in Buffalo was the formal opening Thursday night of the new and larger Renown Pictures corporation exchange, on the second floor of the Beyer Building, 505 Pearl street. It was a regular party with music, dancing, a buffet luncheon and the screening of one of Renown's new pictures. The event was attended by most of the Buffalo exhibitors and several came to town from Niagara Falls, Rochester, Syracuse and other cities in the territory. Joe Miller, branch manager, and his assistant, Leo Mullen, were in charge of the program. M. H. Hoffman, vice-president and general manager of Renown, and Jack Bellman, general sales manager, were guests of honor. The exchange is elaborately furnished and completely equipped to serve the exhibitor. It occupies half of the entire second floor. I. M. Prown and Homer Howard have resigned from the Renown sales staff, and Mr. Miller expects to announce the appointment of new sales representatives next week.

Walter Hays, vice-president of the Mark Strand interests and head of the Strand Securities corporation, controlling the Criterian theater building, announces that the contents of the Criterion, consisting of a complete quipment for a picture house, including an $11,000 Wurlitzer organ, are for sale. All must be moved the week of April 1, as the building is to be torn down to make way for a modern business block.

"Old Faithful," the piano that did duty for a long time in the Nickum Gem Theater, Olean, N. Y., is gone. And Manager Charlie Nickum don't know where to find it. After a long and useful career giving forth music accompaniment for divers picture features in the Gem, "Old Faithful" was moved to the sidewalk when the Nickum Gem was dismantled. Patting the instrument on the back before the intended trip to the warehouse, Charlie was accosted by a man who asked if the piano was for sale. Mr. Nickum induced the stranger to take the instrument into his home for a trial by members of the family. An agreement was to be reached later, Charlie said. "Old Faithful" was loaded on a truck, and when the machine turned the corner Mr. Nickum had his last look at the piano. It was also his last look at the stranger.

Pete Dana has resigned from the sales staff of Hodkinson Pictures corporation and has been succeeded by Jack Thomson, formerly with Vitagraph, Pathe, Associated Exhibitors and other exchanges.

A Parent-Teachers association has been formed in Jamestown and has been working on a plan for securing proper motion pictures for children. Through the co-operation of Messrs. Peterson & Woods, owners of the Wintergarden Theater, arrangements have been made to run pictures suitable for the entire family, old and young. Two such performances have already been given and a third was presented one evening this week. The pictures shown under the arrangement are selected by the managers of the Wintergarden and a committee from the central council of the Parent Teachers' association. Arthur W. Kettle, chairman of the board of public welfare, has strongly endorsed the plan and declares the movement should be heartily supported by all those interested in the moral welfare of the children. "The children insist upon seeing motion pictures," said Mr. Kettle. "They must see them, and the only thing that can be done is to provide them with suitable films."

Justice O'Malley has signed an order providing for the discontinuance of an equity suit brought by the Golde Clothes Shop, Inc., against Loew's Theaters, Inc. The case, which has been in the courts continuously for more than two years, and which has twice been carried to the court of appeals, has been settled. The amount of the settlement could not be learned. The action started when the theater dispossessed the Golde firm from premises on the east side of Main street. The Golde company had a lease on a store there. After they had been dispossessed, the entrance to the Loew theater was built on the store site. The Golde firm appealed from the dispossess order of the city court on the ground that the lease had not yet expired. The city court was upheld by the county and appellate courts, but the highest state court reversed the decision. An equity suit then was brought for restoration of the property and for damages suffered by reason of the dispossess proceedings. An answer was interposed, and the plaintiff then sought judgment on the pleadings. The claim was that the defense did not constitute a proper defense as required by law. This motion was denied by the supreme court. An appeal was taken to the appellate court, and the court of appeals and the high court again ruled in favor of the plaintiff.

Eugene A. Pfeil, former manager of the old Strand, has renewed his lease on the Circle Theater, a west side community house, which he has been operating for several months.

N. I. Filkins, sales representative of Advance Pictures corporation of Syracuse was in town last week with an announcement of the merger of the Onondaga Film company and Oualtoplav Film company, into the Advance Picure company, Inc., capitalized at approximately $150,000.

Cleveland

BILL SKIRBOLL of Goldseal Productions is just back from New York.

Norman Moray, manager of the local First National exchange was off on sick leave last week. He's expected to resume duties again this week.

N. A. Thompson of the New York First National office has been a guest of the Cleveland First National exchange during the past week. He's here to install a new system of sales control.

J. O. Brooks, special representative for Fox, who has been in the Cleveland territory for the past two months, has finally checked out, and left for New York last Thursday.

C. E. Almy, manager of the local Metro exchange, was in Chicago last week attending a meeting of central western Metro exchange managers.

C. E. Penrod, division manager for F. B. O. was in Cleveland last weekend.

George Jacobs is in our midst once more. This time, it is in the capacity of personal representative for Al Lichtman. Jacobs plans to spend considerable time in the Cleveland Universal office, after which he will visit other Universal offices. Jacobs was formerly head of his own independent distribution office which operated under the name of the Western Pictures Company.

Al Feinman has arrived in town straight from New York, to take charge of the engagements and publicity of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" which opens its Cleveland run at the Stillman Theatre the week of March 2nd.

W. J. Kimes is back in town after a protracted stay in California. Kimes used to be manager of the Cleveland Goldwyn exchange. Since he severed his connections with Goldwyn, he has not had any picture affiliations, but took occasion to tour to California. It is not known whether he has formed any new ties within the industry or not. He was around the Film Exchange Bldg., however.

Mischa Guterson, musical director of Loew's State theatre, has arranged a musical treat for local music lovers. This week, in connection with the picture "Rendezvous" Guterson offered an all-Russian score, compiled from the greatest Russian musicians. This is the first time that a picture has been scored in Cleveland with such a selection of classics. Among the best known were Tshaikowski's "Slav March", "Overture of 1812", "Chanson Trists", "1st Movement from the Fourth Symphony", Last Movement from the Fourth Symphony, 3-4 Movement from the Fifth Symphony, Last Movement from the Sixth Symphony; Rubenstein's "Romance"; Chopin's Nocturne 13; Rachmaninoff's "Prelude", and "Melody"; Jewish Dance by Rinsi-Corsico; and others from composers of note.

William Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland, had a great show last week. He called it "Jazz Carnival." And it started out to be a carnival right at the front door leading into the foyer, where a little colored boy in bright red "buttons" uniform handed out tooters in bright colors to each patron. The inside foyer was hung with varicolored paper strips, draped from the ceiling. The usherettes were in Pierette costumes, no two the same color. Inside the auditorium, there were three jazz bands, sometime all going together, sometime separately. There were thirty nine instruments in the three bands—the largest jazz collection ever exhibited in Cleveland. A Male Trio sang from one of the upper boxes as one of the features of the overture. Lights were half down during the songs, and at the same time hundreds of balloons were loosed from the top balcony and allowed to float over the entire auditorium.

O. E. Pelles, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitor's Association, M. B. Horwitz, P. E. Essick, M. Fine, Frank Gross and Dr. I. Brody have been appointed a committee of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, to discuss the zoning system of Cleveland, as submitted to the Association by the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland.

Christie Diebel, manager of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, was in town the fore part of the week. He came up to see Charles Ray and arrange for his personal appearance this week at the Liberty. And he did it. For Ray left Cleveland Sunday so as to make a personal appearance at the Liberty just before the first performance of "The Courtship of Myles Standish."

"Doc" Horater, manager of the Temple theatre, Toledo, made a flying trip around the local exchanges the middle of last week.

Louis Miller, manager of the Palace theatre, Ashtabula, was in the Film Bldg. last week, booking pictures and seeing what Cleveland First-run houses are doing.

Peter Rettig, of the Mystic theatre, Galion, was a paying guest at the local First National exchange during the week.

Judge Foster traveled up to town from Marion the early part of last week, to put his name on some interesting firstrun contracts.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association held its February meeting last Tuesday at the Winton Hotel. Luncheon preceded the business meeting.

Chicago

ZONE CHAIRMEN, recently appointed by Business Manager Jack Miller and the advisory committee of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, are showing a real interest in their work and already many new members of the association have been secured through their efforts. They are also keeping the public posted on matters pertaining to the theatres and are seeing that the members of the association run trailers announcing their membership and print the announcement on their programs as well. The zone chairmen, as announced by Mr. Miller, follow: South Side: Nathan Joseph, Lincoln; Ludwig Siegel, Prairie; Al Lyons, Peoples; James Plodna, Harper; Abe Cohen, Midway; and James Coston, Harvard: North Side: Henry Newell, Howard Theatre; Nate Gumbiner, De Luxe; Louis Zahler, Commodore; Jack Freeman, Claremont; Harold Hill, Arrow; H. Heinaman, Crescent; Maurice Choynski, Newberry; Nate Wolf, Vision; Frank Schaeffer, Crystal; West Side: George Hopkinson, Hamlin; Samuel Abrahams, Gold; A. Saperstein, Palais Royal; M. Goodman, Marshall Square.

The Field Museum of Natural History will utilize motion pictures to make its work more interesting, and has arranged a series of free, public lectures on travel and natural history, illustrated by moving pictures, which will be given at the museum on Saturday afternoons during the months of March and April.

A. Raymond Gallo has been elected president and director general of Peacock Pictures Corporation, a new independent producing company recently organized in Chicago. According to Mr. Gallo, the company now has ready for screening, two stories, adapted for the screen by Scenario Editor Norris. His staff, as announced by President Gallo, includes: Major V. C. Sweinhart, production manager; H. John Ross, director of educational productions and local casting director; Bernhard O. Wirth, art supervisor and location manager; M. James Gallo, studio manager; Irwin S. Censky, efficiency manager; Lowell Ames Norris, scenario editor; Carl H. Schultz, art editor, and Grace Inglis, of Los Angeles, casting director. It is Mr. Gallo's intention to begin production during April, and arrangements for a Chicago studio, where the interiors will be shot, are being completed.

Roy Alexander, for many years connected with Universal Film Company, has resigned as Chicago exchange manager. His rapid advance from a minor position to salesman, short subject manager at Chicago, then manager at Kansas City and finally manager of the Chicago exchange, was won by hard work and ability. Mr. Alexander has not yet announced his future plans but it is understood that he will remain in the film business.

William Paara, who for the past six months has been connected with Fox's Chicago exchange as booker, has been promoted to assistant manager of Fox's Oklahoma City exchange. Mr. Paara has left for New York and after a short time spent at headquarters will proceed to Oklahoma City and assume his new duties.

Chub Florine, who has been selling Select Pictures in city territory, has been promoted to manager of Standard Cinema Service, which is releasing through Select and will have charge of the sale of this company's product in the territory of which Chicago is headquarters.

Ted Meyers, who for some time past, has been connected with Pathe's sales force, and one of the most popular go-getters in this territory, has been appointed manager of Pathe's Omaha office and has already left for his new headquarters.

Al Lichtman, general sales manager of Universal, stopped over in Chicago, Sunday, for a sales conference and then proceeded on his way to the coast, where he will spend several days at Universal City. Special Representative George Jacobs and Manager Brown, of the Cleveland exchange; Ike Von Ronkel, of the Des Moines exchange and Divisional Manager Wolfberg, participated in the conference.

Jack Hellman, Milwaukee newspaper man and formerly publicity director for Paramount at Minneapolis, has been appointed Universal exploitation man and is devoting his entire time to "The Hunchback" in the theatres showing this big feature. Reports coming in from various points indicate that Mr. Hellman is more than making good on the new job.

MORE than one hundred guests were entertained at the Valentine dance given on the evening of February 14, at the fashionable Harrisburg Country Club, by Mr. and Mrs. C. Floyd Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins is Harrisburg representative of the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests, and president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce. Among the guests were a number of persons connected with the operation of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in the city, and introduced during the general dancing were a number of theatrical stunt dances which added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Meyer Kabernich has accepted a position representing the Keystone Exchange, of Philadelphia, in Lackawanna and Luzerne counties. He was formerly associated as a manager, with the Carbondale Amusement Company, of Carbondale.

Despite opposition that has arisen among civic organizations of Harrisburged to the plan of a corporation recently organized by Athenas George, an Altoona exhibitor, to establish an amusement park on Independence Island, in the Susquehanna river, opposite a fashionable residence section of Harrisburg, the interests representing Mr. George have obtained a permit, for the erection of the necessary buildings, from the Harrisburg Building Inspector. The opposition to the project is based on the contention that the park would detract from the beauty of the river front. It is the plan of the corporation to include a motion theatre or picture airdome in the park. Park Commissioner Gross has declared that he is opposed to the project and that he will seek authority from City Council for the city to acquire the Island from Mr. George by condemnation proceedings, if necessary. Mr. George has intimated that he will proceed with the construction of the park which he hopes to have in operation by next summer.

Bethlehem and Allentown picture theatres are availing themselves of the use of the Radio Broadcasting station, WSAN, maintained by the Allentown Morning Call, to broadcast musical programs being given in theatres as prologues to motion picture shows. Manager John Newkirk, of the Colonial theatre, Allentown, put on a concert by the Hunsberger-Rapp trio, instrumentalists, and Miss Martha Minner and Miss Louise Ruiz, vocalists, which was broadcast from the station and attracted many persons to the theatre to see the artists in person. At the Strand, Allentown, of which Dr. Ben Stuckert is manager, a prologue was presented. In this prologue the musical artists were Miss Madeline S. Brown and John N. Mealey. Miss Brown was introduced by radio from the Morning Call studio between her appearances at the Strand. The Ye Eddie Quartette has been filling similar engagements to advertise several of the Allentown and Bethlehem theatres.

Peter Magaro, managing director of the New Regent motion picture theatre, Market street near Fourth, Harrisburg, gave space in a store room at 404 Market street, beneath his Coliseum dance hall, for an exhibition held from February 8 to 14, held by the Harrisburg Boy Scouts in celebration of the fourteenth anniversary of the establishment of the organization in that city. Twenty of the 36 troops of Boy Scouts, of Harrisburg and vicinity gave exhibitions of scout handicraft.

Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, former prima donna and at present director of the Community Service Bureau maintained by the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests in Harrisburg, is the organizer of a movement, announced on February 15, to establish a permanent Civic Opera Company in Harrisburg, the artists and other performers to be selected from home talent. Clarence E. Zerger, supervisor of the Harrisburg Public Schools, will assist Mrs. Ley in the stage direction, which will include dancing as well as vocal work. Announcement is soon to be made of the operas that will be attempted.

Kansas City

MAURICE JOSEPH, former manager of the Kansas City Universal branch, who resigned to enter business for himself, has been succeeded by L. W. Weir, former assistant division in the West for Universal.

If the assertions of L. A. Wagner, Princess Theater, Eureka, Kas., can be taken as a barometer, business in Kansas is on the upgrade. Mr. Wagner, with E. E. Frazier and son, Willard, who operate the Empress theaters at Paola, Kas., and Osawatomie, Kas., did some unusual heavy booking in the Kansas City market last week.

In addition to coming to Kansas City to install L. W. Weir as new Universal branch manager, Gerald Akers, Universal division manager, will take about ten days to study conditions in the Kansas City territory before returning to his headquarters at St. Louis.

Max Roth, assistant general manager of Preferred Pictures, was in Kansas City last week on a tour of Middle West exchange centers. Business conditions are as satisfactory as he could disire at this time of the year, he said.

Kansas City's "mail order film exchange" — the Economy Film Company, has issued a new catalogue of films. Bernard C. Cook, manager, who originated the idea in the Kansas City territory several months ago, asserts the volume of business done since the establishment of the exchange has vindicated him in his theory that such an exchange is in demand.

A handsome diamond ring was presented G. B. Howe, who resigned from the Kansas City Universal force recently to return to the East, by the office force. He had been with Universal twelve years.

The Missouri territory is being given the "once over" by W. E. Truog, division manager of Goldwyn, this week. W. C. Haynes is performing the same duty in the north and western sections of Kansas.

The Roanoke Theater, a suburban house of Kansas City, has been purchased by L. J. Lenhart, formerly of the Gladstone Theater. The seating capacity of the Roanoke will be enlarged about 200, while a new front and decorations will be added.

W. P. Bernfield, owner of the Liberty Hall Theater, Wathena, Kas., lost no ground in an "advertising argument" with the M. E. church of that city last week. The church, in advertising motion picture programs, stated they had "non-inflamable" films.

"There ain't no such animal," came back Mr. Bernfield.

Jos. Rosenburg, former Hodkinson representative in the Kansas City territory, has joined the Mid-west-Educational force and will "plunge" into the territory next week.

Sympathy of Missouri and Kansas exhibitors were extended last week to Bert Byler, manager of the Bixman Theater, Clinton, Mo., whose father died after an extended illness.

IT was announced by Paramount officials that all film in the vaults of the Charlotte exchange, which burned to the ground two weeks ago, was in perfect condition when the debris had sufficiently cooled for the vault doors to be opened. While the fire occurred at a period when constant passage in and out of the vaults was in progress, the strict rule to close doors after every visit to them was strictly adhered to with the result that all doors were firmly closed, though not locked, when the fire started. All dates were filled, it is announced, both the Atlanta and Washington exchanges aiding the local exchange in all close dates, and there was absolutely no interruption in service.

Arthur Lucas, who has taken over the Educational Film Exchanges of Atlanta and Charlotte has announced the personnel of the two offices. W. C. Costephens, formerly booker for Paramount, will be Atlanta booker; John Scruggs, for several years in charge of the poster department of Goldwyn will be in charge of booking and shipping for the Atlanta exchange. J. H. Butner, a pioneer formerly with the old Mutual and Triangle, will be manager of that office.

James Reynolds formerly Atlanta booker for Educational has been promoted to manage the Charlotte office; Clyde Cheek, formerly auditor for Paramount is to oe Charlotte booker. William H. Wassman, is to be salesmanager of the entire territory and he, with L. V. Calvert, is in Charlotte the past week superintending the transfer of the exchange from the Bromberg supervision.

W. J. Clarke, who was sent to Charlotte from New York to open the Charlotte branch of Goldwyn last Fall, has been transferred to manage the Atlanta office succeeding H. W. Starrett, who has gone to the Detroit office. Rudolph Berger, a veteran exchange manager for many years in Washington, is the new Charlotte manager, the position having been proffered to Frank Rogers, Atlanta office's star salesman, but declined.

Joe Marentette becomes salesmanager in the Southeastern territory for Associated Exhibitors succeeding Jack Shaefer, who goes to the West Coast. Mr. Marentette has been on the road with Metro. V. P. Whitaker, personal representative for Arthur S. Kane, was here making the change.

W. R. Bedell, who resigned the management of Rialto, Atlanta, Ga. last fall to enter another business, is back in filmland, and will be associated with Graphic Films Corporation, Atlanta, Ga. in the capacity of sales manager. Graphic is a new organization specializing in commercial work, trailers, and in cleaning and renovating films.

The new Lee theatre, Thomasville, North Carolina, in which H. B. Varner owns a half interest, will soon be ready for a formal opening. It will have a seating capacity of 900 representing the last word in equipment and appointments.

H. B. Franklin and Sidney R. Kent, of Famous Players were in Atlanta enroute to New Orleans the past week. F. F. Creswell, division manager joined them in Atlanta.

His many friends in the industry were grieved at the sudden death of James Dwyer, veteran projectionist of Atlanta last week. Mr. Dwyer held operators' license number one for the city of Atlanta.

L. S. Hollingsworth, assistant manager of Vitagraph, Atlanta, is recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

C. E. Kessnick, who was operated on in New Orleans is recovering favorably.

M. F. Schnibben, of the Opera House, Florence, S. C. was an Atlanta visitor the past week.

Oscar Kantner, formerly Paramount exploiter in the Atlanta territory has opened his Seville theatre. Los Angeles, and friends in Atlanta received invitations to the formal opening.

A. R. Ninninger has resigned from the North Carolina sales force of the Charlotte Universal exchange. Merritt Davis, formerly Paramount manager in Memphis succeeds him.

John Evins, of Augusta, Ga., spent several days in the Atlanta district offices in conference with state director Ford Anderson the past week. Remodeling is progressing nicely on the Imperial, Columbia, S. C.

M. M. S. Murray who has been with Aronson and Browne for the past six years has accepted the position as Manager of Craver's New Broadway, Columbia, S. C.

Washington

LOUIS J. SELZNICK was a visitor in Washington early in the week, callnig at Selznick Distributing Corporation, and being entertained by Louis Reichert, manager of the local Selznick office.

Louis Berman, President of Independent Films, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, South Atlantic distributors of the Warner Bros. pictures, was in town over the week-end. He was the guest of Manager Ayres, of the Washington office. Accompanying him was the Treasurer of the concern, M. A. Abrams, also of Philadelphia.

E. A. Sherwood, manager-vice-president of Harry M. Crandall's Exhibitors Film Service exchange, has announced that effective February 15th, he began caring for the trade in his new suite at 803-11 Mather Building, Washington.

Michael Thomas, for the past few months, manager of Federated Films, announces his pending resignation from the staff of D. Oletzky's Baltimore-Washington exchanges. Thomas plans to open on March 1, at 924 New Jersey avenue as Lightnin' Photoplay Exchange, Inc.

Manager Harry Hunter of Paramount announces that F. M. Boucher, head booker at the North Capitol exchange has been on the road recently, selling to the trade and getting in personal touch with the individual exhibitor.

Miss Mary Smith of the booking department of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, is being promoted to the position of private secretary to Manager Hunter.

Harry Bernstein was in town long enough to have the arbitration board and grievance committee of the Board of Trade, postpone the cases pending between his chief, Jake Wells, and the film exchanges of the Washington board, owing to Mr. Wells inability to reach Washington this week.

Owner and Manager Braugher of the new film house in Staunton, Va., and Joe Walters of the Lyric theatre, Black Stone, Va., were in town.

Washington Camp, Number 62, Patriotic Order, Sons of America, at Cumberland recently passed a resolution in opposition to Sunday movies prohibition and all, acts of that tenor pending before the Maryland legislature. Senator Robb and other members of the Alleghany county delegation in the State Legislature received copies.

The Moller Organ plant, Hagerstown, purchased the site of the H. L. Caffmann Lumber Company, adjoining them on the north.

Manager Murray of the Dunbar theater, Washington had a few matters up for arbitration last week.

The Walter Price talent in Goldwyn have cleared up the spring sales drive and are waiting for the watches now.

St. Louis

MOTION picture exhibiting is something other than putting good film on the screen, accompanied by nice music and an agreeable surrounding. At least that seems to be the principle underlying the success of Spyros Skouras, head of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Company of St. Louis which combined control some eighteen of that city's leading amusement places.

Today St. Louisians are conducting a drive to raise $500,000 for a new building for the St. Louis Maternity Hospital. The Rockefeller Foundation has promised a large endownment to the institution if the necessary building is erected. St. Louis is out to make good and as always Skouras, his brothers and his associates, prominent among whom is Harry Koplar, will uphold their end.

On Monday, February 18, 20 per cent of the gross receipts of sixteen of the Skouras houses was turned over to the hospital fund. The theatres participating were: Grand Central, West End Lyric, Capitol, Down Town Lyric, Juniata, Lafayette, Lindell, Maffitt, Manchester, Novelty, Arsenal, Pageant, Shaw, Grand Florissant and Shenandoah.

Samuel S. Harris well known Little Rock, Ark., exhibitor has leased the New Conway theatre, Conway, Ark., being erected by S. G. and Theodore Smith and will open the house probably on March 15.

Verne Victor Barnes, field representative in St. Louis for the Palmer Photoplay Corporation celebrated his forty-fourth birthday on February 14. His many friends throughout the territory remembered the occasion while the St. Louis Times honored him with a place in its birthday column, using his photo in conjunction with a brief account of his career.

R. C. Seery, district manager for First National was a recent St. Louis visitor.

Louis Landau, owner of the Washington theatre, Granite City, Ill., is confined to his apartments in the Gatesworth Hotel by a fractured leg. He had the misfortune to slip on the ice.

Jack Hoeffler of Quincy, Ill., was at the local First National office the past week.

Theatres in the St. Louis territory that have closed recently include: Liberty Theatre, Strassburg, Ill.; Princess Theatre, Bolivar, Tenn.; Rex Theatre, Jackson, Tenn.; Elite Theatre, Queen City, Mo.; Roosevelt Theatre, St. Louis (Closed for repairs) and Grand, Searcy, Ark.

Charley Goldman, owner of the Rainbow Theatre on Broadway near Pine street has taken over the Variety Theatre on Broadway between Chestnut and Market streets, and has closed the house to be repaired and remodeled. He plans to operate both houses. They are located in the down town district.

Mike Newman and F. H. Haynes have been added to the sales staff of the St. Louis Universal office. They formerly were with Goldwyn.

Visitors of the past week included Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Poplar Bluff and Cairo; C. E. Brady, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Jim Reilly, Princess Theatre, Alton, Ill.; D. Frisena of Taylorville, Ill.; and H. C. Tuttle of Desloge, Mo.

Word was received in St. Louis February 16 of the sudden death of C. W. Croy, owner of the Opera House, Toledo, Ill. Croy was also in the hardware business and was an outstanding figure in Toledo business and civic affairs. He had been sick but a few days.

The Scott Theatre, Alamo, Tenn., was destroyed by fire on February 10.

District Manager LeBeau of Paramount was in during the week.

George E. McKean, manager for Fox Films, attended a birthday party for his father, John McKean, held at the family homestead, Bluffton, Ind., on Sunday, February 17.

W. J. Kupper, assistant sales manager for Fox, spent Sunday and Monday, February 17 and 18, in St. Louis. His headquarters are in New York City.

San Francisco

LIONEL H. KEENE, Western representative for Marcus Loew in this district for the past twenty-two months, has left San Francisco for New York where he will handle some important work for Loew. Keene came to the Pacific Coast for Loew to open his new Warfield theatre, considered one of the finest in the country.

J. J. Wood of Redding, California and owner of the Redding Theatre is renewing old acquaintances on Film Row and stocking up for the Spring.

G. F. Madsen, Educational salesman, has just returned from a very successful trip in the San Joaquin valley.

The Crystal theatre, Salinas, has been purchased by F. Lafka from Gus Germanus. Lafka also owns a large general merchandising store in that prosperous California town.

J. W. Flood, owner of the Rex theatre, Fallon, Nevada is visiting the exchanges, purchasing for Spring showings.

W. G. Preddy of the W. G. Preddey Theatre Supply Company is taking a short trip, visiting picture houses.

Ben Westland of Universal has just returned from Reno, Nevada, where he showed "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," for five days at the Wigwam theatre.

R. E. Byard and associates of Arcata, California have taken over the Liberty theatre at Heilsburg from Hartman and Reynolds. Byard said although he was going to make many improvements in the building, it would not be necessary to shut down the theatre.

Ed Armstrong, assistant general sales manager of Universal in charge of the Western office has returned from a trip to Seattle and other north Pacific Coast cities.

Joe Huff, a former salesman of Jewel films, has been appointed to handle the "Hunchback of Notre Dame," in the San Francisco territory.

Cherry Malotte, formerly in the Spokane and Portland offices of Universal, has been transferred to the San Francisco Universal Exchange.

Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists, has been paying local exchanges and picture houses a visit.

E. J. Frier, formerly booker at the San Francisco Universal offices has been transferred to the Universal office at Portland.

Barney Gurnette, district manager for Universal has left the Ford coupe class and is now a big leaguer, having purchased a Hudson.

Quality Versus Price for Theatre Equipment

First Cost Overshadowed by Up Keep and Results; Suggestions on Ventilation.

THE old question of quality versus cost is always popping up. It seems to be an opinion among exhibitors that theatre equipment is the one general merchandise for which the usual direct ratio of cost and quality does not hold. How or why equipment should be considered different from other commodities in this respect is beyond explanation. No one should know better than the exhibitor that it isn't done these days — getting something for nothing.

Matter of Skimping on Price Paid

The matter of skimping on the cost and therefore the quality of theatre equipment was only last brought to the writer's attention in the morning's mail. An exhibitor operating a theatre in a small town writes in effect that he desires to change from one mode of projection to another. He further states that he considers the standard equipment recommended by a projector manufacturer to be too expensive. He mentions a cheap devise and inquires if this wouldn't do.

Maybe it "would do," but how well is the question. When an apparatus is recommended as necessary to secure good results by a manufacturer of high repute, one who has always striven to uphold the quality of his product, it logically follows that a cheap imitation will not do the work efficiently or satisfactorily.

Just because the average exhibitor is not thoroughly acquainted with the intricacies of machines and, as a result, one machine looks about the same as another, is no reason that the different machines are the same.

Basis for Determing Correct Purchase

Standard equipment backed by past reputable performance should form the main basis for determining a purchase.

One particular make of equipment may be "cheap" in its first cost but this by no means constitutes an inexpensive equipment. Initial cost is one phase in buying, but upkeep and satisfactory performance are the real factors. An apparatus can not be cheap regardless of its price if it does not thoroughly fulfill all requirements. Replacement and upkeep may also far overbalance first cost.

THEATRE construction is surely holding its own from the representative reports as listed below, on proposed new theatres:

Connecticut

New Haven — Architect Joseph Dellavalle, 341 State St., has plans and bids are being taken for the one-story theatre building of tile and wood, on Grand Ave. and Franklin St., for James De Lasia, 153 Franklin St. House will cost $75,000. Lobby—24 x 70, auditorium— 75 x 105.

Stamford — The Stamford Amusement Company, formed by local men, is having plans prepared for a new fireproof theatre to be located on the Milo Wood property opposite the Delaware house on Main Street. The plans, prepared by H. Dunlap Morrison, provide for a theatre with seating capacity of 1,500, four stores in front with the apartments on the upper floors.

Illinois

Chicago—Architect W. Ahlschlager, 65 Huron St., is drawing plans and taking bids for a new three-story and basement, 200 x 240, brick, steel and reinforced concrete theatre costing $1,500,000, on Belmont and Lincoln Aves, for the Lubiner and Trins Corp., 25 E Jackson Blvd., the theatre to seat 3,000.

Chicago — Architect John Hock, 7602 Chappel Ave., is drawing plans for a 750-seat theatre and store building, $30,000, one-story 50 x 125 of brick, terra cotta and stone. Exact location and owner withheld. Address c/o architect.

Chicago — A syndicate headed by Walter Butz, c/o Montclair Realty Co., Rm. 1257, 122 S. Michigan Ave., is having sketches drawn by Architect Wm. F. Whitney, 122 S. Michigan Ave., for a two-story and basement, 215 x 50 x 106, brick, terra cotta or stone theatre, store and office building on Heva and Grand Aves., to cost $500,000.

Park Ridge — Elmer F. Behrens, 400 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, is drawing plans for the Park Ridge Amusement Co., c/o architect, for a two-story aand basement, 75 x 165, brick, terra cotta trim, theatre, store and office building to cost $125,000.

To operate a business successfully calls for economy in every department. However, the manner in which many exhibitors maintain equipment and in particular, projection equipment, is questionable economy. Without equipment of the proper caliber the picture can not be projected on the screen to best advantage. This is simply equivalent to booking and paying for a picture of one quality and then showing one of inferior quality.

When the projection is poor the whole show suffers in a like degree.

Steadfast Rule for Exhibitors to Follow

Exhibitors can make the following a steadfast rule which in the end will serve them well: Buy only the best in theatre equipment and keep that in perfect condition.

It may appear rather early in the season to be talking ventilation as applied to summer cooling but now is the time for exhibitors to be considering this problem. Each year sees more theatres lined up under the head of "well ventilated and cooled." Yet there are thousands that have never given this all-important phase of showmanship serious consideration.

Times are rapidly changing. What constituted satisfactory physical conditions under which to entertain people a few years ago now fails utterly in that capacity. Ventilation is one of the stringent requirements of an up-to-date theatre. No house can continue to exist for any period of time from now on that fails to provide this essential for the patrons' comfort.

Knowing that many exhibitors whose houses are not properly ventilated today are going to remedy this condition in the next few months, it is well to call to attention salient factors in the problem of theatre ventilation.

Each Theatre Offers Distinct Problem

Each individual theatre offers a distinct problem in itself. Equipment that serves excellently in one house may prove inefficient in another. Depending on locality, theatres require more or less thoroughness of ventilation.

As there are several distinct methods and types of apparatus used for theatre ventilation the selection of the combination best suited for a particular theatre becomes somewhat involved. For that reason it is advisable to consult an authority on theatre ventilation. By so doing the possibility of serious mistakes in installations are reduced to a minimum.

This interesting detailed reproduction of the auditorium of the Tivoli, a large suburban theatre in Los Angeles, Cal., presents some striking and original ideas of decoration and design. The design permits flexibility of color scheme

West Coast Theatres Follows Policy of Considering Patrons' Comforts

IN the construction of suburban houses it has always been the policy of the West Coast Theatres to follow modern lines of accepted theatrical construction, with every feature for the comfort and pleasure of the patrons provided. The Tivoli, Los Angeles, houses one of the finest pipe-organs in the city of Los Angeles, installed as the special policy of Mr. Gore.

Startling as innovations generally are, the Tivoli provides free parking space for their patrons in connection with the regular attendance. It is believed that this sets the vogue, for no theatre on the Pacific Coast has ever instituted such a convenience for their patrons.

And in the matter of furnishing musical augmentation for the projection of pictures, Mr. Gore believes that pipe-organ picture accompaniment is much more generally effective than heavy symphonic orchestrations. This opinion has been reached after some fifteen years as a prominent exhibitor by Mr. Gore.

"An organist plays with his soul and an orchestra plays with its head," he explains. "Organists watch the picture and the dramatic theme instead of watching notes. Rapid changes on the screen may be followed as rapidly on the pipe-organ, whereas a fifty-piece orchestra, while it may change its music from forte to pianissimo or from accelerated to very slow time, cannot really follow the theme with any degree of speed or accuracy."

And in offering strong evidence as to this conviction, Mr. Gore stated that the Kinema Theatre, their finest and most beautiful house, recently reduced the size of their symphonic orchestra and engaged Eddie Horton, one of the most brilliant and masterful organists on the Pacific Coast, to handle the pipe-organ and with this change, reduced admission prices became the vogue with increased popularity and much public enthusiasm.

Yorkville, New York, Will Have New Theatre

The remarkable growth of Yorkville, N. Y., especially in the vicinity of First Avenue, has been strongly emphasized during the past week when a syndicate headed by Mr. William Salkin, president of the 79th Street Theatre, represented by Leopold Freiman, attorney, entered into contracts for the purchase of the building now located at the southeast corner of 1st Avenue and 76th Street and 402–404 East 76th Street, as well as 406–12 East 76th Street, which for the past two generations has been occupied by Herman Harjes, as a coal yard. The combined plot has a frontage of 213 feet on East 76th Street by 102 feet in depth.

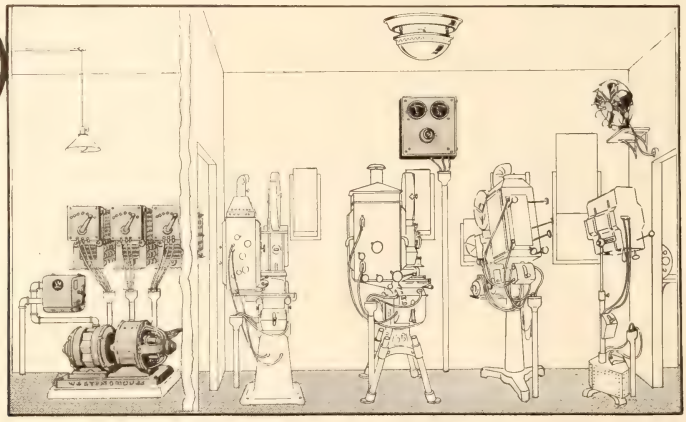
The new theatre will be one of the finest in New York and the largest in Yorkville, representing an outlay of more than $500,000 for land and building. The house will be devoted to high class vaudeville and photoplays, and have a seating capacity in excess of 3,500.

The plot was assembled by P. M. Clear & Company and Charles Eberhart, who have also arranged a building and permanent loan for the new structure.

Something of Interest to Theatre Owners and Builders

AS a motorist depends on his automobile to carry him to his destination, so does the theatre owner depend upon a "full house" to bring him ample returns. The larger the investment in your theatre, the more important becomes the necessity to eliminate waste space.

It is, therefore, both an engineering and an architectural problem not only dealing with the chair itself, but with the correct seating arrangement to give greatest capacity without crowding or obstructing view.



Cooperation on this all important problem of increasing or attaining full capacity can be secured from our Theatre Engineering Seating Department who offers to lay out the floor plan, free of charge, thereby giving you the benefit of the experience gained through equipping America's Foremost Theatres.

It is a recommendation the American Seating Company is proud of that our theatre chairs and service have been chosen by so many theatres of note. You cannot go wrong to follow their verdict.

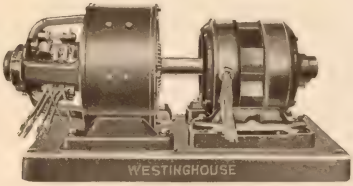
Electrical-Equipment for

No part of the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre is more important than the electrical equipment for projecting the picture on the screen.

The experience of Westinghouse in designing motor-generator equipment for motion picture projection means much when made use of. This experience has been acquired by actual contact with the various problems of better projection, affording a thorough knowledge of the apparatus necessary to produce the best results.



Westinghouse equipment is sold through distributors who are representative dealers in the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre—they have complete information on Westinghouse Motion Picture Projection Equipment and will be glad to assist you in selecting the proper electrical equipment for your theatre.

Ninth International Purchasing Agents' Convention for Boston

BOSTON is one of the most popular convention cities in the United States and in the course of a year, hundreds of organizations gather in the "Hub" for their annual meeting and other similar events. Consequently the coming of a single convention is ordinarily no signal for any particular demonstration of interest or enthusiasm no the part of business men, merchants, and manufacturers.

But there is a convention coming to Boston next May which is of utmost significance to all manufacturers. The clue to the secret is PURCHASING AGENT from every city in the United States—from Maine to Florida and from Oregon to California. The purchasing agents of this country will pour into Boston during the week of May 19th, 1924, to attend the Ninth Annual Purchasing Agents' Convention and informashow to be held under the auspices of the National Association of Purchasing Agents.

Here will be assembled in Boston for the first time the very men whose sole job is to buy and who are the men on whom manufacturers are concentrating their sales efforts week in and week out. And now, for an entire week, instead of the purchasing agents sitting in their offices and being visited by your salesmen, they will be here in Boston, ready and willing to be shown whatever manufacturers have to show them. The Convention is really the manufacturer's opportunity. It is up to the producers throughout the country to show the purchasing agents why and how their products are superior and why their order blanks should bear the name of those products on the next purchase of supplies, equipment, or products of any sort.

As a part of the Convention the Association conducts as exhibition known as "The Informashow." Because of the size of the meeting, there will be at least three thousand purchasing agents present, and in order to furnish the necessary floor space, the Convention is going to be held in Mechanics Building, the largest exhibition hall in Boston. Manufacturers should be interested and arrangements for exhibition space should be made at once. The Purchasing Agents Association of this district will be glad to cooperate with you. This meeting is one of the finest opportunities that manufacturers have had for years in which to demonstrate the quality of their products to the very men they most want to reach. It is an opportunity that should not be overlooked.

Explosions Photographed by DuPont

A new one reel motion picture has just been completed by the duPont Company entitled "Dynamite at Work," which shows the use of that explosive in various parts of the country and under various conditions. Views of some of the largest dynamite shots made during the past year, where thousands of pounds of the explosives were used, are featured. One highly interesting view is that of a slow motion picture shot of some 45,000 pounds of dynamite taken in a quarry. Other interesting views show the breaking of an ice jam, tearing down an old building, digging ditches in mosquito control work, blowing out stumps, and clearing roads of snow in the Rocky Mountains.

Another picture entitled "Dynamite in Quarry Work," has also been prepared. This is also a one-reel picture. Both pictures are available on request to the company.

Correction Concerning "Commerce Reports"

With regard to recent figures on foreign trade in projection apparatus printed in these columns which were taken from "Commerce Reports," the following is a correction which was due to probable errors on the part of the government printer.

"Attention is called to the following errors in the 'Survey of specialty exports' for November, on page 17 of the January 7 issue of COMMERCE REPORTS. In the table 'Value of specialties exported from the United States' the figure '$3300,418,' which represents the exports of general hardware, except heavy hardware for October, 1923, should read '$3,-300,413.' The figure '$337,995,' in the same table, covering exports of projection apparatus for October, 1923, should read '$37,995.' Finally the heading 'October, 1922,' in the table "United States exports of office appliances' should read 'October, 1923."

Neal & Allender Building in Spokane, Wash.

Immediate erection of a new $50,000 motion picture theatre at Spokane, Wash., has been announced by R. E. Neal and J. W. Allender of the theatrical firm of Neal & Allender, who now own and operate the Casino, Class A, Majestic and Lyric theatres in Spokane.

The theatre will be built by reconstructing the John G. Heiber building at W. 520 Main Avenue, is to develop from a two-story brick building now located on the lot, 35 by 120 feet, and involves a long-time lease on the property, covered by a mortgage of $45,000.

Erection of the building will be under direction of Westcott & Gifford, architects, who are drawing the plans. Construction will start at once, and the theatre will be ready to open by about March 1, according to Mr. Allender.

A name for the new theatre has not been announced as yet.

"We will construct one of the most modern and completely equipped picture houses in the Northwest," said Mr. Allender. "It will have a seating capacity of about 600, a large pipe organ and other fixtures costing about $20,000.

"The building will be absolutely fireproof, of reinforced concrete construction. An elaborate stucco lighting system is being planned."

Phenomenon of Refraction Plays Important Part in Projection

Lesson 1 — Part IV

Polarized Light

THE phenomenon of refraction plays an extremely important part in projection. It is, to tell the truth, the very basis of Opties. Without it, vision itself would be impossible since the lens action of the eye would not take place.

Refraction occurs at the point where light passes from one medium to another of different optical density. It is manifested by a bending of the light rays due to a change in the velocity of the light as it leaves one medium and enters another. The velocity of the light may be either increased or decreased depending upon whether the density of the first medium is less or greater than that of the second. A convenient means of determining the total amount of the bending of the light rays, when the angle at which they strike the second medium, is known, is provided by the index of refraction. This numerical figure, fos any particular substance is a constant since it represents the ratio of the velocity of light in air to the velocity of light in the particular substance in question.

Plane Objects

Since the angle at which the light ray strikes the surface of the second object controls, to a certain degree, the amount of bending the shape of the object will therefore have an important bearing on the final direction of the light ray as it issues again from the second object. A piece of ordinary window glass, causes only a shifting of the entering beam to one side, depending upon the thickness of glass. This is due to the fact that the bending of the ray as it enters one side of the glass is exactly compensated for as it leaves the opposite side as shown in Fig. 6.

A lens is nothing more than a piece of special glass having a high bending power and with its surfaces so shaped as to afford special control over the direction of the emerging rays.

Opaque Objects

From a previous definition of an opaque object, as being one which permitted no light to pass thru, it would seem that such an object would have no index of refraction for the simple reason that no light entered it. This, however, is not strictly true. Certain opaque objects do refract light and hence have a definite index of refraction.

It was pointed out before that the terms translucent and opaque are, in a sense, but relative. For instance, water, which certainly falls in the transparent or translucent class depending upon how clear it is, may become entirely opaque to light if the depth of the water is great enough. There is no light at the bottom of the ocean and the fish which inhabit the lower regions of the seas are not provided with eyes since they could not see anything even if they were.

Then too, objects which ordinarily are considered as being entirely opaque, as for instance, gold and wood, when made into extremely thin leaves or shavings become translucent and transmit light.

The question naturally arises, therefore, do such substances refract the light which passes through them? The answer to this question lies in a study of the action of polarized light.

Light Vibrations

Light, as was explained before, consists of extremely rapid ether vibrations in a direction at right angles to the direction in which the light wave is traveling. Now the common understanding of these vibrations is that they occur in every possible direction at right angles to the axis of the wave. Thus, in Fig. 7-A at a certain particular instant the vibrations may be in the direction of the arrows as indicated by 1—1; at the next instant the vibrations may have changed to direction 2—2 and a moment later to 3—3, then to 4—4, 5—5 and so on until the entire circle has been covered by the vibrations. Furthermore, these vibrations never occur twice in the same direction but are constantly changing.

Now it is possible to consider all of the vibrations shown in Fig. 7-A as occurring in two principal directions, one vertical and the other horizontal. Thus, the particular vibration shown in Fig. 7-B could be split up, or resolved into two other vibrations both at right angles to each other, one vertical and the other horizontal. These two components are shown in Fig. 7-C. The original main vibration is shown dotted. In a similar manner, all other vibrations occurring at an angle can be resolved into vertical and horizontal vibrations so that it is therefore possible to consider all the vibrations as occuring in these two directions.

Polarized Light

When a wave of light strikes the surface of a piece of polished glass, part of the light is reflected and the rest enters the glass and is refracted as shown in Fig. 8. The relative amounts of reflected and transmitted light depends upon the angle at which the light strikes the glass. In the case of ordinary window glass there is one particular angle, however, at which a peculiar phenomenon takes place.

When the light strikes the glass at 57 degrees it is divided up into the two principal vibrations described before, vertical and horizonal. The vertical vibrations are reflected and the horizontal vibrations are transmitted, Fig 8. The reflected vibrations are called polarized light.

It is a peculiar property of polarized light that certain mineral crystals will absorb the vibrations when turned in a certain direction and pass them when turned at right angles to the first direction. This fact, among others, is made use of in the testing of sugar to determine its composition.

The principal property of light, polarized by reflection, as just described, as far as we are concerned, however, that the polarized ray makes an angle of 90 degrees with the refracted ray (Fig. 8). This is known as Brewster's Law and knowing this fact it is easy to determine the index of refraction of such opaque objects as gold leaf and other similar objects since the angle of polarization is easily determined whereupon the refracted ray will line 90 degrees ahead of the reflected polarized ray.

Thus the index of refraction of opaque objects, which at first thought seems impossible of accomplishment, is obtained in a roundabout manner none the less accurate, however.

New Debrie Interview Camera Now Available

A new interviewing camera is the latest addition to the regular line of Debrie Cameras manufactured by Andre Debrie of Paris. This Camera has just been received by their Agents the Motion Picture Apparatus Co. Inc. New York City.

It is particularly placed on the market for newsmen, but also makes an ideal outfit for general outdoor work. It is very light and compact, weighs only fourteen pounds, and is made exactly like the Professional Debrie with the same movement and body construction of five ply walnut, excepting the automatic dissolving shutter and other attachments only necessary where big production work is done.

Some of the features of the Interview Camera are as follows:

Quick lens changing device; Focusing and diaphragm bars that can be operated from the rear; Film reverse; Take up; Film punch; Direct Focus tube to aperature.

In order to introduce this camera to the trade, it is reported, the manufacturers of this outfit have put a low price on the camera fitted with a two inch F3.5 Tessar lens, two magazines and case for camera.

Moore Amusement Co. Lets Contract for "Olympia"

H. T. Moore, president and general manager of the Moore Theatrical and Amusement Company of Tacoma, Wash., last week announced that his company had let contracts for the construction of a first run, high class house in Olympia, the capital of the state. The house is to be built on a large downtown site, and will probably be two or more stories in height, with stores on the ground floor and possibly a number of offices above the theatre in the new building. It is expected that the house will be operated under the direction of the Jensen-VonHerberg circuit, as are the Moore Theatres in Tacoma.

Newsettes From Theatres in the Southwest

F. Brownlett has purchased the Opera House at Campbell, Nebr., and will conduct same as a first class motion picture theatre.

G. T. Littlepage is operating a motion picture theatre at Manchester, Okla. He is using Mazda equipment which was installed by Trouco Theatre Supply, Enid, Okla.

L. Chamberlin has taken over the manage ment of the DeGrew Theatre at Brookfield, Mo.

G. L. DeNune has recently purchased the Lincoln Theatre at Fulton, Ill., and will remodel same at an early date.

Joseph Solly Secures Lease on the "Metropolis"

Jerome Rosenberg, son of the late Henry Rosenberg, who built the Metropolis Theatre at 142nd St. and Third Ave., New York City, in 1899 and operated it for fifteen years, has leased the house to Joseph Solly for ten years beginning May 1st next. For the last six years it has been a motion picture house. It will be devoted to productions by a stock company managed by Mr. Solly, who was formerly connected with the Blaney Stock Company and is also the lessee of the McKinley Square Theatre, New York City.

Minsky Bros. to Erect Theatre on East Side

Minsky Brothers have purchased the realty of Frederick Koutina on the north side of East Houston Street, New York City, 70 feet west of the Bowery, which they intend to improve with a theatre to seat 2,000 persons with roof garden. It will be built from plans made by George Kiester, Architect. On the site are old flats said to be among the first erected in the city. The Minsky Brothers built the National Theatre at the southwest corner of Second Avenue and Houston Street. P. M. Clear & Co. and John A. Schoen were the brokers in the deal.

NEW YORK

Brooklyn—The Borough Hall Realty Corp., 44 Court St., is having sketches drawn for a $500,000 brick theatre buildiing on the northeast corner of Vernon Ave. and Nostrand.

New York City—Another new theatre estimated at $250,000 is to be built on 1662-6 Broadway, running through Seventh Ave. Property fronts 60 feet on Broadway, 60 feet on 7th Ave., and has a depth of 170 feet. Seating capacity to be 1500, plans prepared by Schloss & Orlando.

View of the exterior of the Tivoli Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal. The design of this front harmonizes with that of the interior

Tulsa, Okla., Scheduled for New Picture Palace

Tulsa, Okla., it is reported, is to have one of the best theatres in the state in the new Orpheum theatre, costing $760,000, which will feature motion pictures and vaudeville. The new house, which will be located on West Fourth street, was designed by John Eberson of Chicago and will seat 1,500 persons on the first floor and balcony. Brickney & Garbett of Tulsa have the general contract, while the decorating will be supervised by Mandel Brothers of Chicago. The structure, faced in terra cotta, will be five stories in height. Powers projection machines, a transverter, Minusa screen and stage lighting fixtures are included in the contract with Witmark, Chicago. Seats will be furnished by the American Seating Company, while the Vento heating system will be used. Carpets and furniture will be supplied by the Karpen Company of Tulsa.

Good Supply Business Reported in Northwest

The supply business continues good despite zero temperatures in the northwest, according to President Bradley, of the United States Theatre Supply Company, Omaha, Nebraska, who reports a number of Motiograph sales including a G. E. Mazda Unit to the Lyric Theatre, Presho, South Dakota, and a complete Motiograph equipment and new steel booth to the Methodist Church, Yankton, South Dakota. The latter sale was made after a committee from the church came to Omaha and inspected the booths and projection at the World, Sun and Empress Theatres.

Trout Purchases New Trouco Theatre Supply Co.

Wesley Trout of Enid, Okla., has purchased the entire interest of the Trouco Theatre Supply Company and will sell theatre supplies through the new company under the name of Wesley Trout, Theatre Supplies, Enid, Ok'a. Reports are that business has been very satisfactory with this supply house in the southwest.

"Daddies" — Warners Strand, New York

Herald—"A more generally appealing and amusing comedy than this has not been seen on Broadway during the present season. Those assembled yesterday to witness the first performance gave every evidence possible of having a highly enjoyable time."

Louella O. Parsons, American —"We have an idea most people will like 'Daddies.'"

Sun and Globe—"You should see the old bachelors trying to amuse the kids. And you should see the kids make life hell for the old bachelors. Harry Myers as usual gives one of his amusing characterizations. 'Daddies' is amusing."

Journal — "The comedy is lightly handled, very well acted and amusing. The efforts of four bacheors to take care of their allotment of orphans is ridiculously effectively. . . ."

Evening World—"Mae Marsh was the same old heart-string puller. Perhaps there is none on the screen who can smile through her tears, or vica versa, with quite the effect that this star does . . . There is comedy in this picture. . . . It's bound to be a success."

Telegram—"Children are such excellent actors on the screen that the transfer of "Daddies" with its happy youngsters from the stage to the film was a happy choice. . . . It is even better on 'the movies' than it was in the speakies. And that is high praise."

Telegraph—"Warner Brothers have managed to instill into Mr. Belasco's erstwhile play a comic flavor which, pictorially, is as entertaining as the original stage version by John L. Hobble."

"Scaramouche," Metro — Duval, Jackinsonville

Times-Union — "Ingram's greatest screen production. It is a beautiful production from a scenic and photographic point of view and a vivid picture of that time of the world's history."

Journal—"For completeness, perfection, continuity and interest, Rex Ingram's 'Scaramouche' has perhaps never been equalled in photoplay history. It is more than a motion picture. It is a visualization of a period in the world's history that everyone must be thrilled by."

"The White Sister" — Metro Garrick, St. Paul

Pioneer Press—"Lillian Gish adds another pathetic and beautiful characterization of film history in 'The White Sister.' It is a picture of delicate colorings and deep emotions. Miss Gish displays all her old charm. More than any other actress she has the gift of endowing a love scene with delicable grace and ineffable tenderness."

Daily News—"'The White Sister' was greeted as it deserved to be greeted—by large, uncommonly enthusiastic crowds. For it is an enthralling photoplay, sincerely and magnificently made. Beautifully picturesque and occasionally very spectacular it is characterized nevertheless by an admirable simplicity."

"The Call of the Wild"—Pathe —Majestic, Portland, Oregon

Morning Oregonian — "The Call of the Wild" on the Majestic Theatre's screen this week, is an interesting story and a very intelligent dog has connived to effect in this one of the best animal pictures of the season. There is a certain appealing wistfulness and a sadly sympathetic nature about Buck, the big St. Bernard, that immediately thrusts him into the fore as the hero of the picture."

Oregon Daily Journal—"A Man with a dog's intelligence is not commendable, but in 'The Call of the Wild' on the Majestic screen this week walks a dog whose comprehension, ability and demeanor would do credit to anyone. This new star eclipses certain screen satellites like the queen's jewels in a pawnshop. His dignity and ease could serve as an example of real art in the artificial sphere of prototype screen characterizations."

"Maytime"—Preferred Pantheon, Cleveland

Blade—"'Maytime' is interesting and enjoyable throughout. The settings and costumes are unusually beautiful and picturesque."

"Maytime" — Preferred — Grand, Columbus

Citizen—"Romance and Spring are the motives of the picture, and they are beautifully carried out in settings which rival anything ever done on the screne. The fascinating loveliness of Ethel Shannon is one of the beautiful things. The best thing to say about this picture is, 'go and see it.' It is inspirational."

"The Virginian" — Preferred— Strand, Canton

News—"The atmosphere of the west has never been more sincerely depicted on the screen than in 'The Virginian.' Its faithful treatment and the human qualities of its action bring Owen Wister's famous story to the screen with a fidelity that few pictures have been able to attain.

"It is not lacking in action and the dramatic punches have all been retained. Further than that, they are all handled so capably that their realism is foremost all the time."

"The Virginian" — Preferred Monroe, Chicago.

Mac Tince in Tribune—"'The Virginian,' one of the sweetest western love stories ever told has come to the screen. Owen Wister, who wrote the novel should like this picture."

The Post—"'The Virginian' some time ago set the pattern for western stories and none which have followed it have been more vital, more picturesque, or filled with quaint humor vying with appealing human interest. All the parts you liked best have been remembered."

Ashton Stevens — Herald and Examiner—"My hat is off to Tom Forman and to every member of the cast' it is a hat-waving day for me as far as 'The Virginian' is concerned. They have made a delightful, decent and moving picture show."

Bob Reel — American — "Preferred Pictures has scored again. With 'The Virginian' it has put forth a film guaranteed to make something more than an hour pass pleasantly. The characters appear as human beings, Kenneth Harlan is likeable as the chief character, and Florence Vidor, an actress of great ability, brings to her part a simplicity and directness thoroughly appealing."

"My Man" — Vitagraph — Rialto, New York

Sun and Globe—"'My Man' is much better than several more pretentious and sophisticated features in town at present. Dustin Farnum plays the powerful politician. He does it very well too. He gives him a bit of a sense of humor which is refreshing. Patsy Ruth Miller is the girl. In 'My Man' she is lovely."

Evening World—"Dustin Farnum and Patsy Ruth Miller carry off the honors and the 'he-man' introduces some caveman tactics in his lovemaking that are novel."

American—"David Smith, who directed the picture, has undoubtedly made a good box office attraction."

Telegram and Mail—"David Smith has turned it into a lively screen play and at the Rialto Theatre this week it goes along like a breeze."

Tribune—"Patsy Ruth Miller is the sweet and attractive heroine and a very good actress she is, too."

BULLETIN

A NEW name will have to be invented for the kind of picture James Cruze has made in "The Fighting Coward."

It is a terrific drama—the drama of a pretty boy being turned by scorn into a man-eater! but it is drama blown across by gale after gale of laughter, absolutely uncontrolable delight at seeing milk curdled to blood!

This picture kids the whole tradition of risking your life for a hasty word.

There are so many well-calculated insults and guns pulled that you feel sure you won't be able to draw four more breaths before somebody passes out!

And pass out they do, with the audience's motometer showing ever higher temperature!

"The Fighting Coward" not only opens a great new vein of drama and comedy drenched with a new kind of nervous excitement and surprise, but it absolutely convinces you that Cruze and all the cast had a wonderful time making it!

Get This!

(1) James Cruze will go down in history as the director who could make a reverberating, world-beating success such as "The Covered Wagon," and then have the versatility to create an entirely new genre in high-voltage satiric drama.

(2) However much you may have enjoyed Ernest Torrence in the past you will know for a fact, after seeing this picture, that he has the film world by the tail in any part he cares to undertake. Torrence is the world's finest fancier of grotesqueries, mild or murderous!

(3) Let this picture once circulate a bit and the name Cullen Landis will mean the same as Money to you. He's the gentle lad who learns to eat 'em alive and order ham and eggs between homicides.

(4) When the footage is showing that contains Noah Beery people will be scared to blink their eyes for fear of missing a fraction of an inch. He hurts your ribs with laughter.

(5) Mary Astor and Phyllis Haver provide the feminine charm about which all these heroes circulate.

If after seeing it, any exhibitor can place his hand on his heart and honestly swear that he did not enjoy it like beef-steak after a day's fast, why, we will buy him the most expensive derby on Fifth Avenue.

"The Fighting Coward" will create its own audiences everywhere after one showing. Get 'em in once and Human Nature will do the rest.

"THE FIGHTING COWARD" did $11,000 on Saturday and Sunday at the Metropolitan, Los Angeles. It would have broken all records excepting for very warm weather. The picture is 100% and will build up big.

"SHADOWS OF PARIS" broke every house record at the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, getting $21,511 paid admissions, 41,993 people.

("Shadows of Paris" stars Pola Negri. A Herbert Brenon Production. Supported by Adolphe Menjou, Charles de Roche, Huntly Gordon. From "Mon Homme" by Andre Picard and Francis Carco. Adapted by Fred Jackson. Screen play by Eve Unsell.)

"THE STRANGER" did $3,567 on Saturday at the Missouri, St. Louis. Got $6,677 on Sunday, breaking house record for one day. Forced to put on extra show at 11 P. M. to accommodate crowds.

("The Stranger" is Joseph Henabery's production of John Galsworthy's "The First and the Last," with Betty Compson, Richard Dix, Lewis Stone, Tully Marshall. Adapted by Edfrid Bingham.)

SPECIAL SHORT SUBJECT NEWS

There's Nothing Like Universal Short Subjects to put "Pep" Into Your Show

"SHOULD POKER PLAYERS MARRY?" is the title of this uproarious one-reel comedy, and the exhibitor who plays this one with Bert Roach, Neely Edwards and Alice Howell will certainly be the big winner!

"Fast Steppers" Are Different

UNIVERSAL is making no secret of the fact that they are greatly excited and highly enthusiastic over their forthcoming series of two reel features of the turf. "Fast Steppers". Billy Sullivan, the popular star of the great "Leather Pushers" series, is featured as "The Information Kid" and is supported by a splendid cast. Exhibitors are promised something entirely new and decidedly different in this race track series of youthful romance and adventure.

International News Reel No. 19

CONTAINS: Nimazu, Japan—Boy Scouts in wedding review for Prince Regent, Prince Hirohito and his bride. Boston, Mass.—Airplane on skis lands safely on river ice. Two Reel Western Not to Be Discontinued

Twelve More to Be Made

UNIVERSAL is proving with its smashing array of stars and directors that two-reel westerns can be real features on any program. This year's two-reel western series is simply a revelation to oldtime showmen who've only needed to see them to book them—and find them box-office sensations! With such stars as Jack Mower, Helen Gibson, King Fisher Jones, Kent Sanderson, Harry Carey, Bob Reeves, Pete Morrison and Kingsley Benedict, you can't help but get them in and feel their great box-office drawing power!

The "Gumps" Still Going Strong

ANDY, Min and little Chester are still on the job and as usual they are among the outstanding comedy characters of the year. These Universal "mirthquakes" in two reels are putting laughs into many programs—every fan knows "The Gumps" from their funny paper—they are based on the nationally famous newspaper comic strip by Sidney Smith. Many papers carry the feature as a colored page in their comic section. Cash in on this great national exploitation.

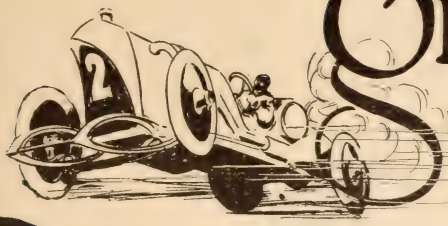
Leather Pushers Now in Fourth Series

EVERY exhibitor knows of the results obtained by the first, second and third series of the "Leather Pushers". The fourth series is the best of them all. Handsome and dashing Billy Sullivan, nephew of the great John L. Sullivan is featured. Young Sullivan is one of the fastest lightweights in the ring and knows just where to put the punch into the "Leather Pusher" series. They are full of lightning action, real romance and titles that make your audience ask for more.

Baby Peggy is the Idol of the Fans

HERE'S a "short" of Baby Peggy that is a knockout. Just read this review: "Peggy in the uniform of the mounted goes out to round up a smuggling gang.

One thrilling escapade follows closely upon another, until by a clever ruse she captures the entire outfit. This is a winner and rarely has the popular Baby Peggy been seen to better advantage."



—The Motion Picture News

Now You Can Book Valentino

NOW is the time to cash in on the tremendous pulling power of Valentino. Live exhibitors everywhere are taking advantage of Universal's splendid two-reel de luxe re-issue of his popular feature success, "A Society Sensation." Note these bookings: Strand Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Fox's Washington, Detroit, Mich.; Kinema Salt Lake City, Utah; Sun Theatre, Omaha, Neb.; Cameo, Oil City, Pa.; Capitol, McKeesport Pa. Chester J. Smith in Motion Picture News, says:

"Rudolph Valentino has all the charm of manner and appearance in this two-reeler as in his more recent productions. It is a fast moving story, well acted. It is bound to be a winner in any house."

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Vitagraph Latest Points Strong Moral

"LET NOT MAN PUT ASUNDER," a Vitagraph Production directed by J. Stuart Blackton, from Basil King's story of the same title, featuring Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellegen, supported by a competent cast.

"Let Not Man Put Asunder" is splendid entertainment and leaves in its wake many points for serious minded people to think about. The production is lavishly staged and in its direction shows an attention to detail and continuity which will probably cause it to be ranked as the best production J. Stuart Blackton has yet given to the screen.

Strong drawing power is added to the picture by the two principals, Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellegen and both are cast in parts which allow full play of their exceptional talents.

The supporting cast is excellent. Leslie Austen as Harry Vassall, the rich young Bostonian husband about whose marital troubles a large portion of the plot revolves, deserves special mention.

"Let Not Man Put Asunder"

A strong showmanship angle in connection with this production is the fact that it is builded on a subject which is being given serious consideration at the present time as evidenced by the space given it by the newspapers. It is a patronage pulling picture. This is shown by the good business it is doing at the Rialto in New York.

The technical details of the picture are well handled and it is portrayed by a cast which presents Lou Tellegen in a forceful role and marks the return of Pauline Frederick after being absent from the screen for some time.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAID:

NEW YORK SUN and GLOBE:

"My Man" is much better than several more pretentious and sophisticated features in town at present. Dustin Farnum plays the powerful politician. He does it very well, too. He gives him a bit of a sense of humor which is refreshing. Patsy Ruth Miller is the girl. In "My Man" she is lovely.

NEW YORK EVENING WORLD:

Dustin Farnum and Patsy Ruth Miller carry off the honors, and the "he-man" introduces some cave man tactics in his love-making that are novel.

NEW YORK AMERICAN:

David Smith, who directed the picture, has undoubtedly made a good box office attraction.

NEW YORK TELEGRAM and MAIL:

David Smith has turned it into a lively screen play and at the Rialto Theatre this week it goes along like a breeze.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE:

Patsy Ruth Miller is the sweet and attractive heroine and a very good actress she is, too.

The Distribution Dynamo

A. N. SMALLWOOD in the fourth of a series of open letters on distribution, tackles the subject of advertising and right there, in our opinion, he goes to the root of his subject.

We do not say this because, as a trade paper, it is our manifest interest to promote advertising.

We are considering the trade paper only as a part of the general advertising effort the ultimate aim of which is levelled at the consumer or theatre patron.

But we do believe, with many others, that advertising is the mightiest factor in picture distribution and sales.

We do believe, with many others, that with a worth while picture the exploitation problem and the exploitation appropriation are of equal importance with the problem of production and production expense.

And we have always felt that advertising, properly utilized, could knock first run theatre control, or any other kind of artificial control of avenues to the public into a cocked hat.

The picture comes first, yes; the goods always do in any field; but after that the one force that eventually will rule and economically regulate the industry — especially its distribution scheme — is advertising.

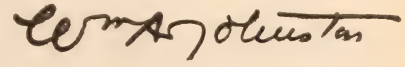
We may not realize that as yet — fully; but we will.

* * * * *

It is not our purpose here to review Mr. Smallwood's letter; but since the matter of trade paper advertising is brought up we can cite a few salient and perhaps surprising facts.

It is generally believed by the producer that the distributor gives him a trade paper advertising appropriation of about $5000. on a good salable picture.

Far from it. $500. is about the mark.



I have before me the trade advertising effort in Motion Picture News on all the 1923 pictures of several prominent producer-distributors. Some pictures have one or two pages, some two or three with a further mention here and there on other pages; this is about the average amount.

In other words the pictures are just barely announced at release date; and there it ends. Perhaps that is all some of the pictures deserve. But what of the good ones? Some are scoring first runs, breaking records here and there, enjoying longer runs, successful exploitation and presentations; and the exhibitor buyer is looking for just this information. He needs it. Does he get it? No, not as fully as he should, and as the distributor could profitably give it to him.

This, we submit, is not merchandising; and from the exhibitor's standpoint it is not adequate service. A bare 1 per cent of the picture's gross goes into trade paper advertising; and worse still, the head office of many a picture company doesn't know why it's being done anyway.

* * * * *

But there are hopeful signs on the horizon. Advertising is as essential as pictures to this industry, and just because we have been wholly intent upon pictures is no sign that advertising will be left in the dark ages. Advertising is coming into its own. Mr. Smallwood says we'll be spending maybe $20,000,000 a year in national campaigns. That is but 14 per cent of what is spent in production.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

SOME forceful arguments are presented on the subject of Advertising, Exploitation and the Exhibition Value of Pictures by Arthur N. Smallwood, in an open letter addressed to newspaper publishers and the film trade press. We quote from the letter:

"Manufacturers in other lines profitably expend amounts exceeding ten percent of their total sales for Advertising. But in the motion picture industry, where the exhibition value of the product and its ability to attract patrons to the box-office are dependent largely upon advertising and other exploitation, the percentage allotted is less than two percent; whereas if there is any business in which a twenty per cent appropriation should be the rule, it is the motion picture business—a slow business wherein the value of the wares is determined not by manufacturing cost but by intangible qualities that cause people to plank down good money at the box-office.

..."When the independent producer gets proper distribution for his pictures, you newspaper and trade paper publishers will find hundred thousand dollar appropriations for advertising a regular thing; and furthermore, the producer-distributors will be forced into similar advertising and merchandising channels, resulting in there being no less than four pictures a week, or two hundred and eight per annum being exploited through the newspapers, with appropriations that will readily average $100,000 each—or more than $20,000,000 per year!

"While ten per cent of its production cost is too much to spend for advertising a poor picture, one hundred per cent of its production cost on good pictures not costing more than $100,000, is not too much to spend for advertising in newspapers and the trade press. I discount the value of national magazine advertising, and I am supported in this view by thousands of exhibitors. It is more detrimental than helpful to the majority of theatre owners. It is released at a time when a picture is playing a few metropolitan centers, but stamps a picture as old and out-of-date by the time it reaches smaller towns, several months or a year later."

"This motion picture producer advertising investment in newspapers throughout the country will enhance the exhibition values of the pictures advertised to exhibitors throughout the country; it will assure the independent producer first run representation and enable him to get quick bookings and play dates from exhibitors in each territory who will want maximum benefit from the producer advertising. This advertising will also enable the producer to get all available business from a given territory within twelve or fifteen months after initial showing—instead of having it dragged out over a period of two or three years—thus enabling the producer to limit his contract with the selling organization to eighteen months and permit the re-editing and re-issue of big proven attractions, with new prints and a new advertising campaign, within two or three years after its premier showing. Proven successes on the legitimate stage are put on the road year after year with profit to the producer, and this condition can be brought about in the motion picture industry. Intensive advertising and selling will reveal those pictures that can so survive.

"The A. N. P. A. may well take cognizance of the necessity for reform in motion picture distribution, and foster such a reform in view of its new business potentialities. The motion picture trade press is aware of the need for such reform and should openly champion it. The motion picture exhibitor who doesn't wish to be throttled by monopoly and who wants better box-office attractions should actively interest himself in speeding the day when the new order of things shall be functioning. Branch managers and salesmen should be vitally interested because of the bigger opportunities for profitable employment to be presented them.

"And the American Railway Express Company should be vitally interested because, as agency for physical distribution, they would come into tens of millions of dollars of new business.

EDWARD EARL, President of the Nicholas Power Company, who has been extremely ill for the past year, and, who has recently been recuperating at Atlantic City, has returned to New York and is being greeted by his many friends. This latter phrase is too bromidic. We don't like it but for once at least it means just that: "his many friends." Everyone who knows Edward Earl wants to count him a friend; and every friend wants him back in harness again, well and sound.

As a matter of fact, he has never been out of harness all his busy life; even in the hospital the past year he has kept in active touch with his many business affairs. In addition to the Nicholas Power Presidency he has acted as first executive of two other concerns and Vice President of a third, as well as executor of several estates. With all his interests, however, he has devoted himself energetically and sympathetically to the picture industry and he is one of the men of whose association we are proud.

THAT was a remarkable collection of letters and telegrams which came pouring in upon the occasion of the recent luncheon given by the industry in honor of Thomas A. Edison. The Committee, headed by George Kleine, received messages from many men in many walks of life, and it must have warmed the Wizard's heart when he heard these testimonials to his eminent services to mankind.

President Coolidge wrote:

"Thank you for letting me know of the plan for the testimonial dinner your committee is giving in honor of Thomas A. Edison. On Mr. Edison's birthday I wired him my congratulations and added: 'I assume that as always, you are merely doing the day's work. I hope, for your sake and that of your clientele, which is all humanity, that you will have many more anniversaries of the same kind to spend in the same way.' Please renew my assurances of felicitation to Mr. Edison, with every kind hope for himself, his great work, and his further happiness."

And David Lloyd George cabled:

"Take greatest possible pleasure adding my quota to tribute of gratitude and praise you are laying today feet Thomas Edison. His contribution to progress, welfare of humanity is alike wonderful in its variety and amazing in its range. Rejoice especially that in a green and vigorous age he is himself witness of hold he has on esteem, admiration and gratitude not only of his own country but of whole world."

Other messages from overseas were forwarded by Charles M. Schwab, Frank Tilley, editor of The Kinematograph Weekly, London; Col. A. C. Bromhead; and Editor Cabourn of the Bisoscope, London.

Several United States Senators raised their voices in praise of Mr. Edison. This group included Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota? Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts; and Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia.

A cabled report that a "Marcus Loew" had won several hundred thousand francs at baccarat in France caused considerable commotion around the Loew offices one day this week. The only difficulty with the story is that Marcus Loew is at Palm Beach and not in France. Arthur Loew, his son, is in Europe. David Loew, another son, who is in New York, cabled his brother: "Congratulations if it is you; investigate, if it is not." Still, if Marcus had been in France and had participated in the little game referred to, there are plenty of people who will tell you that the report would have been substantially correct.

"WILL Radio Follow the Movies?" queries James E. Cartier, in the Radio Section of the New York Herald. He believes the two will have a common cause—the advancement of the human mind, and declares there is no conflict between them.

A remarkable parallel in origin and growth is pointed out by the Herald writer. "Radio is still but an infant. Its scope is its power. Its thrills comes from its already great achievements. The motion picture came forth under similar circumstances. A few faithful and tireless minds conceived the motion picture, foresaw its possibilities, developed it and gave a great brain child to the world. And the movies, too, are only in their infancy. Their scope is their power. Their wonders have been working steadily for close to a score of years.

"There is ample room in the hearts of the average man, woman and child for both the radio and the movie bugs," he continued. "And the reason is that cooperation has already been effected in many places whereby these brother industries have helped each other.

"The progressive exhibitor welcomes exploitation of his coming attractions. The progressive broadcasting station welcomes the chance to popularize its programs. All entertainers thrive on publicity. Motion picture artists, soloists and orchestras from motion pitcure houses have often appeared on broadcasting programs. Many direct wires have been laid to theaters to transmit actual performances. Pictures and their people and radio and its people can combine to popularize each other. It has been done.

"So much for entertainment. The good picture and the serial program will each continue in its same potentiality, and the drawing power of each can be enchanced by intelligent teamwork.

"Some have predicted the radio motion picture. Of this there is little use to say aught now. If it is to come nothing will stop it. It will unite these two wonderful and powerful children and lead them together to new conquests and new glories."

THE 77th Birthday of Thomas Edison, recently observed in the motion picture industry, was of more than ordinary interest in Ottawa, Ontario, because of the local connection with the first public presentation with the projection machine of Mr. Edison by Andrew Holland and his brother, who were residents of the Canadian Capital.

Mr. Edison wrote to the Holland Brothers as follows:

"I am pleased to hear that the first public exhibition of my Kinetoscope has been a success under your management and hope your firm will continue to be associated with its further exploitation."

The latter was exhibited in Ottawa in connection with the recent Edison anniversary celebration.

TRANS-ATLANTIC passengers traveling via the Cunard-Liners will have something else to gaze upon other than the daily log of their journey. In order to enlist their attention photographs of the Capitol Grand Orchestra have been hung in the concert salons of the boats. The photographs should interest music lovers en route to America — and will remind American tourists of what they will miss during their travels abroad.

RADIO artists, who have performed at most of the larger broad-casting stations, are being assembled for "Radio Artists Week" at Loew's State Theatre, March 3rd. Five evenings during the week the programs of WHN will be broadcasted from the state in full view of the audience. Harry Richman, Lew Gold and his Wigwam orchestra, and Loretta McDermott, frequently heard over WHN have been added as the regular vaudeville headliners of the program.

George R. Chester Dies Suddenly

Famous as Creator of Wallingford Series, and Writer and Director of Pictures

GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER, short story and scenario writer and famous for his "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" series, died suddenly of heart failure, February 2, at his apartment at 26 West Ninth street, New York City. He was 54 years old.

Born in Cincinnati, Mr. Chester, after a newspaper career, became a short story writer and his Wallingford series brought him fame.

Mr. Chester's connection with the motion picture industry came about through his submitting his published stories to Vitagraph. When these stories, the first of which was entitled "The Enemy," were put into production he came into personal contact with A. E. Smith, president of Vitagraph. Mr. Smith prevailed upon him to accept the position of Scenario Editor for the company and he handled the production of the "star series."

Later, when Vitagraph branched out into the field of "super-productions," Mr. Chester was placed in charge of the handling of the stories, C. Graham Baker, present Scenario Editor, taking over his old duties. He picturized his story "The Son of Wallingford" and was sent by Mr. Smith to California to produce it.

He then joined Universal as Associate Scenario Editor. Leaving Universal, he planned to produce on his own, forming the George Randolph Chester Productions. He was unsuccessful in getting financed and began writing a series of Saturday Evening Post stories based on his experiences with the producers on the coast. Returning East he titled "The Man From Brodney's" for Vitagraph and, at the time of his death was planning to title another of his stories recently finished by Vitagraph.

Lillian Randolph Chester, his second wife, collaborated with him in a revival of the Wallingford stories. She survives him and he also leaves two sons by his first marriage.

New Corporations Formed in Delaware

Charters granted at Dover, Delaware, recently include: The Western Enterprises Corporation, Incorporated—to produce and distribute motion pictures etc., etc.—capitalized at $200,000. Incorporators are Samuel C. Weed, Harry C. Howard and Raymond F. Gorman, all of New York City. Permission to change the corporate name of "Criterion Pictures Corporation (Delaware Incorporated)" to "Grand-Asher Productions," Delaware Incorporated, of Boston, Mass., was granted.

The Palma Pictures Corporation, Inc., capitalized at $1,500,000, was authorized to do the business of, and organize a general motion picture film exchange. Incorporators are: M. Barker, M. M. McCafferty and A. B. Mevey, of Wilmington, Del. Victor Ford Pictures, Inc., took out a charter for the amount of $100 000. The Celotex-Acoustical Company, Incorporated, was granted a $300,000 charter. Their purpose is stated as "the business of acoustical engineering."

Dubinsky Furnishes Bond on Embezzlement Charge

Edward Dubinsky has furnished bond in the amount of $10,000, returnable in a St. Louis court on an embezzlement charge, under which he was indicted with his brother, Morris, by a Federal Grand Jury. The indictment against the brothers was returned for alleged failure to return $7,910.96 in war taxes to the government on the Tootle theater, St. Joseph, Mo., which they formerly operated.

Local Option Clause in Children's Bill

A local option clause has been embodied in the bill in the New York state legislature relative to motion picture theatre owners admitting unaccompanied children provided a matron is in charge.

The bill that was first introduced applied only to New York city. There was talk of making it a statewide measure, and at this talk the suggestion was made and adopted to embody a local option clause, leaving it up to every city to decide for itself.

Authors' Names Sealed for Naked Truth Sketch

Just to prove that there isn't going to be any skuldruggery about the awarding of the $100 prize for the best 15-minute comedy sketch on the movies submitted for production at the annual Naked Truth dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., scheduled for the Hotel Astor, March 29, A. M. Botsford, chairman of the entertainment committee, announces a new special provision for contestants.

It is that contestants should sign a nom de plume to their manuscripts to which should be attached a small sealed envelope containing the rightful name of the author. The sealed envelopes will not be opened until the night of the Naked Truth dinner, when the comedy will be presented and the identity of the author of the winning manuscript will be revealed.

The contest closes March 1 and manuscripts must be mailed or delivered in care of Maurice Henley, Room 306, No. 461 Eight avenue, New York City.

New Incorporations in N. Y. State

At the regular meeting of the T. O. C. C. held during the week partial nominations for officers were made. Charles L. O'Reilly is without opposition for the presidency. Charles Steiner was named for the vice-presidency, James Jamie and Rudolph Sanders for second vice-president, Sam Moross for secretary and Sam Schwartz for treasurer.

Judges Select Best Slogans Submitted in Rothacker Prints Contest

OUT of the hundreds of slogans submitted in the Rothacker slogan contest the judges have at last picked the three winners. The judges, James R. Quirk, William A. Johnston and Martin J. Quigley, gave a unanimous sigh of relief when the job was finished. So many good ones were submitted that the decision was difficult.

"First Choice of the Best Producers;" submitted by Neil G. Caward, Chicago film advertising man, was awarded first prize.

"Makes Better Pictures Better;" submitted by Samuel Schwartzberg, film attorney of New York City, and officer of several inactive producing companies, took second prize.

"Prints with Personality;" submitted by William J. McGrath of the Fox Film Corporation, New York City, was given third prize.

Early last November Watterson R. Rothacker offered prizes of $100, $50 and $25 in gold for the three slogans best expressing Rothacker Prints and Service. The contest ran until January 1. Slogans poured in not only from all parts of this country and Canada but also from abroad.

After the close of the contest the slogans were copied without the names of the authors and submitted to the judges who were the editors of Photoplay Magazine, Motion Picture News and Exhibitors Herald.

"I want to thank all my friends for their interest and effort," said Mr. Rothacker. "Only three of them won gold prizes, but hundreds submitted slogans so clever that the job of being a judge was not an enviable one. I only wish I could meet all of the contestants face to face to thank them personally."

Print Situation Scored By Exhibitors

E. V. Richards Gives Views

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON'S editorial in last week's issue on the problem of Prints has aroused wide interest in the industry. A flood of responses came to MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week from exhibitors throughout the country. Many of them, from small towns, declared that the print situation was getting worse instead of better, despite the fact that production quality in pictures had improved greatly within recent years.

Some of these theatre managers and owners forwarded cut-outs from films to show the kind of service they were receiving. Torn sprocket-holes, film that was hopelessly brittle, "rain," and the effects of too-tight "take-up" were demonstrated clearly enough by a glance at these cut-outs.

To obtain a first-hand opinion from an exhibitor authority, MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week interviewed E. V. Richards, Jr., vice-president and general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans. When seen at the First National New York office, Mr. Richards made the startling statement that, in his opinion, the quality of prints offered to exhibitors has deteriorated sixty per cent since 1915.

His statement was made after a careful study of conditions in the Southern States — a study which embraces the small town theatre as well as the first run house in a key center.

Reasons for Deterioration

"This deterioration is easy enough to ascertain," he stated, "but coming to an analysis of the cause we run into various theories. The increased amperage of the projection machine since those early days of the industry may be responsible for some of the wear and tear upon the film. We have reached a more perfect projection but possibly at the cost of the print.

"Again carelessness on the part of both the exhibitor and the exchange may have helped the damage along. It is also a fact that today the same print serves far more exhibitors than in 1915 and even the most meticulous care cannot obviate natural deterioration. Another possible explanation lies in poorer quality of the original film.

"Whatever the cause — and it may be any one, or a combination of the above reasons — there is no reason why quality can not be improved for the small theatre by an intelligent co-operation between exchange and exhibitor. We are devoting considerable time and expense in the South to the education of the exhibitor in the matter of proper care and consideration, but we realize at the same time that half of the work rests upon the exchangeman's shoulder.

"The other method of improvement, a highly desirable one if possible, lies in a greater number of prints. This is a problem which must be met and worked out by the distributing companies themselves. If it is economically possible it will prove mutually profitable without a doubt since it means, in addition to more perfect prints, a more contemporaneous exhibition of the big pictures which is the aim of distributor and exhibitor alike.

"I am uncertain whether this increase in the number of prints can be brought about by raising the rental to the small exhibitor with the guarantee of a newer and perfect print, although there is no debating the fact that poor prints are detrimental to the attendance of the small town theatre. Possibly this thing would be well worth while trying out in a small town. Bring in, as an experiment, a series of new prints and check upon attendance and patron comment. If the increase in patronage reaches any fair percentage I do not believe that the exhibitor would balk at an increase. It is the one way out for him. Theoretically, of course, he is entitled to perfect prints for every show, but under existing conditions it appears that this will remain simply a theory.

"This experiment might well be tried on some popular picture with wide distribution. Very often a successful feature, by the time it has reached the smallest houses, is in a hopeless condition.

Co-operation Needed

"Mr. Johnston, in his editorial of last week, opened a discussion which I hope will not close before we get the viewpoint of distributor, exhibitor and exchangeman. The question of prints is, as he states, a big subject, which can only be solved by a spirit of co-operation on the part of all concerned. My contribution is simply an analysis of the evil as I know it to exist. The two remedies I suggested — more care in the physical handling of prints and secondly a greater number of prints — are the work of the entire industry. The exhibitor and exchange can work on the former. And here I might say that we in the South are inspecting film at the expense of ourselves in an effort to supply our theatres with suitable prints.

"As to the matter of more prints, it is up to the distributor to tell us why it is impracticable. If part of the extra cost must be borne by the exhibitor, let us have a try out and see if increased attendance justifies the extra cost."

Early Meeting to Discuss Arbitration Boards

THE committee composed of Nathaniel N. Bernstein, of Michigan City, Indiana, chairman; G. G. Schmidt and Ed Bingham, of Indianapolis, which was appointed some time ago by Frank G. Heller, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, to arrange for the calling of a central and nation-wide meeting of exhibitors and leaders, at Chicago, Illinois, to discuss the future existance and present workings of the various arbitration boards, have decided to call the conference at an early date, and Mr. Heller invites leaders from other parts of the country to communicate with Mr. Bernstein with reference to the nation-wide meeting.

Mr. Heller has invited Will Hays to participate in person at this conference, pertaining to the uniform contract and present boards of arbitration and states that Indiana, and other states have faith in the individual character and integrity of Will Hays and will accord him their support.

Questionnaire Goes Out to Exhibitors in "More Prints" Campaign

FOLLOWING the tremendous response aroused by last week's editorial by Wm. A. Johnston on "Prints," advocating the use of a greater number of prints and a consequent increase in quality, MOTION PICTURE NEWS is this week mailing to exhibitors a questionnaire on this subject.

This questionnaire is for the purpose of sounding out the sentiment of exhibitors on the "poor print" question, and determining whether managers would be willing to take such steps as would make it possible for the distributing companies to place more prints in circulation.

The questions asked are: Give title of the last ten feature pictures you have run, stating whether the prints furnished you were Very Poor, Poor, Fair, Good or Excellent; would you be willing to pay more for your pictures if you could get better prints; suppose you were offered two grades of prints, one new and the other commercial, the former at say five dollars more than the latter, which would you select; has the condition of prints on an average improved within the last year or so; do you find that the condition of the prints on good pictures is apt to be worse than on a poor feature; does any particular distributing company excel in the matter of good prints; also does any particular company fail in this connection; how long after release date do you figure a print on a popular picture will remain in good condition; do you sometimes pass up purchasing a production because you fear that you will not be able to secure a print in good enough condition to put on a satisfactory show; do you find your exchange holding back playing dates for some unexplained reason and do you think it is because they do not have enough prints to serve all their customers at the time each theatre desires to play the picture; do you think poor prints are detrimental to the attendance at your theatre; do your patrons complain about "rain," unsteady projection and pull aparts; do you try to improve the condition of film before running it by careful inspection?

Every exhibitor receiving this questionnaire is urged to fill it out carefully and fully at once. Those who fail to receive a copy may help the campaign by forwarding the same information in a letter to the NEWS.

Pinchot Declines to Accept Theatre Pass

AN interesting story is going the rounds of Central Pennsylvania theatre men that Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, has declined to accept an annual pass to the New Regent picture theatre, which he frequently attends in Harrisburg, explaining in a courteous letter to Manager Peter Magaro, who offered him the ticket, that it is contrary to his policy to accept perquisites of any sort while Governor.

The Governor frequently attends shows at the New Regent, generally going alone late in the afternoon, after a hard day attending to his official duties at the capitol. Notwithstanding the Governor's declination of the proffered annual pass the story goes, Mr. Magaro recently saw him approach the theatre box office and the manager beckoned the Governor to walk into the theatre without paying. Again Mr. Pinchot politely declined the invitation to go in free, but produced the money and bought a ticket at the box office. After that, respecting the Governor's wishes in the matter, Mr. Magaro has not invited the Chief Executive of the State to be a guest of the management.

John J. Murray Dies in Florida

John J. Murray of Warren, Ohio, is dead. He died February 19 in St. Petersberg, Florida, where he went with his wife and daughter to regain his health. He was buried Saturday in Warren, where for so many years he has served the public wholesome motion picture entertainment at his two houses, the Opera House and the Hippodrome.

Murray was an old showman, a graduate of circus days. He was one of the best beloved men in the picture buisness and his death, due to heart trouble, is sadly felt by his many friends.

Norwich, Conn., Exhibitor Settles with Union

Abraham Davidson, owner and manager of the Broadway and Strand theatres in Norwich Conn., and prospective owner of similar playhouses at Willimantic and Winsted, in the same state, has announced he has reached a settlement with the Norwich Musicians' Union and will withdraw his suit for $40,000, instituted against the organization and individual members last June on the ground of restraint of trade, due to picketing operations by union members.

The case has attracted wide attention in motion picture and union-musical circles of New England.

Pettijohn Holds Conferences in Chicago

General Counsel C. C. Pettijohn, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was in Chicago last week and conferred with officials of the Film Board of Trade and Chicago and Indiana exhibitor organization officers.

It is understood that various improvements in the operations of film arbitration boards, which are giving general satisfaction, were discussed and that certain clauses of the uniform contract were also taken under consideration with a view to making changes.

Harry D. Wilson, newly elected president of Western Motion Picture Advertisers.

Harry Wilson is Elected Wampas President

The annual election of officers and directors of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers (The "Wampas") was held at Piccadilly Tea Rooms Tuesday evening, February 12th.

Harry D. Wilson of Principal Pictures Corporation was elected president of the organization. He succeeded Joseph A. Jackson of the Goldwyn Corporation. Wilson is the fourth president of the Wampas and was vice president last term. The other presidents were Ray Leek, 1921, Arch Reeve, 1922, and Jackson, term of 1923.

Roy Miller of the Miller Theatre was elected Vice-President succeeding Wilson and Tom Engler of Fine Arts Studios was made secretary with Adam Hull Shirk of Grand-Asher, elected treasurer. The board of directors consist of Pete Smith, Harry Brand, Malcolm Stewart Boylan, Arch Reeve, and Ray Leek.

Hodkinson Tax Defense is Stricken Out

The defense of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in a suit brought by the City of New York was ordered stricken out during the week by Supreme Court Justice Wagner on application of the city.

The suit was to collect a tax on personal property of the Hodkinson Corporation assessed at $100,000 in 1919. The defense was that the officers of the corporation stated at the time the assessment was made that taxable property amounted only to $5,000. They claim to have been told by representatives of the Department of Taxes that they would have an opportunity to fill out the property blanks stating the facts. This was not done and the suit followed. The city was held not to be bound by the promise.

Florida Exhibitor Robbed of $1,700

E. J. Sparks, former Southern Enterprises man, now controlling a string of Florida theatres was robbed of $1700 on February 20, at his Beacham theatre, Orlando, Florida. The loss, it is believed, was covered by burglary insurance.

Attendance Record Sought at Kansas Convention

THE M. P. T. O. Kansas has adopted a new plan to increase attendance at its semi-annual convention in Emporia, Kas., April 1 and 2. A committee of nine exhibitors, geographically selected, has been appointed to write personal letters to exhibitors in their territory, urging them to attend the convention.

This procedure will be in addition to the usual form letters sent out from M. P. T. O. K. headquarters and stickers posted on film boxes. The attendance goal for the convention this year is 200, according to C. E. Cook, business manager of the organization. The committee is composed of A. R. Zimmer, Liberty theatre, Marysville, Kas.; W. H. Webber, Echo theatre, Great Bend, Kas.; W. J. Gabel, Grand theatre, Beloit, Kas.; E. E. Frazier, Grand theatre, Pittsburg, Kas.; Stanley N. Chambers, Miller theatre, Wichita, Kas.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum theatre, Topeka; E. E. Sprague, Lyric theatre, Goodland, Kas.; Harry McClure, Strand theatre, Emporia, Kas.; M. G. Kirkman, Strand theatre, Hays, Kas.

The road showing of feature pictures, which the trend of sentiment among Kansas exhibitors is against; the showing of film in schools and churches in opposition to theatres and legislative recommendations will be the principal issues at the convention, in addition to an annual election of officers.

Woman Theatre Patron Robbed of $2,000

The Clinton Square theatre in Albany, N. Y., was the scene of a theft last week, which cost Mrs. Anne Bender, of Menands, about $2,000 in jewelry. Mrs. Bender had come to the theatre, bringing with her a mesh bag in which she had placed several platinum and diamond rings, which she did not care to leave at home, owing to frequent burglaries which have occurred in Albany and vicinity during the last few weeks. After paying her admission to the theatre, Mrs. Bender went to the ladies' room for a few minutes, leaving and entering the theatre proper, taking her seat, and then recollecting having left the bag and its contents in the washroom.

Mrs. Bender hurried back, but bag and jewelry had disappeared. She reported the loss to Oscar Perrin, manager of the house, and to the police, but although several were interrogated, no clue was obtained to the thief.

American Films Lead in Greece

Consul W. L. Lowrie, writes from Athens, that "American pictures predominate, but there is also a considerable showing of Italian, French and German pictures." His report to the Bureau states that of some twelve motion picture theatres in Athens, eight give high class performances. In capacity, these theatres range from 650 to 900 seats.

Films are sold outright by import and export agents, or are leased out on a sliding scale rental, varying with the size, subject, and age of film, and class of patronage. Roughly, the plan approaches our domestic distribution methods. Constantinople, Smyrna, or Alexandria, seemingly are the chief entrepôts for film reels, the importers reserving exclusive rights, not only for Greece, but for all the Balkan states. The "season" for runs is only from October to May, the summer demand being negligible.

Super-Specials vs. Varied Program

More Opinions from the Public

MOTION PICTURE NEWS prints below the third installment of replies from the public on the diversified program and the elaborate super-special. The questions asked were these:

1. Which do you prefer—the elaborate picture of ten or twelve reels at advanced admission prices, or the five or six reel feature, with comedy, scenic and news reel?

2. What should the maximum price of admission to the downtown theatre be? The minimum?

3. What should the maximum admission to the neighborhood theatre be? The minimum?

ST. LOUIS—Mayor Henry W. Kiel likes big pictures that are good—occasionally—but prefers the well-balanced program, 2. 25-50c.

Bank official: I can afford to pay $1.50 to $2 for pictures if I care to, but I prefer the balanced program of the better neighborhood houses. Long pictures are too tiresome. I am also opposed to mixing pictures with poor vaudeville and cracked singers. 2. 50-75c. 3. 25-35c.

Z. G. Hopkins, vice-president Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad: I prefer the mixed program. Many so-called specials are unworthy of that name—padded and tiresome. Advanced prices are wrong. The movies appeal to the masses and not the classes. 2. 50-75c. 3. 20-30c, including war tax.

Fans Give Views

Woman stenographer: Prefers balanced program minus bum vaudeville and bad singers. 2. 30c and 50c. 3. 10-25c.

Woman clerk—Give me the big pictures, if good. 2. 50-75c. 3. 15-25c.

Stenographer-secretary (woman): The bigger pictures at reasonable prices. 2. 25-40c. 3, 10-25c.

Insurance man: Mixed program. 2. 50c to $1.00. 3. 15c to 50c.

Woman executive: Shorter features at regular prices. 2. 35c to 50c. 3. 15c to 25c.

Newspaperman: The so-called masterpieces are boresome. Two hours or more of looking at one picture is fatiguing on the eyes and nerves. 2. 50c to 75c. 3. 20c and 30c, children half price.

Post Office employee: Give me the balanced program. All houses should charge 25c. The larger houses can afford to do so because of seating capacity and number of shows.

TOLEDO—The canvas in this city showed a plurality for the varied program over the long super-special. One man declared he had no preference, while another said he cou'd dispense with all of it providing they left him the news weekly. The majority believed 50 cents to be a reasonable top price for first-run theatres. Following are typical opinions from year-round fans:

Man fan: I enjoy the short feature with a good comedy and a weekly. Downtown theatres ought not to charge more than 20 and 35 cents and out in the neighborhood it should be 10 and 20 cents.

Girl fan: Give me the long features. They're much finer. I think 25 to 40 cents is a fair price in the first-run theatres and 20 and 25 cents in the smaller ones.

Man fan: I want the variety bill—a six-reeler, a snappy comedy and a news reel. The elaborate long-reelers are tiresome. Seems to me a 35-cent top is fair enough, with 15-cent minimum. They ought to charge 10 and 20 cents in the neighborhood houses.

Woman Fan: The six-reel pictures are best. I like a comedy with them, too. I think 25 cents is plenty downtown. And nobody in for less than 20 cents. It ought to be 10 and 15 cents out there in the neighborhood shows.

Man Fan: The big, unusual features are my preference—something like Robin-Hood or The Covered Wagon. The downtown theatres are justified in charging 25 and 50 cents, while the neighborhood prices should be 10 and 25 cents.

Girl Fan: I believe I prefer the six reel pictures. The short pictures appeal to me, with exceptions in the case of "Robin-Hood" or some big picture like that. I think the downtown prices should be 35 cents and 20 cents. The neighborhood houses ought not to charge more than 25 cents. And 10 cents for the low price.

Opinions From South

NEW ORLEANS—Mayor Andrew McShane: Much prefer five or six reel feature with side splitting comedy. 2. 35-50c. 3. 10-20c.

Federal Judge Rufus E. Foster: Prefer the elaborate ten or twelve reel photoplay. 2. 35-50c. 3.

Girl Fan: I much prefer the elaborate ten or twelve reel picture because the best in costumes are used, finer settings and the best of actors. 2. 50 cents. 35 cents. 3. 15 cents. 10 cents.

Newspaper Reporter: Prefer 10 or 12 reel production—gives ampler room for turning out good pictures. 2. 55 cents. 28 cents. 3. 10 cents. 10 cents.

Drug Clerk: Why, I like the five or six reel picture best of all. I must see a comedy though, to say I was satisfied with the show. 2. 50 cents. 40 cents. 3. 10 cents. 10 cents.

Printer: Me? I like the five or six reeler and comedy. Don't like scenics or weeklies. 2. 50 cents. 25 cents. 3. 15 cents. 10 cents.

Man Fan: Give me a good five or six reel production. But, don't forget the comedy and weekly, too. 2. 75 cents. 50 cents. 3. 10 cents. 10 cents.

SAN FRANCISCO—Out of 27 persons canvassed in San Francisco, 15 declared in favor of the diversified program, while 12 voted for the elaborate super-special. Typical opinions follow:

For Diversified Program

Mayor James Rolph: I personally prefer a program of short subjects and variety, although I, of course, likewise view, with interest a longer and more elaborate subject which is especially well produced. I am afraid I cannot give an opinion on admittance prices, since this is obviously based on a number of matters with which I am not familiar, such as cost of production, rental of features and overhead costs of operating.

Halsey E. Manwaring, Manager of Palace Hotel: In my opinion, the maximum price that should be charged for a moving picture show should not exceed 55 cents with a minimum of 35 cents per person. I do not think, however, that anyone would object to paying as high as 75 cents per seat for loges, provided such seats could be reserved. At the present time, a price of 75 cents per loge seat is charged in many of the larger moving picture houses, and often times after paying this price it is necessary to wait as long as 45 minutes before a person can occupy a loge seat. I think this price exceedingly high when one considers the fact that reserved matinee seats at such theaters as the Orpheum can be purchased for as low as 50 cents.

In the case of super pictures one hardly expects to be entertained in other ways excepting by the picture itself. But in the ordinary run of pictures, I personally favor a shorter feature film in conjunction with a comedy and semi-classical musical program.

W. B. Hamilton (U. S. Collector of Customs): I prefer the long elaborate picture, for when I go to a movie I go to see the picture and a good picture should include educational features of interest and worth to children. The maximum price for a motion picture should be $1.50 for an exceptionally wonderful piece. The minimum in big business districts should be 50 cents. In residential districts about 50 per cent less.

Maurice Rhine, Executive San Francisco Office, General Electric Co.: The long well-produced motion picture is my favorite for it relaxes my desire for entertainment and the good pictures include education and entertainment. However, I do not believe the price should be over 35 cents for downtown houses and if the frills would be omitted this could be done. The minimum should be 15 cents admitting children. Neighborhood house prices should be 20 to 10 cents. Then the whole family could go.

M. P. T. O. A. Names Boston for Convention

THE Committee on Convention Comprising M. E. Comerford of Scranton, Pa.; Glenn Harper of Los Angeles, Calif.; Fred Seegert of Milwaukee, Wis.; John Schwalm of Hamilton, Ohio; R. F. Woodhull, Dover, N. J.; Joseph W. Walsh of Hartford, Conn., and Sydney S. Cohen of New York City, designated at the last meeting of the National Board of Directors, have selected Boston, Mass. for the 1924 annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to be held the latter part of May.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Massachusetts a resolution was unanimously adopted inviting the National Organization to hold the meeting in Boston and this was supplemented by similar action on the part of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The definite time of the convention together with the Special Convention Committee, convention hotel and further details will be announced at a later date.

"Flaming Youth" Wins in Quebec Court Action

Associated First National (Eastern Canada), Limited, has recovered the print of "Flaming Youth" which was seized at the Empire Theatre, Quebec City, and ordered confiscated by the Quebec Court on the ground that it was an immoral picture, following the conviction of the theatre manager for alleged trespassing of the criminal code in this respect.

Wide interest was aroused through this action because the picture had been formally approved by Count Roussey de Salles, chairman of the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors, for public presentation in any theatre in Quebec Province. This fact did not deter the authorities of Quebec City in their prosecution of the Empire Theatre manager.

The Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association, with headquarters at Toronto, entered an appeal from the conviction of the Quebec Court in order to establish the legal status of an exhibitor when he was showing a picture that had been passed by the censors. The appeal was withdrawn however, and the court surrendered the "confiscated" film and it is now being presented in other cities of the Province of Quebec.

Picture Producing Firms Operate in China

Assistant Trade Commissioner J. H. Nelson of Shanghai, China, reported to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Commerce Department, that there were a few film producers in China, of which the Commercial Press, Ltd., was Chinese, the British-American Tobacco Company and the Film Ad Company were British, and the three other concerns were American.

Scenics, news weeklies, cartoons and educational subjects were attempted. The Commercial Press, Ltd., was the only unit attempting the dramatic film play and was now concentrating on the short subjects, favored by its competitors. These concerns have four cameramen and they are provided with adequate laboratories, supplies, cameras, etc. Film and supplies are shipped from the United States, while France seemed entrenched in the camera and apparatus field, through direct importations from Paris.

Samuel Kohn, of Bayonne, N. J., who has been operating theaters in that city for many years, passed away during the week. Kohn was well and popularly known in the industry.

N. Carolina Theatre Loss Complete by Fire

The Pickwick theater of Chapel Hill, N. C., is reported destroyed in the conflagration which swept that city recently. S. J. Brockwell, owner of the house, is said to have had no insurance.

Georgia House Complete Loss by Fire

Fire is reported to have completely wiped out the interior of the Princess theater at Washington, Georgia. The house was operated by Mrs. W. Wood.

Western Missouri M. P. T. O. is Formed

A FUND for initial expenses and the preliminary organization of the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri was accomplished at a special meeting Thursday in the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City, of representative exhibitors of Western Missouri. The fund was not in subscriptions — it was in cash or checks.

A committee, composed of A. M. Eisner, A. F. Baker and Jay Means, all of Kansas City, was appointed to supervise arrangements for a convention, to be held in Kasas City early in May. Mr. Baker was named as acting secretary-treasurer. Final incorporation and election of officers will be at the convention. Eight exhibitors, representing fourteen theatres, volunteered as delegates to visit or communicate with all exhibitors in Western Missouri, in an effort to obtain a record attendance at the convention. The exhibitors are: A. F. Baker, Springfield, Joplin and St. Joseph; Thomas Clark, Maryville; Hugh Gardner, Neosho; F. G. Weary, Richmond; G. R. Wilson, Liberty; S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield; C. T. Sears, Nevada, Brookfield, Marshall and Boonville; Jay Means, Kansas City, and A. M. Eisner, Kansas City.

At the convention in May, the selection of a business manager, which has been delayed, will be made and headquarters established, probably in a suite of rooms now occupied by the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A. at Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets, Kansas City. The proposed consolidation of the Kansas City and Western Missouri bodies also will be decided definitely.

Receivers Make Report on Consolidated Theatres

Receivers Fred A. Sims and George M. Dickson have filed a report of the meeting of the creditors of the Consolidated Realty and Theatres Corporation held at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, February 7. Most of the properties of the concern have been held together by the receivers and they report a small profit on these.

At the meeting the receivers reported that under an order of court they had sold the Orpheum Theatre and equipment at Fort Wayne, Indiana. This was done because the receivers figured the theatre could not be operated at a profit and because the lease, which was about to expire, could not be renewed at satisfactory terms.

Details for the financing of an audit of the company's books are being arranged and will be carried out if they are successfully concluded.

The meeting voted a resolution of confidence in the receivers for their accomplishments up to the present.

Allied Producers Operate Through United

Notice has been filed with the Secretary of State of New York of the surrender of authority of Allied Producers and Distributors. It is said that the business of Allied will be handled under the name of United Artists' Corporation, the product of both having been handled in the past by the same sales force. The new arrangement, it is said, will facilitate the management of the business.

New Juvenile Performer Charge Made

The sensational arrest on February 21, in Harrisburg, Pa., at the instance of the State Department of Labor and Industry, of J. R. Curry, of Los Angeles, Cal., whose wife is said to be a sister of the late Wallace Reid, motion picture star, on the charge that he permitted his seven-year-old daughter, "Baby Dodo Reid," to appear in stage performances in violation of the state child labor law, opened up an entirely new phase of the question of the legality of juvenile performers appearing in prologues of motion picture shows and in other theatrical performances.

Heretofore only managers or owners of the theaters were arrested for violation of this phase of the child labor law.

It is charged that Curry permitted the child to appear in a Lancaster motion picture theater in the week of February 11. He was taken before Mayor Hoverter, of Harrisburg, following his arrest, and held under $300 bail for a subsequent hearing before Alderman Doebler, of Lancaster.

K. C. Awaits Music Tax Suit Results

Much interest is being displayed among Kansas City exhibitors in the cases of music tax interests versus eight exhibitors in the federal court at Kansas City recently. The suits have been pending for some time. S. A. Handy, attorney for the exhibitors, has announced he is ready to "go to bat."

Paramount Club Formed in Atlanta

Members of both the theatre and exchange departments of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in Atlanta have joined in forming a "Paramount Club" such as has existed for some time in New York. It is planned to outfit permanent club quarters and promote frequent social affairs, and it is believed much will be accomplished towards promoting cooperation and efficiency in both departments.

George Van Raenslear of the warehouse department. A. C. Cowles of the district office, O. L. Freeman of the accessories department, and Miss A. K. Dunn, cashier, have been named to get together on a temporary organization.

Coast Film Schools Under Official Probe

Because of numerous complaints filed with the California State Labor Commission, Dr. Louis Bloch, special investigator of that body is in Los Angeles to launch a probe into the affairs of numerous film schools operating in the southern coast city. It is announced that a thorough investigation will be made and that only those operating in a thoroughly legitimate manner will survive.

Suit of Josie Sedgwick is Settled

The suit of Josie Sedgwick in the amount of $9,000 against Robert Brunton, Inc., and United Studios, Inc., has been settled out of court, according to word from the coast. The plaintiff charged that the defending companies failed to live up to a contract signed in 1919.

In and Out of Town

D. W. Griffith, suffering from exhaustion and a severe cold, lies ill in his room in the Astor Hotel as a reward for rushing the opening of his latest picture "America."

He is in the care of physicians who report his condition due to complete exhaustion and severe inflammation of the throat and lungs. His voice is completely gone.

In making the picture, Griffith has worked seven days weekly, from sixteen to eighteen hours daily. Although spare in build, he has lost eleven pounds. The doctors demand that he take a complete rest.

Ban Lifted on Normand, Purviance Pictures

THE Ohio Censor Board has lifted the ban on Mabel Normand and Edna Purviance pictures which was imposed following the recent shooting affray in Hollywood. This late action was taken on the ground that no criminal action was taken and no charges preferred against either of the stars.

Southwest Theatres Takes Over Coast Houses

Announcement was made this week by Irving M. Lesser that a deal involving $3,000,000 has just been closed by Southwest Theaters, Inc., of which his brother, Sol Lesser, is secretary.

Southwest Theaters, Inc., has taken over theaters valued at $2,000,000 in Southern California and plans to spend more than $1,000,000 during the coming year in building and equipping other theaters. The holdings of the corporation include four theaters in Los Angeles, four in Pasadena, three in Riverside, two in Taft, one in Glendale and one in Huntington Park.

Claude Langley, formerly manager of the Turner & Dahnken interests in the San Francisco district, is president of the corporation; A. L. Gore of West Coast Theaters, is vice-president; Sol Lesser is secretary, and Frank Livingstone of the Taft is treasurer.

The paid capitalization of $1,000,000 is said to represent the holdings of the Turner & Dahnken interests, the Frank Livingstone theaters in Taft; the Merrill & Howe theaters in Riverside, the Henry C. Jensen theaters of Pasadena and the holdings of the West Coast theaters in and around Los Angeles. The new company will be operated independently of the West Coast theaters, according to its officers. Sol Lesser is said to have negotiated for the purchase of the First National franchise in the cities affected, for the sum of $250.000, this franchise going to the new corporation.

Trick Rider, Injured, Sues Pearl White and Fox

A suit for $50,000 damages filed by John F. Beatty, trick rider, against Pearl White and the Fox Film Corporation is in progress in Brooklyn before Supreme Court Justice Hagarty.

Beatty alleges that while filming an unproduced picture, "Without Fear" in 1921 at Bayside, L. I., the defendants were negligent in allowing a horse held by Miss White to obstruct the path of his galloping mount, causing him to be thrown heavily and suffer a broken hip. Miss White and Kenneth Webb, director, were among the witnesses called by the defense.

Salt Lake Exhibitors Ask Protection

The theater owners of Salt Lake City presented a petition to the Intermountain Film Board of Trade, asking that a request granting them protection from the ward amusement hall showing of pictures, for the period of one year be granted. The various ecclesiastical wards into which the city is divided shows a picture production one night each week in their amusement halls, and it is the protection from this drawing of patronage from the downtown theaters, that was asked for.

New House Proposed for Bath, New York

Bath, New York, is to have a new picture house, according to Charles H. Thomas, who has secured an option on a vacant lot owned by Associated Theatres, Inc. Building will probably be under way in the near future.

Doug Sees Success in Organization

Attributes Lack of Wastage in "The Thief" Proper Handling of Details

ORGANIZATION—that's the keynote to success in the making of a picture—according to Doug Fairbanks, who is in New York with Mary Pickford to arrange for the openings of their pictures, "The Thief of Bagdad" and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and then to proceed over to Europe for a period of some six months.

"Properly organized, a producer can lick a picture," said Doug. "Improperly organized the picture will lick you. It's all right to let expenses run up on a picture, provided you are getting value received for those expenses. For the "Thief" I had a very expensive organization, but I'll say for everyone of those associated with me in the making of the picture that they earned their money. Every man is an expert in his line and he knew definitely what he was to do every day while the picture was in the process of making.

"The first thing we did was to chart out on a very compact chart not more than two feet across, every detail of the picture and every sequence. There was our picture in that two foot round space. Any time one of us threatened to become overcome by the job in front of us he was ordered down to that chart with instructions to look it over and 'beat the picture.' If you let a picture or its details beat you you'll get off on wrong channels and the first thing you know you are completely bewildered and running up a tremendous unnecessary expense.

"That we were properly organized to avoid just this sort of thing is shown by the fact that we did not shoot more than five or six hundred feet of film that is not seen in the picture. And this production, twelve reels in length, has just ninety-nine sub-titles.

"We have a monster dragon in this production. It is three times as long as this room we are in. I am not going to tell you how we got it, but it is a living thing. You will agree with me when you see it on the screen.

"I ordered a herd of fifty elephants and was told only eight were available throughout the United States. I still insisted upon the fifty and got them. They are mechanical and mixed in with the eight you'll never know which are the genuine and which the manufactured. We knew the difference because the mechanical ones do not eat hay."

Doug is most enthusiastic over the coming opening of the "Thief" at the Liberty Theatre in New York on March 17. He is sincere in his belief that it is the greatest picture he has ever made and confident it will be so voted after the premiere.

Miss Pickford has not yet decided what she will do with "Dorothy." She hesitates to follow too closely the opening of Doug's picture and has about concluded she will first show the production in some small town adjacent to New York.

Asked if she had any intentions of making Romeo and Juliet with Doug as Romeo, Mary said, "No, I don't think so. I should love to do it but can you imagine how Doug's fans would feel if he failed to jump up on that balcony and get me?"

Doug and Mary will leave New York shortly following the opening of the "Thief" and will visit the principal cities of Europe to arrange for openings there. Both see great prospects in the foreign fields, not only in Europe, but in the Orient. Getting back to the subject of organization, Doug says that this is all which is necessary for American producers to multiply their profits many times over in the foreign field.

First National Organizes Subsidiary

Production Company Formed with Rowland at Head and Hudson in Direct Control

INDICATION that First National has permanently entered the production field, is read by the industry in the announcement of the formation of First National Productions, Inc.

With all details of its incorporation complete, the subsidiary company was officially announced recently in Los Angeles by John McCormick, western representative of Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Richard A. Rowland, general manager of Associated First National, is president of the new corporation. John McCormick is vice-president; Earl Hudson, secretary, and Clifford P. Butler, treasurer. These executives will additionally serve on the board of directors with Sam Katz, Sol Lesser and J. G. von Herberg.

Primarily the forming of the new organization was to separate producing and distributing affairs of the parent company for the purpose of administration and furthermore to give Earl Hudson direct control of the organization's producing entity.

"This was the decision of the parent company after a year of production experiment in which four conspicuous box-office successes were made under Hudson's supervision," says the announcement. "The first of these was 'Flaming Youth,' with Colleen Moore. Then followed 'Her Temporary Husband,' with an all-star cast; 'Painted People,' featuring Colleen Moore, and 'Lilies of the Field,' in which Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle were co-featured."

"Two additional pictures are now in production. They are 'The Woman on the Jury,' in which Sylvia Breamer is featured, and 'Sundown,' an original drama of the West written by Mr. Hudson and which is being filmed in Mexico and Texas."

Continuing to administer the affairs of the home office as western representative and entrusted with the important liaison necessary among the affiliated independent producers, John McCormick has been given dual responsibility with the forming of the new company.

As vice-president he will have voice in its conduct, although Earl Hudson, formerly a member of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS staff, will be entirely charged with supervision over production.

First National Production, Inc., sponsors an array of featured artists, including Colleen Moore, Corinne Griffith, Sylvia Breamer, Milton Sills, Ben Alexander and Ben Lyon, all of whom are under direct contract.

The structure of the original company remains unchanged but the personnel of First National Productions, Inc., will include Clifford Butler as comptroller: David L. Thompson as production manager; Marion Fairfax as scenario counsel, with such writers as Kenneth Clark, Fred Stanley and Earl B. Snell as staff contributors. Milton Menasco is the art director, James Van Trees is the ranking cinematographer of the camera battery, while Arthur Tavares is film editor-in-chief.

Other members of the executive and secretarial staff are: Arthur Fresneda, auditor; R. E. Pritchard, studio sales representative; Harry O. Hoyt, director, and Malcolm Stuart Boylan, publicity director.

Best Sellers and Theatre Box-offices

Irving Lesser Declares Screen Versions of Popular Novels Add to Exhibitor's Receipts

"MANY exhibitors wonder why producers are inclined to select the popular novel for the screen—why producers pay big sums for the motion picture rights to these novels," declared Irving M. Lesser, Vice-President of Principal Pictures Corporation in an interview with MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "I have had exhibitors tell me that they thought it was adding to the overhead of the industry. But as a matter of fact, the popular novel has added to the receipts at the box office and has helped make a large share of what surplus money the industry now has.

"From one hundred thousand to more than one million people have bought the 'best seller' novel, the number varying in accordance with the strength of its popularity. Reputable publishers estimate that five persons read every book bought. Their reasoning is that every book goes into a home, and that in that home there are at least five persons who read the publication.

"Suppose, then that three hundred thousand copies of a popular novel have been sold. Multiply that number by five and you have one million five hundred thousand people estimated to have read the novel. Now, you know that three hundred thousand people have bought the novel and have talked about it. You know that they will want to see a screen version of the story. So you have a known audience of 300,000. If you want to follow the theory of the publishers you can assume that the audience amounts to one million five hundred thousand people to begin with; that these people have read the book and will want to see the motion picture play. This line of reasoning must be correct because there is no case on record in which a 'best seller' has proved a box office failure on the screen.

"Our organization is in a position to feel the pulse of motion picture audiences before even buying the rights to a picture. Sol Lesser, our president, is an officer of West Coast Theatres, Inc., the Gore-Lesser-Ramish chain embracing one hundred and sixty-eight houses. We take full advantage of this situation. When we were going to star Jackie Coogan in "Peck's Bad Boy" we sent word throughout the chain to have our audiences questioned as to their attitude toward Jackie in 'Peck's Bad Boy.' The answers received were favorable. We made the picture. It proved a success. The same thing was done with 'Oliver Twist,' and with Coogan in 'Circus Days' adapted from the novel 'Toby Tyler.'

"Next in the 'popular novel' line we had an opportunity to purchase the screen rights to the works of Harold Bell Wright. We looked over the books of the publishers, which showed us the actual number of copies sold as follows: 'When A Man's A Man,' 1,400,000; 'The Winning of Barbara Worth,' 1,800,000; 'That Printer of Udell's,' 1,300,000; 'The Shepherd of the Hills,' 1,865,000; 'The Calling of Dan Matthews,' 1,210,000; 'Their Yesterdays,' 1,100,000; 'The Eyes of the World,' 1,325,000; 'Brian Kent,' 650,000; 'The Uncrowned King,' 200,000. The combined sales of all of Wright's books is 10,000,000 copies. Add your theoretical five persons that read every book and you have 50,000,000 people.

"All of this looked very good on paper. But it did not satisfy us. Again we sent queries to the managers of our theatres, who sounded out their audiences as to Harold Bell Wright. Enthusiastic answers were reported, and so we began with 'When A Man's A Man.' The success of this production is known. But it is not generally known that we were very careful to make a thorough investigation before deciding to film the book.

Metro Studios Prepare for Coming of Ingram

Preparations are now under way at the Metro studios in Hollywood to receive Rex Ingram who is expected to arrive from Africa some time in March. Ingram is to finish his interiors for his new production for Metro, "The Arab" on the coast.

Although Mr. Ingram has been away in Europe and in Africa these last six months he has been in constant communication with the Metro studios and his emissaries have crossed and recrossed several times, bearing important information to Metro's staff of technical experts for the erection of sets, costuming, lighting arrangements and other important details.

Most of "The Arab" Mr. Ingram filmed on location in northern Africa around Tunis in Algiers. Several important scenes will be filmed by Ingram in Paris on his way home and then with several members of his big European cast and with Ramon Novarro and Alice Terry who play the leading roles, he will return to this country and then to Hollywood to complete the picture.

Estelle Taylor Signs for Lead in "Wise Son"

Estelle Taylor has signed contracts with Max Graf to play the feminine lead in "The Wise Son" by Charles Sherman, adapted to the screen by Hope Loring and Buddy Leighton, for Metro.

Miss Taylor, who recently completed her portrayal of Mary, Queen of Scots, in Mary Pickford's "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" will appear under the direction of Phil Rosen, who directed the Rockett film "The Life of Lincoln."

The production will be staged in San Francisco in the near future and Miss Taylor will leave for the northern city within the next few days.

"Desert Rose" Next Harry Carey Feature

Hunt Stromberg announces that the next Harry Carey feature for release through the Hodkinson Corporation will be an adaptation of Shannon Fife's "Desert Rose" with Virginia Browne Faire in the leading feminine role.

The adaptation was written by L. V. Jefferson and Doris Dorn. The picture will be produced under the personal supervision of Hunt Stromberg.

House Would Tax Theatre Admissions Over 50 Cents

THEATER admissions above fifty cents will pay one cent on every ten cents or fraction thereof, under the Garner rates adopted Tuesday by the House in Committee of the Whole. Representative Rainey, Illinois, offered several amendments reducing admission tax on Chautauqua, legitimate theaters, two-a-day films and concerts. All were defeated, including his proposed cut in tax of 5 per cent in place of 10 per cent levy.

Ince Troupe Sails for Tahiti Scenes

An Ince troupe of actors, cameramen and technicians are on the high seas bound for the island of Tahiti, where they are going to film scenes of native life for incorporation in the Thomas Ince production of "The Marriage Cheat," which had been temporarily titled "Against the Rules."

Director John Griffith Wray, who is just completing the shooting of the main dramatic sequences of the picture in California, could not spare the time for the long sea voyage, and so he delegated his assistant, A. F. Erickson, to take charge of the expedition, while he completed work with Leatrice Joy, Percy Marmont and Adolph Menjou, feature players.

Six weeks of travel to and from the location will allow the company twenty-five days to spend on the island. "The Marriage Cheat" will be a First National release.

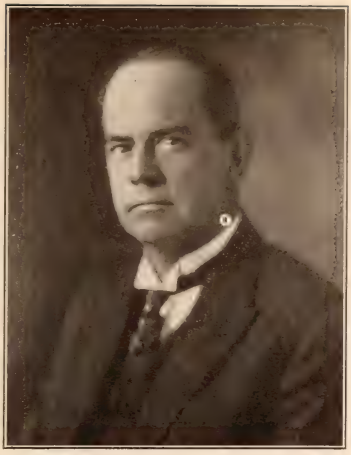
"Fighting Coward" is New Paramount Title

"The Fighting Coward" will be the final title under which the latest James Cruze production for Paramount, filmed as "Magnolia," will be released, according to Jesse L. Lasky, who is now in New York.

"The Fighting Coward," which was adapted to the screen by Walter Woods from Booth Tarkington's stage play, was filmed partly at Natchez, on the Mississippi River, and partly in the Paramount West Coast studio. Featured in the picture are Ernest Torrence, Mary Astor, Cullen Landis, Noah Beery and Phyllis Haver.

"Unknown Purple" Booked for Broadway

"The Unknown Purple," Roland West's production of his own stage play, made by Carlos Productions for Truart Film Corporation, will have two full-week showings on Broadway. The picture is scheduled to play a premier run in the metropolitan district at the Capitol Theatre during the beginning of March.



Moving Pictures Advertise Baseball Club

The Kansas City American Association baseball club arranged a deal with Pathe this week, which is considered a "gilt-edge" advertising plan. The club left Wednesday night for the Pacific coast to do spring training.

A reel, consisting of 200 feet of "cut-outs" of the high spots of the 1923 season with the ball club, taken at various times last summer, will precede the club a week in each of the towns where exhibitions are scheduled to be played, creating advance interest on the part of fans.

Robert Vignola becomes Own Producer

Robert G. Vignola has entered the ranks of producers on his own, according to advices received. He has purchased the rights to Louis Joseph Vance's new novel, "Mrs. Parmour," which will be his first picture. Other production plans have not yet been announced by Vignola.

Edward Earl, President of Nicholas Power Co., who has just returned from Atlantic City greatly improved in health.

Exploitation, Publicity Reorganized by Pathe

A reorganization of the Pathe Exploitation and Publicity Departments was effected this week in accordance with plans recently perfected by Elmer Pearson, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Under the plan of reorganization adopted, the exploitation and publicity departments, which have been amalgamated during the past two years, will hereafter be conducted as distinct units, the exploitation department coming under the supervision of P. A. Parsons, Advertising Manager for Pathe, and the publicity department functioning as a separate unit. Arthur M. Brilant has been named Exploitation Manager, and E. F. Supple has been appointed Publicity Manager.

Australia Officials Aid Paramount Month

The Paramount organization in Australia launches a picture drive March 1 which will continue through the month. It has the cooperation of leading picture houses and has been officially declared in a proclamation by the acting Premier of Australia, Dr. Page. The Premier of New South Wales also proclaimed for Paramount's First Greater Movie Season, as did the Mayor of Sydney.

Window displays, parades, balls, lobby displays and beauty contests have been planned in all parts of the country by exhibitors.

Laura La Plante Starring Vehicles Mapped Out

After four years at Universal City, Universal has decided to star Laura La Plante. A whole line of starring vehicles has been mapped out for her. The latest one is Sophie Kerr's Saturday Evening Post story called "Relative Value," which has just gone into production at Universal City under the studio title, "Relativity," with a cast which includes T. Roy Barns, Lucille Rickson and Lydia Yeamans Titus, under the direction of Bob Hill.

Universal Picture Will Open on Bowery

Among the openings of next week will be that of "Fool's Highway," the Universal-Jewel in which Mary Philbin makes her first stellar appearance following her success in "Merry Go Round." This opening will be unique in many respects. Instead of opening it at one of the big Broadway houses, Universal will open it on the Bowery. Through the courtesy of Frank Koren and Albert S. Goldberg, proprietors of the Atlantic Garden at No. 50 Bowery, the Universal will hold the world premiere of its picture on Friday night, Feb. 29, within a block of the corner on the Bowery where the great majority of the action takes place.

Senator James J. Walker will be master of ceremonies of the occasion and Governor Smith, one of the best known products of the Bowery, will make an address.

Hepworth Plans Campaign for Productions

James Di Lorenzo, general manager and R. T. Cranfield, president of the American offices of Hepworth Productions Inc., are having prepared an exploitation campaign for all Hepworth productions, the first of which, "Comin' Thro The Rye" will be given a special Broadway presentation.

A special news bureau and exploitation department has been installed by Messrs. Cranfield and Di Lorenzo, with Jesse Weil having been especially engaged to handle this particular work. Mr. Weil was formerly connected with the Universal and Film Booking offices and has handled some of Broadway's biggest picture successes in special exploitation.

The New Hepworth campaign department has a national new service whereby it is said to supply more than 300 papers with stories, photographs, interviews, in fact all articles of a readable nature concerning Hepworth films.

Otto Kiminik Resigns Post with Universal

Otto Kiminik, for two years in charge of the foreign publicity section of the publicity department of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has resigned to go with the Excelsior Publishing Company, publishers of "Excelsior Cinema," as business manager.

"Excelsior Cinema" is a new Spanish motion picture trade magazine to be published in the United States.

Paramount Art Manager to Join Benedicts

The marriage of Miss Rose Rispoli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rispoli, of New Rochelle, and Vincent Trotta, Art Manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, will take place Thursday, February 28, at 6 p. m., at the Reformed Church, Flushing, L. I. The wedding ceremony will be followed by a reception at the Flushing League Building.

Le Baron will Supervise Paramount Units

William Le Baron has resigned from Cosmopolitan and will supervise two producing units for Paramount at the Long Island studios. He will work with Julian Johnson and E. Lloyd Sheldon.

YOUR IDEA

WHILE public libraries as a whole have been rather generous in helping the cause of exploitation along on photoplays adapted from books, the Cleveland Public Library has recently gone a step farther than most.

This development in Cleveland is a testimonial to the increasing co-operation between the Screen and the library.

It has inaugurated a system of using posters and stills of such films as meet its requirements or displays of connecting books. When a picture presents itself that has ramifications in history, travel, biography or general literature, the library utilizes stills, posters and book covers.

Mrs. Ina Breevoort Roberts, in charge of the Cleveland Public Library publicity, explains that "the Library is guided by a very definite policy of its own—the film so featured must measure up to a certain ethical and moral standard and must have book connections. By book connections I do not mean merely that the film must have been made from a book; such films are sometimes not featured because the Library has already a larger demand than can well be supplied. By book connections I mean primarily history, travel, biography or literary books, and so on."

Two recent pictures given such co-operation are "Where the North Begins" and "Beau Brummel". Although the former is not a book adaptation, it was tied up with books dealing with the far North.

THERE is no more striking evidence of the world wide spread of exploitation and aggressive methods of showmanship than the increasing number of photographs which come to the NEWS from foreign parts. China, Japan, India, Sweden, England, Australia,

Front of the Metropol Teatret, Copenhagen, during the playing of "Isle of Lost Ships" (First Nat'l). Sofus Madsen, the owner, is seen standing in the entrance.

Java—all of these countries and more have been represented in these pages recently.

One of the latest to be received is the accompanying photo of another theatre abroad where MOTION PICTURE NEWS goes each week, the Metropol theatre in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Standing in the entrance will be seen Sofus Madsen, one of the leading theatre owners and showmen of Denmark. On the side of the house will be seen a sign, in Danish, for "The Isle of Lost Ships."

One of these days, we predict that American showmen will be getting ideas from their foreign contemporaries.

A theatre is only the lengthened shadow of its manager.

IT is only a few weeks since Marc Lachmann took up his duties exploiting "Thy Name is Woman," which is to open at the Lyric theatre, New York City, shortly, but he has already come through with several characteristic timely stunts.

His most recent is based on a feminine bandit just now occupying the front page attention of New Yorkers, known as the Bob-Haired Bandit. The stunt consists of a throwaway in the form of a letter. On the outside of the envelope is the line: An Open Letter to The Bob-Haired Bandit. Has She the Courage to Answer? On the back of the envelope is a sticker in red: Whoever You Are? Whatever You Are? Wherever You Are? "Thy Name is Woman."

Inside is a letter reading:

"Dear Madame: Whoever you are, whatever you are and wherever you are, you are a WOMAN, and because of your sex, your daring and banditry has afforded you as much space in the metropolitan daily newspapers as the "tea pot oil scandal" in Washington and other important news events of the day. You have baffled the police and the authorities by your cleverness and cunning because you are a WOMAN and your activities have been the talk of New York and Brooklyn.

"Because you are a WOMAN, you stand out in bold face type alongside the bevy of gunmen, thugs, pickpockets, confidence men and other characters of the underworld who operate just as cunningly as you do every day in the week in the city of New York with very little ever heard of their plunder. This only goes to prove that the world today pays attention to WOMAN first, last and always.

"A marvelous example of the power of your sex will be presented at the Lyric theatre on Monday evening, March 3rd, for the first time on any screen. (Then follows a paragraph of sales copy on the picture).

"The management of 'Thy Name is Woman' is anxious to have your impression of this picture and is willing to pay you the sum of $200 in cash, in any shape, manner or form you desire, if you will write your 300 word impression of what you think of 'Thy Name is Woman.' You must have your review at the Lyric theatre box office no later than March 7th. Remember the picture opens on March 3rd, at 8:30 sharp."

With the widespread interest in this unique character, this throwaway was pretty certain to be read and talked about.

TAKING advantage of the influx of pictures based upon famous books, the Public Service and Educational Department of the Crandall theatre, Washington, D. C., of which Harriet Hawley Locher is director, has just sent out a letter to its mailing list bearing on this and carrying other helpful propaganda.

Accompanied by a Grosset & Dunlap circular listing recent leading book adaptations, the following letter was sent out:

"For some time I have been considering the advisability of sending out an occasional letter to my 'special mailing list.' It will soon be two years since that service was started and I am eager to know whether it has been of any real value to you, whether you get more enjoyment from the pictures, and are analyzing them and picking those you go to see as you would the books you read.

"Motion pictures means so much in the life of every community today that no one can afford to close his mind against them. Prejudice is a stumbling block to progress. The rapidity of their development along educational lines alone must convince anyone, however skeptical, of the necessity of getting a better understanding of this great visual medium of world entertainment and world communication.

"It is the public's understanding and appreciation which will eventually lift the motion picture to its true position in the world of artistic achievement. As truly as motion pictures are the greatest educational factor ever given to the world, the day will come when they will fill a recognized pace in the artistic field.

"The children of Washington who are now having visual instruction through government films in the Crandall neighborhood theatres are learning how to study from the screen. They are acquiring quickness of observation and are learning to concentrate; their imagination is stimulated and naturally their fluency of expression, both written and oral, is increased. They will be the critical and appreciative audiences of the future. They will demand a high standard of production and the lessons of the screen will have a decided influence on their choice of their vocation in life.

"There has been a marked change in production during the past two years. The industry has met the demand of the public for 'better pictures' by putting out an astonishing number of pictures made from books by standard authors. After their screen production the demand for books of prohibitive price, for the majority, has grown so great that they are now coming out in popular priced editions within the means of all. An enlarged reading public is thus created, as well as additional revenue for the author.

AND OURS

"The accompanying list of books that have been screened may be of service to you should you ever discuss the pictures that were produced in 1922-23."

THERE is perhaps nothing that creates more general interest in motion pictures locally than the stunt of filming civic events. This is not always possible for the exhibitor, although most cities of any size have at least one cameraman today, and the results usually well justify the expense.

A recent example of the interest excited by this idea was furnished in St. Louis, where the Boy Scouts staged a mammoth Round-up and Circus. It was a citywide event, with more than 5,000 scouts participating.

Taking motion pictures of the Boy Scout Roundup and Circus in St. Louis by the Industrial Department of Rothacker.

The Rothacker Film Company accordingly sent a crew to St. Louis, including William Abbe and Charles Geis as cameramen, and St. Louis citizens were given new sidelights on the taking of The Scouts went through their paces while the cameras ground away, and St. Louis citizens were given new sidelights on the taking of motion pictures.

LIKE a newspaperman, a theatre manager must be ever alert to take instant advantage of every "break," whether it be a bank robbery which he can tie up with a crook picture, or a sudden change in the weather.

Which is by way of saying that Manager C. D. Stanbaugh of the Pastime theatre, Cornelia, Ga., is such an exhibitor. Recently, when he was playing "Smilin' Through," a sudden rain storm came up and threatened to ruin matters completely. In the large cities, a rain fall will often drive shoppers indoors, and fill the theatres in consequence. That was not the case in Cornelia, and Manager Stanbaugh was forced to work fast.

He got in touch with the printer, and within an hour boys were distributing bills in the residential district with the word "Rain" in big type at the top and sides, and the message that Cornelians couldn't afford to miss the picture "even if it is raining."

It proved to be one of those timely stunts that turn defeat into victory, and the psychological effect was excellent.

MORE and more is the national tie-up becoming a staple feature of exploitation. The advantages in its favor are many. In many cases, the manufacturer will issue elaborate display material for the dealer, and the theater is provided with a much better sales argument in obtaining the merchant's co-operation.

One of the most recent of these is the Humming Bird Hosiery hook-up on "The Humming Bird," and Leon J. Bamberger, who is handling the film company's end of the stunt, reports that it is bringing in the desired results. H. Walter Fred, president of the hosiery mills, has notified him that plans are nearly completed for a co-operative advertising campaign wherever there is a Humming Bird dealer.

In Chicago, Ed Olmstead, of McVickers' theater, persuaded Mandel Brothers to take a full-page ad on the hosiery and the photoplay, and 40 extra girls were put on in the hosiery department. Further co-operation was given in the house organ published by McVickers, tying in with the stunt.

Another theater to utilize the hook-up to advantage is Loew's Palace at Memphis, where Howard Waugh arranged with Lowenstein's department store for co-operative advertising and window displays.

Tie-ups on this scale unquestionably work to the advantage of both parties concerned, and are helping to put exploitation on a sounder and more adequate basis.

AT last a rival to the Jackie Coogan impersonation contest has appeared—the "Black Oxen" street ballyhoo. In every hamlet, apparently, where this picture holds forth, the exhibitor manages by some dodge to produce a pair of dusky oxen to parade the streets.

Unfortunately, black oxen are about as common as the proverbial hen's teeth, and many a manager is forced to lie awake nights wondering where they are coming from.

Hand painted "Black Oxen" used in Los Angeles as a street stunt on the First National picture.

Such managers need lose no more sleep, for the solution of the difficulty has been found. When the picture opened at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, Manager Bill Knotts of the local First National exchange arranged to have black oxen convey the print from the exchange to the theatre, through the busiest traffic.

The idea was a good one, but no oxen of a suitable shade were forthcoming. Then—the inspiration—and Knotts arranged with J. L. Johnston of the Frank Lloyd unit to spray two docile steers with a solution of lamp black water color. They were then hitched to a cart and drew the print to the theatre, where Manager John P. Goring and Dick Spier, ad man, awaited the delivery.

The paint used was non-poisonous and the stunt was therefore entirelp humane. Just what would have happened if a rain storm had come up during the delivery, must remain a matter of conjecture.

"Big Brother" Stunt Wins Publicity for Theatre

On the assumption that if you get the youngsters with you in a logical tie-up, the box office will feel the result, Milton D. Crandall, publicity and advertising chief on the Rowland and Clark theatres worked out a valuable stunt in behalf of "Big Brother" in the Steel City.

His reasoning was that the picture "Big Brother" as well as the Big Brother movement convey the idea of helping some youngster who needs help. So he got busy and hit upon the idea of giving away woolen stockings and socks to the newsboys of Pittsburgh from the steps of the City-County Building and giving them through the medium of a real honest-to-goodness Big Brother. Instead of having the giver a member of the male sex, Crandall thought it would be more effective to have a pretty girl act as the dispenser. And his judgment proved to be correct. No mere man could have attracted the attention that Mrs. Katheryn Kean, dressed in a natty riding costume, did as she was driven about the streets of Pittsburgh and at the City-County building when she became the Big Brother in fact.

Crandall had effectively advertised the program in advance so that the newsboys turned out enmasse. Nine hundred of the newspaper salesmen were present at the allotted time, Saturday noon, and were given cards entitling them to a pair of woolen stockings or socks. These cards they took to a leading department store where the orders were filled.

The automobile in which the Big Brother rode carried as suitable advertising that the picture "Big Brother" was coming to Rowland and Clark's Regent and Blackstone theatres the following week, so that thousands knew in advance about the picture.

Dogs Boost "Where North Begins"

Police Pups Figure in Exploitation on Feature at Various Ohio Houses

SINCE the picture features a dog star, it is natural enough that Ohio exhibitors have availed themselves of this angle for appropriate exploitation on "Where the North Begins."

At the State theater, Lorain, Ohio, owned by Jack Greenbaum, managed by Tommy Carroll, with exploitation by Larr Jacobs, a police dog created great excitement.

Jacobs located a family of police pups and bought one of them. Arrangements were then made to give this pup away during the week to the winner of a suitable contest. It was exhibited in the theater lobby for an entire week, and was the talk of the town.

Greenbaum also owns the Opera House in Mansfield. Also he ran "Where the North Begins" at the Opera House in Mansfield and used the dog stunt there, just as he did at his State theater, Lorain, only, Greenbaum instigated a dog parade in Mansfield. The one having the best turnout in the parade got the prize police pup.

George Schade, manager of the Schade theater, Sandusky, got front page newspaper stories about "Where the North Begins" which played at his house. Famous as George Schade is, he has a dog, "Pete," a Boston bull, who is almost as famous as his master. Schade advertised the fact that he had arranged to have Rin-Tin-Tin II shipped on from the coast, that the dog would be given away at the conclusion of the engagement of the picture, but that, in the meantime, the dog would be at his own home.

The next day, following this announcement, the papers came out with a front page story that Schade's famous dog Pete had taken a violent dislike to Rin-Tin-Tin II and that Schade had to separate the animals, putting the police dog on exhibition in the lobby of the Schade theater. All this publicity worked well, and "Where the North Begins" attracted corresponding attention.

Attractive art front devised by E. M. Berg of Wichita Falls, Texas, for the showing of "The Flirt" (Universal) at the Olympic theatre.

Editorial Columns Exploit Showing of "Hunchback"

Gus A. Metzger, manager of the Rivoli, Portland, Ore., put over a novel tie-up with the three local dailies in connection with his showing of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Prior to his presentation he prevailed upon the editors of the Portland Oregonian, the Oregon Daily Journal and the Portland Telegram to use "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" as subject matter for editorials.

The Portland Telegram devoted one-half column (wide measure) on its editorial page to a character study of Quasimodo under the heading: "Love Needs No Interpreter." This analysis was developed from a religious angle, and showed that Quasimodo's character and career were based upon the same fundamentals governing the sacrificial life and death of Christ.

The Sunday Oregonian gave almost an entire column to its editorial captioned: "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The article praised the production, and foresaw almost unlimited possibilities for the ftuure of the screen, basing its assumption on the gigantic strides manifested by photodrama under discussion.

The Oregon Daily Journal's editorial, "The Hunchback," lavished praise on the star, the producer, and all those whose talents were blended in forming so illustrious a composition. The burden of the article was that the old classics of literature had been vindicated, not by the skilled pen of some erudite, but by the youngest of all forms of human expression — the motion picture.

Mercantile Tie-ups Boost "Long Live the King"

"Long Live the King" was put over at Loew's Vendome theatre in Nashville recently with an unusually strong exploitation campaign.

Two big department stores cooperated with E. A. Vinson, manager of the Vendome. Burk & Company, situated in the heart of the city, gave two big windows over to a display of Jackie Coogan clothing, while Lebeck Brothers, also on Nashville's main street, gave over one of their big counters in the center aisle to a display of Jackie Coogan Peanuts.

Both the clothing and peanut display are national tie-ups, as the manufacturing firms in both cases have exclusive rights and both have agents in every major city in the United States.

The peanut display was given further interest by the fact that the salesgirl who sold at the counter was dressed in the tattered breeches, cap and sweater which has come to distinguish Jackie. This display attracted thousands of people. This and the Burk Co. window were before the public all through the "Long Live the King" engagement at the Vendome.

The lobby of the Vendome was so unusually attractive for this engagment that it was the comment of Nashville. Mr. Vinson hung hundreds of souvenirs from the ceiling, from the walls and wherever else it was possible to do so without interfering with the entrance. These souvenirs consisted of pencil boxes, beautiboxes and other things dear to the heart of every child, and were given away to the children that came to see "Long Live the King."

It was a great campaign, executed on popular lines and boosted the Vendome even higher in the regard of the people of Nashville.

Censor Meeting Is Made to Aid "Boy of Mine"

A. P. Desormeaux of the Strand theatre, Madison, Wis., takes advantage of every opportunity. Recently the citizens of Madison got together and decided that the pictures needed betterment.

Fortunately a few theatre managers were also on hand. Some of them, including Mr. Desormeaux, were able to suggest that criticism should be constructive as well as destructive. The upholders of law and order saw this point.

Mr. Desormeaux was playing "Boy of Mine" the following week and took advantage of the "censorship" meeting to urge that here was a picture that deserved the support of the entire community.

The idea caught on and profited by voluntary boosting. The most conspicuous exploitation resulting from it was the fact that the Wisconsin State Journal published an editorial the next day for better films. It outlined the purposes of the meeting. At the end it added a postscript. It was a paragraph endorsing "Boy of Mine" as one of the pictures that ought to be patronized. It is said to be one of the few times that a picture has ever been named in the editorial column of the Wisconsin State Journal.

Double-truck in Atlanta on "Strangers of Night"

A double-truck of co-operative advertising taken by the leading merchants of the city was one of the phases of the exploitation campaign that was put over for the Howard theatre in Atlanta, Georgia, for the engagement of "Strangers of the Night." This was effected by C. D. Haug, Metro's exploitation representative in that territory.

This is said to be the first time in the history of Atlanta that a double-truck has been put over. It appeared in the Sunday American, timing exactly with the beginning of the engagement. It created a great deal of comment.

A "hidden word" contest was run in connection with the double-truck. Those who were successful in solving the hidden words were given tickets to the Howard theatre to see "Strangers of the Night." About a thousand people participated in this stunt.

The castle front idea was used at the Beacham theatre, Orlando, Fla., when "Ashes of Vengeance" (First Nat'l) was shown at that house. Frank H. Burns is exploitation director.

Seattle Campaign on "Scaramouche"

Illuminated Street Ballyhoo Used

AN unusually strong advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign, handled jointly by the theatre and the exchange was utilized to good advantage recently when "Scaramouche" played at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre in Seattle.

The campaign was started off three weeks before the showing began, with small teaser ads in the local press, a novelty trailer shown on the screen, and a half display of twenty-four sheets on the billboards in all districts of the city. The week before the showing, Ned Edris, special exploitation manager for the Metro exchange in Seattle, arranged the first electrically lighted street ballyhoo ever used in the Northwest.

This was made by using cutouts of figures from the twenty-four sheets, mounted on both sides of a board wall which was built down the center of a Ford truck. At each side of the truck a frame was built, and behind the frame were set a number of spotlights, trained on the figures mounted on the board. The back of the truck advertised the name of the picture, date of engagement, and theatre, in cutout letters.

Eight storage batteries lighting a total of more than eighty electric lamps, were used on all sides of the truck, which was used for about three hours each evening, from five-thirty to eight-thirty, or until the batteries were exhausted. When seen by the home-going crowds, it had the appearance of an oil painting in a gold frame, and was doubly effective because it was built to be visible from both sides.

In addition, Mr. Edris and Vic Gauntlett, special advertising and publicity manager for the Blue Mouse, arranged for a total display of forty-five downtown windows, in drug stores, cigar stores, drug stores, candy stores and music stores. This was the largest number of window displays ever arranged on any picture shown in Seattle in recent years.

A tie-up with the Washington Bakeries company, arranged by Mr. Edris, resulted in 50,000 two-color heralds, advertising "Scaramouche," the director, and a number of facts about the picture, being inserted into loaves of bread as they were automatically wrapped and sealed when they came out of the ovens. These gained wide-spread distribution, as the bread is distributed all over the grocery stores in Seattle and neighboring suburbs.

Attention winning display on "The Darling of New York" (Universal) devised by Emil Groth of Keith's Coliseum, New York.

Music Firm Co-operates

The Sherman and Clay Music company, largest Seattle music dealers, co-operated with Mr. Gauntlett in the distribution of 20,000 specially printed cards. These were given out in each package delivered by Sherman Clay, and the wording emphasized the musical score and special musical numbers used during the picture that were available on records, piano rolls and sheet music at the store.

When the picture was running, a double display of more than forty 24-sheets were used in all sections of Seattle, and a special display was used on the boards on highways close to the city and in neighboring towns within interurban communication of Seattle.

Several French societies, fraternal organizations at the University of Washington, ladies' clubs, literary and dramatic clubs, and reading clubs were solicited by a series of personal letters from the Blue Mouse, advising that the recipient be sure to see "Scaramouche" because of its peculiar interest to them in their organization's line of endeavor.

A radio tie-up with the Seattle Post Intelligencer resulted in the broadcasting of the theme music used during the picture, and another tie-up with the same paper was used to broadcast a number of solos and ensemble vocal numbers that were featured in the specially arranged prologue to the picture.

Elaborate Prologue Staged

This prologue was, in itself, a feature of the performance. It was entirely arranged by Henri C. LeBel, manager of presentation at the Blue Mouse, and was considered the finest thing of its kind seen in Seattle. It opened with an orchestra overture including a medley of the "Marseillaise," "Pagliacci" prologue, and Minuet. Following this, a man and woman costumed as "Climeme Binet" and "The Marquis De La Tour" appeared in a set at the left of the stage and sang "Minuet." At the close of the song a young lady costumed as a court dancer offered a special French dance on the stage. This was followed by the appearance of "Aline de Kercadiou" and "Andre Louis Moreau" in a scene at the right, singing "If Love Were All." A prolocutor, in the costume of a French nobleman, then appeared from the center of the stage and read from a scroll, "John Hamrick presents Rex Ingram's masterpiece, 'Scaramouche' from the novel, etc." The prologue ended with the singing of "If Love Were All" by the entire cast.

An interlude, staged at the end of the play "Scaramouche" in the middle of the picture, started by having the character "Scaramouche" appear in the costume which he wore in the picture at that place, and sing the "Pagliacci" prologue. Following this, the interlocutor appeared again and read from his scroll the origin of the Marseillaise. As he read this, the description was enacted on the left of the stage by a character representing De Lisle, the composer, and at the end of the recitation, De Lisle arose and sang the song. The interlude closed with the singing of the second chorus by De Lisle, accompanied by the other voices off stage.

Short Subjects and Serials

Educational Augments March List

Output Declared to Be Largest Month Program of Its Season

WITH thirty-one reels of comedy, novelty and newsreels included in its March schedule of releases, Educational announces that this will make March the largest month's list of the 1923-24 Series.

Seven two-reel comedies representing five brands, are the mainstay of the program with seven single reel releases consisting of comedy, novelty and song-pictures rounding out the month.

The two-reel subjects include two Mermaid Comedies, two Christie Comedies, and one each of the Tuxedo, Clyde Cook, and Juvenile Comedies, while the seven single reel subjects include three Cameo Comedies, and one subject each of the Bruce Wilderness Tales, Secrets of Life series, Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-podge and the Sing Them Again series. Seven issues of Kinograms, issued twice weekly, complete the month's program.

"Wide Open", a Mermaid Comedy with Paige Conley, will be released the first week of the month, with "Oh Captain", a Cameo Comedy supplying the single reel release of the week.

The week of March 9 is headed by the Christie Comedy, "Getting Gertie's Goat", with Dorothy Devore, "The Ant Lion", fourth of the Secrets of Life series, and the Bruce Wilderness Tale, "Haunted Hills", furnishing the short reel support. "Haunted Hills" is one of the Bruce Wilderness Tales recently rated by the National Board of Review as exceptional Photoplays.

Tuxedo Comedy, "The New Sheriff", with "Poodles" Hanneford, New York Hippodrome clown, is the two-reel subject for the week of March 16. Cliff Bowes, Sid Smith and Virginia Vance are seen again in the Cameo Comedy, "Cave Inn", also on the schedule for this week.

Two two-reel comedies and two single reel subjects are released the following week. Bobby Vernon appears in the Christie Comedy, "Reno Or Bust", with the second of the Clyde Cook Comedies, "Under Orders". "Long Ago", one of the "Sing Them Again" series, and "Jumping Jacks" a Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, complete the week.

The last week of the month also lists two two-reel comedies, the Juvenile Comedy, "Barnum, Jr.," with Johnnie Fox, Jr., and the Mermaid Comedy, "Family Life." "Bargain Day," a Cameo Comedy, completes the month's schedule.

"Fast Steppers" Series by Universal

Work has started at Universal City on a new two-reeler series reported to be similar to "The Leather Pushers."

The new series will be known as "The Fast Steppers" and will consist of a number of short comedy dramas built around the adventures of a horseracing enthusiast and tipster.

They are being adapted from Gerald Beaumont's race track stories, "The Information Kid," series.

Billy Sullivan, who succeeded Reginald Denny in the "Leather Pushers," has been chosen to play the leading role.

Charles Chase is featured in this one reel comedy, "Hard Knocks," produced by Hal Roach for Pathe distribution.

"Hollywood Kid" Comedy Preview with Sennett

Mack Sennett's latest comedy, "The Hollywood Kid," was previewed at Grauman's Metropolitan Theatre at Los Angeles.

Roy Del Ruth directed this story of studio life with Mack Sennett playing the character of a producer in the comedy.

These clever animals are active in the William Fox current Imperial Comedy, "On The Job."

Three Fox Educationals Released in March

FOX Film Corporation will release three of the new series of Educational Entertainments during March. The first of these short reelers will be "Rivers of Song," March 2nd, followed by "Feathered Fishermen" on March 16th and "A New England Farm" on March 30th.

Famous rivers in American history are shown in "Rivers of Song." Among the rivers are the Swanee, Hudson, Potomac, Mississippi, Columbia and Ohio.

"Feathered Fishermen" gives some views of bird life on the islands off the California coast. The habits of the seagull, cormorant and pelican are shown in their haunts.

"A New England Farm" presents the life of a family on a Down East farm. The work of the farmer starting with the early morning chores and continuing until the cows are safely locked in the barns at night is presented.

Theatres Join in Safety Campaign

International News and Theatre Owners Co-operate with Police

WHAT is expected to be one of the most effective acts of public service in the history of the silver sheet has just been undertaken by the International Newsreel Corporation in co-operation with the New York City Police Department and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc.

A series of safety first pictures illustrating the dangers of city streets has been prepared to be shown serially in the International News reel, beginning with International News No. 22, released March 8th.

The pictures illustrate how the dangers of the streets of America's greatest city are being overcome by the Bureau of Public Safety of the New York Police Department, and are expected to serve as an impressive warning against "jay-walking," reckless driving by motorists and carelessness of parents in allowing children to play in busy streets. The pictures apply equally to any other American city, according to International.

Special Deputy Police Commissioner Barron Collier, E. B. Hatrick, General Manager of the International and William Brandt, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, of New York, planned the series and worked it out under their personal supervision.

The pictures show the dangers to children playing in public thoroughfares. Motorists next can see the tragedies that result from carelessness in negotiating railroad crossings.

One of the common causes of accidents is pictured sh ng the manner in which many passengers - especially women — alight from street car nd cross behind the car without waiting f the car to draw away and thus give a cl view of the street.

The film later will be used by the New York Police Department in its educational work in the schools and elsewhere.

A private screening of these "safety first" pictures was held last week for a score of police captains and lieutenants of the New York Traffic Squad.

Four Century Comedies on March "U" List

Four Century Comedies are scheduled for March release by Universal.

"Sons-in-Laws," co-starring Jack Earle and Harry McCoy, tells the story of two headstrong young chaps who become "sons-in-laws" instead of would-be "sons-in-laws."

"That Oriental Game" shows Pal the dog and is built around the game Mah Jong. Harry Sweet also appears.

"Young Tenderfoot" stars Buddy Messinger supported by Sadie Campbell, in a western comedy.

"That's Rich" features Arthur Trimble and deals with a much-abused little fellow and his ultimate revenge.

Another Century Comedy for Noel Smith

Noel Smith has started work on a new Century Comedy for Julius and Abe Stern. "The Movie Queen," is the title.

Al. Alt will play the leading role, originally assigned to McCoy whose illness at the last moment made it necessary for Alt to assume the leading comedy role. Fatty Carr, Leslie Goodwin and Big Bill Blaisdell also appear in the cast.

Golf has been called "The National Rash," in t One-Reel Grantland Rice Sportlight Picture Dist buted by Pathe.

Roach Extends Producin Schedule for Pathe

Hal Roach Studios are speeding up on enlarged production schedule for Pathe, whi includes two feature length pictures as w as short-subject comedies.

Production is completed on the first of t comedy-dramas, made under the title of "T Fighting Tylers".

This is a story of small-town politics l in the Middle West and presents Glenn Try and Blanche Mehaffey in the leading rol Camera work has been started on the seco comedy drama, in which these two play will again play the leads. Tryon is seen an unsophisticated youth who comes to N York and meets a chorus girl for whom h retains few illusions.

Roach has launched a new two-reel come unit in which James Finlayson will pl prominent roles. Charles Puffy, a 3 pounder from Europe, will also be seen in t series, to be directed by George Jeske.

Will Rogers has just finished a two-r political satire, directed by Bob Wagn The "Our Gang" group, "Spat Famil players, and Charles Chase company also engaged on new comedy subjects.

Harry Langdon is a Photographer in his latest Mack Sennett Two-Reel Comedy, "Smile Please," for Pathe release.

Two More "Chronicles" are Under Way for Pathe

TWO new subjects of the "Chronicles of America" series for Pathe release are under way. Of these, the picture titled "The Declaration of Independence" is well along towards completion. Kenneth Webb is directing.

Camera work is scheduled to start on "Yorktown" within the next week under the direction of Webster Campbell. This subject will reproduce George Washington's military campaign which culminated in the surrender of Cornwallis.

Detachments from the Army, Navy and Marine Corps are expected to participate in the battle scenes showing the joint operations of the Americans under Washington and the French under Rochambeau against the British.

Mack Sennett to Appear in His Own Cast

Word from the Mack Sennett Studios reports rapid progress on the production schedule for Pathe. In process is a comedy, titled "The Kid from Hollywood," which presents Mack Sennett himself in an actor's role.

The story is built around studio life and Sennett plays the character of a producer.

Harry Langdon's next comedy presents him as a New York policeman whose beat extends through Greenwich Village. The picture, which is being made under the title of "The Cat's Meow", presents Alice Day, Madeleine Hurlock and Kalla Pasha in the support.

The cast of Ben Turpin's new comedy is being assembled, the subject being a burlesque version of "The Virginian."

Dorothy Devore is starred in this current Educational Christie Comedy, "Getting Gertie's Goat."

Educational to Release Plastigrams

"PLASTIGRAMS," the stereoscopic motion picture recently acquired by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., will be released March 23, according to announcement from the distributors.

Commends Improvements in Short Subjects

Under the heading, "Added Features Improve," Raoul Rodriquez, writing for "The Preview," gravure motion picture supplement of the Los Angele Times, calls attention to the remarkable improvement in the last few years, of the one and two-reel subjects, in both production and entertainment value.

Commenting on the early attempts at comedy when the pictures consisted of little more than wild runs by policemen after petty but clever crooks, the article says: "The added attraction later took on a tone of dignity and importance with the result that today it occupies a place almost of equality with the feature, at least to the amount of time that the exhibitors devote to it.

"Nowadays the comedy possesses a generous touch of slyness and wit that makes it a worthwhile production. There is no need for eulogy—the slapstick comedy is the monarch of the added attractions; and the domestic situation comedy is not inferior to it.

"Among the newer additions to the host of added attractions that have developed are the pictures of microscopic animal life, which are shown on the screen magnified thousands and even millions of times," concludes the article, probably referring to the "Secrets of Life" series being released by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

All Century Units Are Busy Producing

After completing "The Racing Kid," a Buddy Messinger comedy, Al Herman started on another Messinger subject for Century entitled "The Jazz Boy," with "Spec" O'Donnell, Martha Sleeper, Harry Pringle and Countess Mariana Moya in support.

Director Herman is then scheduled to produce another Century Comedy for Universal starring Pal the dog.

Other Century announcements show that Harry Edwards will take charge of the giant Jack Earle in producing "Marrying Money."

Guild-Made to Produce "The Puritans"

Yale University Press has completed arrangements whereby Guild-Made Pictures (The Film Guild) will immediately start production of "The Puritan," one of the forthcoming "Chronicles of America" pictures distributed by Pathe.

The stations which broadcasted the talks were K D K A, at Pittsburg, K Y W, at Chicago, and W B Z, at Springfield, Mass.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Leatherstocking"
(Pathe Serial)

BOYS who are lovers of James Fenimore Cooper's works, and grown-ups who have read Cooper many years ago, will assuredly be interested in seeing this serial with Leatherstocking as the hero.

The first three episodes contain great promise of what is to come and are full of action. This should pull as it is off the beaten path somewhat.

Those that get a thrill from combats between Indians and White Men are amply provided with many fights in the woods and on the water.

Of course a "chase" has to be inserted in every serial and the adapter furnishes the father of the heroine with a mysterious jewel casket which is later stolen by marauding Indians.

Harold Miller is "Leatherstocking," a white man who lived ten years with the Delaware Indians and learned their language and customs. Edna Murphy is the heroine with a weak minded sister and a father who has established his family on a picturesque houseboat of logs which is floating on a lake in the Indian country.

While the Delawares are friendly the Hurons, allies of the French, are enemies. George B. Seitz directed this one for C. W. Patton and it should satisfy generally all audiences that like the average serial.—TOMHAM

"When Knighthood Was in Tower"
(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

THIS latest release of the "Telephone Girl" series carries the same breeziness and pep that have made the other Witwer subjects unusual among short films. With more of story interest than the ordinary two-reel comedy, the titles and gags still provide a generous quota of laugh material.

In this case, Gladys Murgatroyd, the switchboard manipulator of the Hotel St. Moe, takes pity on a younger would-be playwright, about to be ousted for non-payment of his bill. She brings about a meeting with a celebrated actor-producer stopping at the St. Moe, but the latter objects to the play on the ground that it is improbable and that the underworld characters are greatly overdrawn.

To set matters right, Gladys arranges a slumming expedition to an underworld dance hall, where several of her friends inpersonate Bowery characters. The affair ends up in a free-for-all fight, with the chief characters in the city jail, but the actor has been convinced that the play is true to life in its portrayal of "toughs," so he agrees to produce it.

The action proceeds at a lively clip, and the release should please. Tom Wilson contributes an excellent bit, and Douglas Gerrard gives an amusing burlesque of a familiar type of matinee idol. Alberta Vaughn, a sinuously graceful damsel, is thoroughly in character as Gladys. The subtitles are typical Witwer "slanguage".—A. C. MOEN.

"Long Ago"
(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is an another of the "Sing Them Again" series in which old popular songs are introduced with elaborate illustrations. Included in this issue are "Annie Laurie", "Far Away" and "Just A Song At Twilight". A pleasing romance is woven about each song.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Swing Bad the Sailor"
(Universal—Two Reels)

BILLY SULLIVAN is at his best in this good story of the Leather Pushers' series. On a vaudeville tour he is meeting all-comers and agreeing to give any one a hundred dollars who can stay one round with him. The crew of a sailing vessel is in attendance at the performance and the tough mate is egged on by the skipper's daughter to prove his boasted prowess in the ring.

The mate is flattened in jig time and claims he is the victim of an unfair referee. That night the Kid is kidnapped by members of the crew and brought aboard the ship. Joe, his manager and Tommy, his trainer scent the plot and hasten to the ship. They are bound, as is the Kid until the mate gets ready for his return bout. Despite his unfair tactics, the mate is again the humiliated victim of a thorough beating. The Kid wakes up with his trainer tugging at his hair and the whole thing is revealed as a chop suey dream of the trainer. The story is well told and has plenty of humor and fast action.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Buccaneers"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WHAT boy has not tried to emulate the pirates? Hal Roach's young rascals, in this "Our Gang" Comedy, will bring the older folks back to their childhood days and thoroughly amuse them while the younger set and the children can laugh to their hearts content.

The gang is located on the seashore and build a pirate ship with the black flag, skull and crossbones, and all rakish costumes they can improvise. A bottle of Ketchup is used to launch the boat which quickly goes to the bottom as it strikes the water.

An old salt permits the Gang to use his boat as a pirate ship and when it breaks loose from its moorings the United States Navy rescues the boys. Pure and delightful comedy that convulses the average audience.—TOMHAM.

" Sons in Law "
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS is a hodge podge of hokum that is sillier than it is funny. Jack Earle and Harry McCoy are in love with sisters and both are disapproved by the father. They try to win the father's favor by mastering his favorite game, croquet, but Jack spoils it all by slamming father in the eye with a ball as he gets down to measure a shot.

Later when father is trying to master the driving of a new car he knocks Harry off a cliff and the latter feigns death that the lovers may gain entrance into the home of their sweethearts. The subterfuge is discovered and the usual long chase begins. Small children may find the humor in this one, but it is too silly to be pleasing to others.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Secrets Of Life Series
(Educational—One Reel)

IF one is interested in bugs there is lots of an educational nature to be gleaned from this series. The Ant Lion (Boodle Bug) is not a pretty thing to look upon, particularly at close quarters, as it is shown by Mr. Tolhurst. It is shown from its egg days to its complete development. Its method of existence, through the catching of gnats and ants, is depicted in an interesting manner.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"The Weakling"
(Fox—Two Reels)

SLAPSTICK comedy of college life introducing, at first, a pushball contest between girls which is good for a laugh, and various high-jinks contributed by Henry Murdock and the rest of the cast, feature the action of this picture. Murdock portrays the timid, be-spectacled youth, afraid to take part in the athletic events which are in progress at the college, but after much persuasion by his sister enters several events, which he wins, through accidents, much to the discomfiture of the college "bully" who, angry because he has lost, proceeds to make life miserable for Murdock. He gathers together his friends and after beating up Murdock they ship him to a hospital. His antics at the hospital after being put under the influence of ether will cause many a laugh. He escapes in an aeroplane with the "bully" as passenger and proceeds to execute numerous fancy figures in the air, due to his lack of knowledge concerning the motor, finally surrendering his place as pilot to the "bully," who causes the machine to take a nose-dive to the earth with disastrous results.

While this is a slapstick pure and simple, it will nevertheless entertain because of the many amusing "gags."—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The New Sheriff"
(Educational—Two Reels)

POODLES HANNEFORD, as the Sheriff is decidedly in favor of the opposite sex, and particularly the new school teacher, who is abducted and secreted in a hut by several of the town ruffians. Strapped to a post she is to be the victim of a pistol attached to the clock within ten minutes. Poodles dog has trailed the abductors and sensed the situation. He rushes to his master and brings the necessary relief in the nick of time. The picture has suspense, some good comedy, a display of splendid horsemanship by the hero and a wonderfully intelligent dog.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Love's Detour"
(Pathe—One Reel)

HE is a hotel clerk and falls in love with a little spitfire who is one of the guests. And the telephone girl in the hotel just laughs up her sleeve every time that the comedian, Charles Chase, meets with a rebuff.

When the mother of the spitfire has her own wrinkles removed and tries to vamp the young man there is a surprise finish when the telephone girl bags the game.

A high class comedy that will please those that do not care for the old style slapstick.—TOMHAM

"The National Rash"
(Pathe—One Reel)

GOLFERS will enjoy this Grantland Rice "Sportlight" and lovers of all sports will be entertained by the champions of Golf.

Mr. Rice shows that two Scotch shepherds originated the game five hundred years ago and then introduces the audience to the present day leaders in the game.

Cowboys in the far Northwest are also pictured as golf fiends and many laughs should result from the performance of the "duffer" who is ever present at all courses.—TOMHAM.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Happiness

(Metro—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

TAKEN all in all this screen version of the J. Hartley Manners' story is just about the equal of the stage success in which Laurette Taylor also starred. The one fault with the picture seems to be that it is overacted. Miss Taylor is splendid for the most part but she seems inclined to rather overdo the little flippancies that are bound to win favor until too often repeated.

Cyril Chadwick also seems to overdo his boredom with life, occasioned by the fact that he is a gentleman of leisure. His acting is anything but natural, though the role is not entirely a natural one. The same may be said of Edith Yorke in the overdrawn role of Mrs. Wreay.

Save for the early sequence where the Brooklyn youngsters display some local color the picture is inclined to drag a bit through the first reel or two, but it takes on action with the initial appearance of Pat O'Malley, as Fermoy MacDonough, the young inventor, whom circumstances hold to a laboring job. O'Malley plays the role naturally and convincingly. His scenes with Miss Taylor are splendid for the most part and will win the pair much favorable comment. Rarely has O'Malley been seen in a more human role and it is hard to conceive of it being played in a more convincing manner.

The first meeting of the pair speeds up the action from mediocrity and the picture fairly hums from that time on. During the process of their transformation from comparative poverty to likewise comparative affluence in which they are aided by the idle rich Hedda Hopper as Mrs. Chrystal Pole and Cyril Chadwick as Philip Chandos the story is very pleasing and logical enough to be convincing.

There are touches of comedy throughout that are bound to win approval and they are nicely interspersed with pathetic incidents, that though a bit overplayed at times, are, however, effective.

THEME. Melodrama in which young Brooklyn errand girl and her young Irish lover fight their way from poverty with the aid of idle rich benefactors, to a position of comparative affluence.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The many splendid scenes between Miss Taylor and Pat O'Malley. The bits of local color when the Brooklyn youngsters do their sidewalk stunts. The display of gowns in the modiste parlor.

DIRECTION. Is inclined to have the roles overacted, but for the most part the full value is developed in nearly every sequence. The humorous angles are particularly well built and the scenes well laid.

EXPLOITATION. The name of the star is the best exploitation bet. Pat O'Malley's characterization of the young electrician. A ready appeal can be made to shopgirls.

DRAWING POWER. Should be pleasing for any sort of house.

SUMMARY. A good story inclined to be overacted in spots, but one which maintains the interest throughout. There is no particularly dramatic climax, but the story is evenly and well told. Photography and settings are good.

THE CAST

Jenny Wreay	Laurette Taylor
Fermoy MacDonough	Pat O'Malley
Mrs. Chrystal Pole	Hedda Hopper
Philip Chandos	Cyril Chadwick
Mrs. Wreay	Edith Yorke
Mr. Rosselstein	Laurence Grant
Sallie Perkins	Patterson Dial

Adapted by J. Hartley Manners from his own stage play. Directed by King Vidor.

SYNOPSIS. Jenny, Brooklyn errand girl, because of her sunny disposition, is induced to bring her mother and live with Mrs. Chrystal Pole, wealthy young widow, tired of life. One day she meets Fermoy MacDonough, electrician and inventor, who is befriended by Philip Chandos, wealthy friend of Mrs. Pole. The wealthy pair offer to establish the youngsters in business. They refuse and later on were on their own merits.

Daughters of Today

(Rollin Sturgeon-Selznick—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is a feature that can be exploited into a big box office success, because it is the type demanded by certain classes of motion picture patrons. The film holds the mirror up to the young folks and shows them how a large per cent of them are "carrying on." While the production approaches the risque in spots there is nothing that will offend anyone but the most prudish.

The plot isn't glaringly original. We've all heard of the country girl stricken with "brightlightitis" and deciding to "step out" with the usual disastrous results. But in throwing into relief some of the details of the "stepping out" process the director gives the audience a peep at such things as a moonlight bathing party in which the girls let their consciences be their guides as to what they shall wear; a wild night at a roadhouse and divers gatherings in which the genus flapperette and the drug store cowboy type of youth show you what real jazz dancing is.

The story picks up interest toward the close when a mystery element is introduced as the police seek the murderer of Reggie Adams and there is some suspense. There is a storm scene and auto wreck thrown in for good measure. Heart appeal is inserted when the "gang" decides to do a good turn and keep the truth about the daughter's carrying on from the white-haired mother who has just advanced from the country with a jar of peaches for the lassie. In fact the old hokum is dragged in ever and anon, but it is of the variety that the fans like—so that's that.

THEME. A society drama of the type now much in demand and which is alleged to set forth the flapper as she really is.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening jazz parties. The storm scene and the wreck of the motor car. The bathing party at the country house. The mystery element introduced toward the end of the story. The cast which contains some big "names."

DIRECTION. Has certainly been successful in putting over the idea of the picture, the depiction of the jazz-crazed lives lead by the younger set.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The stars. Get your local club women, pastors, prominent citizens to tell in the newspapers what they think of our daughters of today. Play up the jazz parties and the title, which is sure to draw them in.

DRAWING POWER. Folks expect to see some peppy stuff and this one won't disappoint from that angle.

SUMMARY. There is nothing new in the story set forth in this one, but it is the way in which it is handled that will get them in. The director has put in such things as poker games in which "unmentionables" are bet, young girls playing Nubian polo, young folks of both sexes juggling flasks and the contents thereof, etc. The box office seems to smile when these pictures are shown.

THE CAST

Lois Whittall	Patsy Ruth Miller
Ralph Adams	Ralph Graves
Mabel Vandergrift	Edna Murphy
Peter Farnham	Edward Hearn
Reggy Adams	Philo McCullough
Dirk Vandegrift	George Nichols
Ma Vandegrift	Gertrude Claire
Leigh Whittall	Phillips Smalley
Lorena	Zasu Pitts
Calnan	H. J. Herbert
Mrs. Mantell	Fontaine La Rue

By Lucien Hubbard. Directed by Rollin Sturgeon. Photographed by Milton Moore.

SYNOPSIS. Lois Whittall, neglected by her father who is interested in another woman, decides to "join the gang," and have a good time. On the way to a road house the "gang" meets Mabel Vandegrift who yearns for the luxury and good things of life but is denied them because of her parents' poverty. Reggy Adams persuades Mabel to join the party and the rest of the action deals with peppy adventures of the two girls, ending with both in the arms of their real lovers.

America

(D. W. Griffith—About 14 Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is a historic spectacle that Griffith presents here—even if it fails to furnish a sweeping epic of the torch of liberty which was lighted and carried by our forefathers in making us a free and independent nation.

What Griffith attempts to portray (and succeeds admirably) is the great sacrifice made by our forefathers. The spirit of 76 is vital—exceptionally vital in the first half of the picture. With a fine sense of dramatic values he presents several sweeping climaxes. The most thrilling episode which ever was projected in our estimation is the midnight ride of Paul Revere. It will arouse great patriotic fervor—for the spirit is behind it. The manner in which he rouses his audience to a frenzied pitch of excitement during the momentous ride surely stamps him the master of dramatic effects. And he follows up this magnificent episode with the battles of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill. The Minute Men arrayed against the British furnishes a scene which will make screen history. These episodes make "America" great.

The picture is packed with typical Griffith touches. He has inspired his players—especially Neil Hamilton—to immortalize our forefathers with the spirit they manifested in making us a free nation. It's a spectacular picture—a great picture, stirring in its climaxes—and carrying a fine spirit of sacrifice. And it will be a big success everywhere.

THEME. Historical romance against background of Revolutionary War—showing the features which led to America taking up arms against Britain—and pointing the conflict which was terminated in the surrender at Yorktown.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The ride of Paul Revere. The battle of Lexington and Concord. The battle of Bunker Hill. The suspense. The death of Butler. The fine acting. The excursions into British parliament. The death of the Tory's son.

DIRECTION. Brings out all his customary suspense. The dramatic effects—such as Revere's ride—and the battle of Lexington and Concord. Splendid atmosphere. Gets unusually fine results from players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Griffith and the large cast. Link up with societies, schools, colleges, women's clubs, etc. Present dignified campaign. Use dignified prologue.

DRAWING POWER. For first run houses.

SUMMARY. Historic spectacle which carries most appeal in early reels—after which it plunges into romance which dominates salient episodes of War. Has fine spirit and individual scenes magnificent, but is disappointing in the respect that vital characters and chapters of Revolution are neglected.

A Refugee Mother	Lucille La Verne

and several others.

By Robert W. Chambers. Directed by D. W. Griffith.

SYNOPSIS. Present the sacrifices of our forefathers in establishing a free and independent nation. Nathan Holden, a Boston patriot, meets aristocratic daughter of Virginian Tory, and develops a romance. Paul Revere warns countryside—and the Revolutionary War begins. The hero saves his sweetheart and the refugees in the stockade. British surrender at Yorktown.

Love Letters

(Fox—4749 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

A LITTLE better than the average program picture is this latest Shirley Mason vehicle. It is well staged and the settings are in good taste. The director loses no time in planting his characters and in getting the story started with the result that the spectator's attention is held from the beginning. While the plot is not a new one nevertheless it entertains due to the action which doesn't drag and to the surprise ending.

The story revolves around the efforts of a married woman and a girl engaged to be married to get back several packets of letters, written before their present alliances to a man about town, who is holding the epistles though his reason for doing so isn't clearly defined. The trouble starts when the husband, in glancing over a newspaper, reads an article concerning a morocco box in which this old roue keeps the missives and which he carries with him at all times. Calling his wife, the husband bids her read the article which he considers a rare joke, but which terrifies the wife as she realizes that her letters must be included in the contents of the box. Meanwhile her sister, who, during her school-days had also become infatuated with this man, is celebrating with the private secretary to this ancient "sheik" to whom she has just become engaged. The husband and wife call on them and while there meet the "sheik" who remembering the wife and the fiancee immediately starts the "if you don't meet me at midnight, I'll show the letters" "line." The usual complications ensue ending in the murder of the "rake" by an unknown whose identity is not divulged until the last minute.

Shirley Mason as the fiancee and John Miljan as the "rake" do most of the acting and do it well. William Irving and Gordon Edwards as the husband and fiance respectively haven't much to do but handle their roles capably. Alma Francis as the wife is adequate.

Altogether a pleasing picture of its type which ought to go over in the right theatres.

THEME. Mystery melodrama revolving around the efforts of a wife and fiancee to recover letters written to a 'man about town.' His murder and the denuement at the finish furnish the thrills.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The interiors. The acting of Shirley Mason and John Miljan. The romatic element. The mysterious shooting of the old roue and the suspence attending the identity of the murderer. The exciting climax in which the murderers identity is revealed. The reunion of the two couples at the end.

DIRECTION. Has done well with old material. Holds the attention due to the action which doesn't drag. Has kept down footage more of which would have detracted from light story. Has handled mystery element introduced in closing reels in a creditable manner.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise free admission to all couples who present their love letters at the box office. Use teaser cards reading—Will she read your love letters—Will he, etc. Play up mystery element which is strong in closing reels. Play up star who is popular with most audiences.

SUMMARY. While the plot isn't new it has been given a good production and the mystery element introduced will make for suspence. Good picture for second run and small town houses.

THE CAST

Evelyn Jefferson	Shirley Mason
Jimmy Stanton	Gordon Edwards
Julia Crossland	Alma Francis
Thomas Chadwick	John Miljan
Don Crossland	William Irving

SYNOPSIS. Married woman and engaged girl who is her sister seek to recover letters written, years back, to a 'man about town,' which he is holding in a morocco box, before the husband and fiance learn of them. They meet him through the fiance who is his private secretary. He demands that the wife meet him at his home if she wants the letters but she, afraid to go, prevails upon the sister to visit him. While the sister is at his home a woman, whom he had cast off, enters and threatens him with a revolver which his butler takes from her. The fiance slips out in the confusion and returns home having failed to get the letters. The "rake" is murdered by some unknown person and suspicion falls on the private secretary because of his having taken the box containing the letters, but it transpires that the real murderer is the brother of the woman the "rake" had discarded, so all ends well.

Beau Brummel

(Warner Brothers—Ten Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WHEN the well-known "Best Fifty-Two" of 1924 is made up, "Beau Brummel" should be well up toward the top in the list. Here is a master production that takes rank with "Scaramouche," "A Woman of Paris" and other similar offerings that stand out in the season's film fare. First of all "Beau Brummel" is a personal triumph for John Barrymore who gives his best to the interpretation of a role for which he is eminently fitted and which he paints on the screen in a colorful, faithful and absorbing manner. The character of George Bryan Brummel gives the star transitions equally as great as those in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," inasmuch as the plot takes the most famous dandy of his time from the days of his youthful escapes when he won the friendship of the Prince of Wales up to his death in the hospital of the Bon Saveur, France. Mr. Barrymore's acting is one of the finest things the silent art has ever had to offer the motion picture public.

As a production, "Beau Brummel" leaves little to be desired. It is one of those rare pictures which has every element demanded by the most seasoned photoplay fan. It is an adaptation of the Clyde Fitch play which Richard Mansfield immortalized on the stage. In its screen version it becomes a work of surpassing beauty from every viewpoint. The settings are magnificent, correct in every detail and strikingly lighted. The period in which the play is laid provides opportunity for lavish and colorful costumes and the producers "have gone the limit" on this part of the picture. The scenes at court and that showing the visit of the king and his retinue to Calais with the waterfront of the old French town wonderfully reproduced, are sets that must have dug deep into the money bags.

THEME. Setting forth the dramatic romance and adventure of England's noted dandy, George Bryan Brummel, and depicting his life from youthful splendor to raving madness and death in a prison almshouse.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The superb characterization by John Barrymore. Willard Louis' work as the Prince of Wales. The very fine supporting cast.

DIRECTION. A masterful work from every viewpoint. Has made a picture rich in details, with many little touches that mean such big things. Has inspired his players to live their parts.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of John Barrymore and the other notable stars. Put over a window displayin your leading men's fashion store depicting the "Beau Brummel" of yesteryear and today. Tell the folks this is the play Richard Mansfield made famous. Make your ads dignified and don't be afraid to promise your patrons a real treat.

DRAWING POWER. Another sure-fire box office success suitable for the highest class theatres—and all others.

SUMMARY. Real enjoyment, real entertainment, are furnished in this picture, which is without doubt one of the finest things of the season to date.

THE CAST

George Bryan Brummel	John Barrymore
Lady Margery Alvanley	Mary Astor
George, Prince of Wales	Willard Louis
Duchess of York	Irene Rich
Mortimer	Alec B. Francis
Lady Hestor Stanhope	Carmel Myers
Lord Alvanley	William Humphreys
Lord Stanhope	Richard Tucker
Lord Byron	Andre de Beranger
Lady Manly	Claire de Lorez
Lord Manly	Michael Dark
Desmond Wertham	Templar Saxe
Mrs. Wertham	Clarissa Selwynne
Kathleen, a maid	Carol Holloway
Lady Moira	Kate Lester
Mme. Bergere	Rose Dione

Adapted for the screen by Dorothy Farnum from the stage play by Clyde Fitch. Directed by Harry Beaumont.

SYNOPSIS. Forced to abandon his sweeetheart, Lady Margery, to a loveless marriage with Lord Alvanley, George Bryan Brummel, decides to become a beau and forget his sorrows by leading a merry or "charmingly indiscreet" life. He wins the friendship of the Prince of Wales and becomes Europe's first gentleman. Later jealous friends cause a split between the beau and the prince and he leaves for France to escape creditors and jail. Poverty enters. The beau becomes a parody of his past splendor and dies in an almshouse, deserted by all but his faithful valet, Mortimer.

Floodgates

(Lowell-Blazed Trail Productions—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A LIKELY melodrama of conflict in a lumber camp is exposed in this offering which is genuinely authentic in its background—the locale being the Adirondacks. The author, L. Case Russell, has based her theme upon the war between capital and labor, employing as the central characters, a rugged man of the soil, his fretful wife (fretful through being compelled to eke out a livelihood in the open places far from the color of the city), a capitalist desirous of gaining the land of the lumbermen in order to sell it at a profit to big interests, and the necessary figures of romance—one of whom is the honest foreman's sister and the other the nephew of the capitalist.

There is no pause in getting into action here. We are presented with the wife selling a strip of land, unbeknown to her husband. The latter, meanwhile victimized by his employer, is the innocent tool in the land deals. Having the confidence of the natives it is easy for him to persuade them to sell. However, suspicion arises—and he is accused of having double-crossed them. He has to mete out punishment to a particularly vindictive character to prove that he has their interests at heart. The story measures out sharp action and no small amount of suspense. The nephew arouses the foreman's enmity for accidentally crippling his little daughter. He is ordered to stay away or be shot.

The picture reaches its climax easily with the central figures playing their parts with fine naturalness, particularly John Lowell, Evangeline Russell, Jane Thomas, William Calhoun and F. Serrano Keating. And this climax gives rich expression to the title—as the foreman, thoroughly angered over the turn of events, decides to smash the unscrupulous mill-owner by wrecking the dam. It is dynamited and the rushing waters engulf everything in their path—even taking away the capitalist's home. For the purpose of adding an extra thrill, the foreman's little daughter is imprisoned there, underdoing an operation. There is a timely rescue—and it carries a big punch.

THEME. Melodrama of lumber camp—with conflict revolving around employees and mill-owner—the latter scheming to buy up their land. He is duly punished.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent atmosphere—the backgrounds being authentic. The naturalness of John Lowell, and the good work by Evangeline Russell, Jane Thomas, William Calhoun. The climax when dam bursts. The rescues.

DIRECTION. Has developed plot naturally, establishing conflict and characters so that interest is held. Builds to a most thrilling climax. Might have eliminated comedy relief.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Mention that this is a thrilling story of open spaces. Feature the climax which is vivid and packed with a real punch. Bill it as vivid story of lumber camp.

DRAWING POWER. Should interest audiences wherever shown..

SUMMARY. While this theme is familiar, the action is packed with melodramatic incident and the suspense is always ahead. Carries a most thrilling climax—which is the real thing. A splendid picture of its kind—correct in atmosphere and played in natural manner.

THE CAST

Dave Trask	John Lowell
His Sister, Ruth Trask	Evangeline Russell
His Wife, Alice	Jane Thomas
His little Daughter, Peggy	Iva Ward
Lemuel Bassett	William Calhoun
His Nephew, Tom Bassett	F. Serrano Keating
Leslie Norton, Bassett's Secretary	William Cavanaugh
"Sliver" Ohlman	J. Nelson Bradt
His Mother	Anne Brody
Dr. Jan Vedos	Homer Lind
A Specialist	Fred Tiden
"Goofy" Ladue	"Hap" Hadley

SYNOPSIS. Foreman of lumber-mill is used by mill owner to persuade the landowners to sell their property. He is ignorant of fact that mill owner is determined to profit by them. When accused of being dishonest he fights to prove himself on the level. His anger aroused, he seeks to break the mill owner. He dynamites the dam flooding the land and sweeping away the capitalist's home. Is reconciled to mill owner's nephew who has developed romance with his sister—the nephew being instrumental in helping to restore the child to health.

Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model

(Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

YOU have been clamoring for something new under the sun. Well, here it is. One of Owen Davis' old melodramas that delighted the gallery gods of yesteryear and which as a stage play may have been quite ridiculous, has been made into a thoroughly entertaining picture with many points of appeal-drama, melodrama, comedy, pathos and in the seventh reel a thrill.

"Nellie" has been thoroughly modernized. The action flows along against a background of Fifth Avenue traffic jams, of style ateliers that will delight the women for here are shown stunning gowns on models of real class-a promenade des modes that is lavishly staged, of the swift moving elevated, of New York of today. The picture has thrills, you bet, that is what it was made for. There is an excellent fire scene, an auto crash, some good old fashioned slugging contests, a kidnaping and then the supreme movement, the railroad scene in which Nellie is saved by less than a hair breadth.

It is all here, the stuff your dad raved about and which you will enjoy twice as much in its screen form. And the cast is one of the highlights. It is decidedly

THEME. A honest-to-goodness old fashioned Owen Davis "meller" dealing with the romance and thrilling adventures of Nellie, the cloak model.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Fashion promenade. The fire in the style salon. The fight between Cody and Lowe. The scene showing the elevated bearing down upon the girl. The comedy contributed by Raymond Griffith and Mae Busch. Claire Windsor's work as Nellie. The good cast.

DIRECTION. Has taken a 10-20-30 of other days and made a good picture out of it. Has built real thrills into every reel. Has been fortunate in having an excellent cast with which to work and Emmett Flynn makes them all work. Has put the old railroad scene over with a bang and brought the whole to a close with a novel finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You've got a great chance to put over a spring style promenade with your local department store. Arrange to have live models exhibit gowns on your stage and the store will come through with window space and publicity. This is your one best bet so center all your efforts on it. Tie up with several smaller stores featuring women's styles by getting displays of the photos.

DRAWING POWER. Play up the stars and use the word "Nellie," big and the rest of title small, and if properly exploited, this one should get any house business.

SUMMARY. If more of the old mellers were put on in this style in which this one has been produced we wouldn't be surprised if "Nellie" set a new vogue in pictures. The feature is throughly high class in every respect, has a fine cast, is elaborately mounted and possesses real entertainment from beginning to end. Real folks will like it.

THE CAST

Nellie	Claire Windsor
(At 5 years old)	Betsy Ann Hisle
Jack Carroll	Edmund Lowe
Polly Joy	Mae Busch

Mrs. Horton	Dorothy Cummings
Blizzard Dugan	Will Walling
Miss Drake	Mayne Kelso
Mosely	William Orlamond
Gangster	Arthur Houseman
Gangster	David Kirby

By Owen Davis. Directed by Emmett Flynn. Scenario by H. H. Van Loan. Photographed by Lucien Andriot.

SYNOPSIS. Taken away by Thomas Lipton to avoid further cruelties at the hands of her father, Nellie Horton, daughter of a man whose fortune has been saved by Lipton, grows up in poverty as the supposed daughter of the latter her benefactor becomes ill, Nellie gets a job as a model in a shop run by her mother's dissolute nephew. The rest of the action deals with her treatment by this man, who seeks to destroy her, so that he will get the Horton fortune and the final rescue from the wheels of the elevated by the hero and her reunion with her mother.

Damaged Hearts

(F. B. O.—6154 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

THERE is perhaps no more romantic spot on this continent than the Florida Everglades. Something in the very name calls up visions of adventure and mystery and thrills. Which is by way of saying that "Damaged Hearts" has its action centering in and about the Everglades and was actually taken in that region.

As a result, "Damaged Hearts" is as interesting, pictorially, as anything seen in some time. Sinuous, swampy rivers, overhung by a closely twisted maze of tropical foliage, and mysterious forests where the sun never penetrates, provide an appropriate and enthralling background of rare beauty.

Not so much can be said for the story. It is one of those made to measure affairs, where the long arm of coincidence reaches in at appropriate intervals to tangle or untangle the affairs of the characters. It bears the name of Basil King, and aside from the creaking plot mechanics, carries the theme that hate is destructive and that only love can open the heart to happiness.

This theme is developed through a man who, as an orphaned child, is separated from his sister. She is adopted by rich people and dies. As a result, he becomes embittered against the whole world, and swears revenge. The opportunity presents itself when he holds up the son of the family that adopted his sister. This man is accompanied by his wife, so to square matters, he kidnaps the wife and takes her to his cabin, where he puts her to work.

The crowning improbability, and one which it seems might be eliminated, even at this late date, is the recognition of the heroine in a airplane photo, taken from several thousand feet in the air.

For those who do not insist on too much probability, there is good entertainment here.

THEME. The regeneration of a twisted soul, warped by hate, through a woman's love, against the background of the Florida Everglades.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The airplane shots of the Everglades. The scenic beauty of the backgrounds. The underwater fight. The storm. The work of Miss Mullen. Eugene Strong's vigorous portrayal of the man. The good character bits and atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Acceptable, and T. Hayes Hunter has probably done the best that could be expected with the material.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Basil King as the author of "Earthbound" and bring out fact that this picture is by the same director. Play up the title conspicuously, together with the theme. Heart shaped heralds. Perhaps a screening for your local clergymen on the strength of the theme. Play up the Everglades settings.

DRAWING POWER. Should do a satisfactory business, properly exploited.

SUMMARY. A somewhat melodramatic story, well cast for the most part, and with a powerful theme, but rather improbable in spots.

THE CAST

Mickey Rose, famous Film Row salesman, formerly with Paramount and Universal, is now a member of the Renown Pictures Corporation sales staff. Howard Riehl, formerly with United Artists, has succeeded George Schaeffer at the Vitagraph office. Mr. Schaeffer has gone with Universal.

Western New York exhibitors will be interested to know that Allan S. Moritz, former manager of the local Paramount office and recently special representative for Preferred Pictures, is now manager of the New Haven "U" exchange. M. A. Chase has resigned as district manager for Universal.

H. G. Carroll, former manager of the International Hotel in Niagara Falls, is checking engagements on "The White Sister" and "Scaramouche" for the Buffalo Metro exchange. L. W. Murray and P. Forrest are handling the exploitation on both subjects. At the last meeting of the Film Board of Trade the members voted to give Henry Kahn a present for the excellent manner in which he staged the Film Ball.

Mayor Newman, Aldermen W. C. Effrick, Parker and Frost of Niagara Falls, Ont., will represent the city at the conference of officials of municipalities to be held in Toronto when application will be made to the provincial government for some share of the amusement tax collected. This represents a vast sum in Ontario and the city council at its last meeting agreed that the cities should have some of this revenue.

Arthur J. Martel is leaving his position as feature organist at the Lafayette Square on March 1. Albert Hay Malotte left a similar position at Shea's Hippodrome several weeks ago. Thus Buffalo is no longer featuring its organists in the picture theatres.

The Lafayette Square celebrated its second anniversary this week with a fine program of pictures, music and vaudeville. The big house has been a success right from the start, much of the credit for which should go to Fred M. Shafer for his able management.

The Papayanakos Brothers have purchased the Horace N. Clark property in Potsdam, N. Y., and have started work there on a new picture theatre.

Southwest

TWO well known theatres in the Southeastern territory were burned to the ground during the past week, first news being of the burning of the handsome, almost new Pickwick theatre, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, owned and operated by W. S. Roberson, the theatre being a complete loss. Mr. Roberson had many of the new pictures of the season booked, this being a college town demanding the very best, and he will undoubtedly rebuild at an early date. This theatre operates only during the college year, closing for the summer vacation.

Mrs. Woods, the well known exhibitor of Washington, Georgia, lost her Strand theatre by fire also during the week, and it is not known whether or not she will rebuild.

The old Atlanta Auditorium has been re-dedicated "The Paramount" and is operated by P. L. Taylor, owner and manager. It had a formal opening last week with many speakers and an elaborate program of special attractions.

P. H. Savin, booker and J. W. Marion, of the shipping department of F.B.O. are the first Southerners to win Service stripes under the new plan originated by the home office where any employes render exceptional service to exchange or exhibitor. They drove to Newman, Ga. in zero weather to save a missout occasioned by the misshipment of a film to a point in Alabama.

George R. Allison, division manager of Fox is back after an extended trip to the studios. E. M. Saunders sales manager of Metro, is expected in Atlanta this week.

W. B. Small, formerly of Mt. Sterling, Ky., but more recently of Kissimmee, Florida where he operated C. C. Jordan's theatre, has been named manager of Judge Titus' new theatre at New Smyrna, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Richardson, of the Star thearte, Seneca, S. C. were in Atlanta last week.

A. E. Johnson has sold his Strand theatre, Valdosta, Ga., to R. L. Hall, and a partner, Mr. Brown. Mr. Hall was formerly at the Athens, Deland, Florida.

Paul Engler, of the Famous theatre, Birmingham, Ala. paid his respects to Atlanta's film row the past week.

Zephyr Hills, Florida has a new theatre known as the Zephyr, promoted by a group of local business men.

The Royal theatre, West Tampa, Florida has been reopened by J. E. Posten after re-decorating.

Fred Bryan is soon to open his new theatre at Coca, Florida. Jack Cunningham, formerly with First National in the Carolinas, will travel for Southern States in that territory.

Harry Harris has resigned from the Atlanta Universal sales force and is succeeded by Gilbert M. Tyler, transferred from the Carolina territory.

W. G. Strawn has his theatre at Bradentown, Florida, about ready to open and is also planning to open one in Palmetto, Florida, before the Spring.

Monty Salmon who has been assistant manager at the Lyric, Atlanta, is now floor manager of the Howard.

The Franklyn theatre, Tampa, Florida, is scheduled to open the last week in February. It will be one of the finest theatres in Tampa, with a seating capacity of 1200, with a straight picture policy.

Don Carlos DuBois, of the Atlanta Scenic Company is in Palm Beach superintending installation of scenery in Carl Kettler's new theatre soon to open.

San Francisco

BUSINESS must be good at the Metro office in this city. P. Weinstein, assistant manager of the local office has just purchased a Willys-Knight car and H. J. Henrioulle, booker, is waiting for the new Cadillac he ordered.

Clyde Walker, formerely manager for Fox at Salt Lake, is now with the Metro office in this city.

A. G. Pickett, formerly exploitation representative for Famous-Players Lasky at San Francisco has joined the sales-force of this organization and Harry Eagles, exploitation manager for Paramount in Seattle, has taken over his position.

Edward Armstrong, assistant general manager in charge of the Western division for Universal, has returned to San Francisco after an extended trip in the North and expects to leave for Southern California in a few days.

Wayland Taylor, formerly publicity director for Paramount pictures, has been added to the Universal staff and will work on the "Hunchback of Notre Dame", out of the San Francisco office, in Arizona.

F. St. John, president of the Cooperative Film Company, has announced that Pat Stevenson, formerely with Goldwyn, has been appointed general manager of the Los Angeles office in place of Harry Kreiter who resigned because of his brother's death.

G. C. Blumenthall, San Francisco manager of the Educational Film Exchange has returned from his trip in the San Joaquin Valley and is full of enthusiasm, saying the business outlook is great.

Educational has just purchased a new truck for its shipping department and Sol Rosenthal has been appointed engineer.

J. E. MacCormick, formerly with Famous-Players-Lasky is now San Francisco representative of the Creco Motion Picture Lighting Equipment Co.

Everett Howell, who recently sold his Monache Theatre at Portoville, California to the National Theatre Syndicate came to San Francisco this week to visit the Automobile Show. Before he left he purchased a new Buick-Broughman and toured back to Portoville where he will manage the theatre for the syndicate.

Sol Pincus, one of the best known motion picture managers on the Pacific Coast, is again manager of the Imperial Theatre. Pincus managed this house for approximately eleven years and a few months ago took over the management of the Capitol Theatre, which, after playing "The White Sister" for six weeks closed up, temporarily.

Joe Kennesser of Clovis, California was a recent visitor on Film Row, where he purchased pictures for March and April showings.

B. B. Jones, owner of the Orpheum at Lakeport, California visited Film Row this week and signed contracts up for several months.

M. Damon, manager of the Granda Theatre, Yerington, Nevada, is spending a week in San Francisco arranging bookings as far ahead as September.

Mr. Taylor, manager of the Lodi Theatre, Lodi, spent a few days in San Francisco arranging for future bookings.

J. W. Flood, manager of the Rex Theatre, Fallon, is on Film Row looking at pictures for his theatre.

W. S. Lester of the California Theatre, Turlock, is in the city arranging bookings for the next three months.

Kansas City

EDWARD Dubinsky, owner of the Regent theatre, Kansas City, was acquitted by a jury in Judge Samuel A. Dew's division of the circuit court in Kansas City on a charge of operating his theatre without a license.

A new feature, "The Revue of Song Hits of 1923," will be initiated at Frank L. Newman's Newman theatre, Kansas City, next week. In addition to the regular film program, thirty of the most popular and successful songs of 1923 will be played and sung. There also will be dancing by a cast of twenty entertainers.

Motion pictures played a major part in the Kansas City Automobile Show this week. Films, dealing with all electrical apparatus in motor cars were shown. The film was issued by the Northeast Electric Company, Rochester. Liberal newspaper space, bringing out the fact that the film would be lent free to any educational institution, was extended.

The Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, featuring both motion pictures and vaudeville, has slashed its prices, along with the announcement that the house will remain open most of the summer this year, instead of closing the latter part of May, as formerly. Matinee prices now are 25 and 50 cents, nights $1. The new policy will not affect prices on Saturdays and Sundays.

Col. W. T. Yoder, former Southern division manager for Pathe and now branch manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Atlanta office, purchased a 160-foot vacant frontage at Fifty-first street and Bellfontaine avenue, Kansas City, as an investment this week. Col. Yoder recently purchased a 185-foot corner at Sixty-fifth street and Triost avenue, also as an investment.

Jack Gross, formerly of ElDorado, Kas., has been named as manager of the Crane and Royal theatres, Carthage, Mo. For the last three years Mr. Gross has been manager of the ElDorado and Palace theatres in ElDorado, Kas.

A new concern, the Exhibitors Film Delivery Service, which will be a sort of a central shipping bureau where shipments of films and posters will be made and received, is planned in Kansas City. Ralph Sherzer, formerly with the Fox office in Kansas City, and E. E. Jameson are behind the project.

"Rarin' Roscoe," or, as he was baptized, R. R. Thompson, Southern representative for Vitagraph, and Miss Mary Thompson, a Kansas City girl, were married last week and still retain their last names. After spending a short honeymoon at Excelsior Springs, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will be at home at 3511 Garfield avenue, Kansas City.

THE GREATEST NOVEL OF 1922

Washington

MANAGER F. L. McNamee returned Saturday from a brief visit at the F. B. O. home office in New York.

E. T. Crall, Newport News exhibitor and president of the M. P. T. O. Virginia and of the Virginia Exhibitors Alliance of the Washington Zone Unit, in the Old Dominion was in town recently, after a long absence.

Harry M. Crandall, creater of Crandall enterprises in Washington and the region, accompanied by Joseph P. Morgan, general manager of the Crandall interests, spent Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of last week in New York. They spent most of the time looking over forthcoming First National releases, and arranging specialties for the impending gala opening of Crandall's New Tivoli theater at 14th street and Park Read, N. W., Washington's most unique residential entertainment center.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians repeated their local triumphs at the Ambassador, last week and are now entering a two-week engagement in Richmond, Va. Despite the bitter cold and the snow storm of mid-week, the theater was packed both evening performances.

Now that Sam Boyd is a bencher of the D. C. Bar, his erstwhile duties are being mastered by A. Gorden Fleet, formerly of the audit and accounts division of the Crandall theaters, presided over by Comptroller Fritz D. Hoffman. Fleet was there engaged from August, 1922, until December, 1922, when he was assigned to the construction of the Tivoli where he was time-keeper, assistant to Sol Rosenberg in construction and special representative of Mr. Crandall and the stock-holders on the job. Later he returned to the audit unit, and was promoted to executive private secretary on the resignation of Mr. Boyd.

Jan Garber of Atlanta and Washington has brought his Garber-Davis Orchestra to Washington to feature the Crandall's Metropolitan offering of the new Strongheart film the week of February 24. Eleven highly skilled artists, the same number as were embraced in Warings musikkers, make out the Garber quota. Garber leads the crew with his own violin, not being content to merely conduct. This is also Jan Garber's first theatrical booking in the capital.

The Alexandria Amusement Company of Alexandria, Va., is to place a new $15,000 Hope-Jones orchestral unit organ in the Richmond theater, on King street, in George Washington's old Virginia home town. The organ is now on order at the Wurlitzer factory. The impending installation is expected to neutralize the radio encroachment on Mr. Reed's clientele.

The new management of the Auditorium, Wilmington, Del., bid in the furniture at $750. Ayes J. Stockley of the new directorate, thus retained in the amusement property some 384 chairs, 53 cane-seated chairs, 15 settees, 12 small fans, 1 large fan, 1 piano, 2 mirrors, 1 cleaning machine, a soda fountain and other equipment.

Elkton and Cecil county, Maryland, voters are circulating petitions opposed to Sunday movies in the state. Many of the countians have already signed the petitions.

Daylight saving, abolished last year by the Delaware general assembly, is expected to be observed in the city of Wilmington, this summer, despite the state law to the contrary. Reports that exhibitors and other business interests were to use a fund of $5,000 to combat the predilection of city council for "Day Light" time, have suddenly quieted and the fund raising is declared to have stopped cold.

Manager Louis Reichert of Selznick Distributers, Washington, after the weekly swing through the field spent the week-end in New York City.

A special representative of "Chronicles of America," was in the city and region for several days the past week.

Mrs. Ullman, operating the Ullman Opera House at Salisbury spent several days in Washington, being the guest of the Holmes family, owners of the Holmes bakery here, while spending several hours booking her spring film offerings.

Roland Robbins, Keith executive in Washington has been made foreman of one district count's juries, and so is functioning in one more capacity than usual.

Cincinnati

FRED STRIEF, who several years ago managed the Cincinnati Famous Players exchange and later transferred to Minneapolis for the same firm, has returned to Cincinnati again, still a branch manager but for a different firm. Strief is now the dictator at the Universal office having taken the place of E. Holden, who was transferred to Albany N. Y.

To make his trip to Albany where he is to assume charge of the Universal exchange Holden chose the coldest time of the year to drive his chariot over the distance of seven hundred miles. When the writer saw him in Columbus, Ohio, after Holden had covered the first lap of his journey, Holden was hugging the radiator hoping that he would thaw out before proceeding in the morning.

Many improvements have been installed in the Grand Theater, Columbus, Ohio. The theater was recently taken over by The James theater interests and the first thing the new company did was to remove all posts from the first floor of the house. This improvement cost around $30,000 but according to Real Neth, General Manager for the James Theater interests it was more than worth the while. A new Wurlitzer Grand Organ has also been installed with William Dalton as master organist.

Arthur Streng, formerly organist at the Capitol Theater, Cincinnati, assumed his new duties as feature organist at the James Theater, Columbus, last week.

Henry Eggers, formerly with the James interest in Lexington and afterward publicity man for F. B. O. is now manager of the James Theater, Columbus, O. Joe Wilson, who formerly held that honor has been transferred to the State Theater, Columbus, the new house recently opened by the James Interests.

A Chapter of The Stage and Screen Scribes of America, is to be organized in Columbus, Ohio, in the near future. N. Schechter, one of the directors of the organization, laid the foundation for the chapter while in the city in advance of Metro's "The White Sister".

M. C. Russel, manager of the Washington Theater, spent a day or so around the film exchanges. The Washington Theater is located in Maysville, Ky., and is the only theater in the city.

H. Snowden, until recently manager of the opera house at Greenville, Ohio, has departed from that metropolis and is now doing special publicity for Mexico.

The Kaiser Film Enterprises, of which Wes. Kaiser is president, have moved to larger quarters in the Broadway Film Building. This was made necessary by the fast growing of the business, especially in the non-theatrical film department. The new exchange is now located on the first floor of the building.

M. Brunner, manager of the Liberty Theater, Lawrenceburg, Ind., is quite a showman. The proof is in the fact that he goes after every picture he thinks worth while and puts it over in big city style.

Jules Frankel, manager of Gift's Theater, is devoting most of his time at present to his father's real estate business, while the latter is spending the winter in Florida.

Canada

THE Strand Theatre at Winnipeg, Manitoba, is being reopened on March 10 by Al. Gillis who was manager of the Capitol theatre, Winnipeg, for a number of months until this house was taken over by H. M. Thomas as Western District manager of the Famous Players Canadian Corp. Mr. Gillis has renamed the theatre the "Gillis-Strand." There will be a policy of three shows daily at popular prices.

Mr. Gillis has lately been visiting in Minneapolis to complete arrangements for the re-opening of the house.

George Graham, well-known exhibitor of Western Canada, has reopened the Classic theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, which had been closed for a lengthy period. Mr. Graham formerly operated the Parkview theatre but the latter was recently wiped out in a costly and destructive fire.

Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, one of the largest exchanges in Canada with its Goldwyn, Warner Bros., Pathe, Metro, Selznick, British and other releases, is issuing a weekly bulletin newspaper to all exhibitors in Ontario under the direction of N. L. Nathanson, managing director, and Arthur Cohen, general manager.

John Green, manager of the Capitol theatre, Guelph, Ontario, one of the real pioneers in the picture field, has just recovered from a severe attack of rheumatism. Mr Green is popularly known as "the grand old man" of the picture business in Canada.

Harry E. Feldstein, formerly with the Hodkinson office at Toronto, Ontario, has been appointed manager of the Hodkinson branch at Montreal, Quebec.

Ray Peck, director of the Canadian Government Moving Picture Bureau, Ottawa, returned to the Canadian Capital February 20 after an absence of five weeks in Bermuda, Jamaica and other British insular possessions, as well as Cuba, where he took a considerable quantity of pictures for presentation at the British Empire Exhibition, Wembley, England, during the coming summer.

N. K. Miller, manager of the Vantages theatre, Toronto, the largest theatre in Canada, has gone to Michigan and Indiana for an extended rest to recuperate from a recent serious illness.

Salt Lake City

THE outstanding event in film circles last week was the Paramount Empress theatre anniversary dinner and dance at Shay's Cafeteria last Wednesday evening. The event was in commemoration of the eighth successful season since the opening of the theatre, and was under the auspices of George E. Carpenter, manager of the house. A fine dinner was enjoyed, followed by a dance, with the orchestras from the Paramount Empress and Victory theatres alternating in furnishing the music. The entire staffs of the two theatres, and the managers of the various local exchanges were present with their partners, and a dandy time was enjoyed.

A. A. Schmidt, Western Division Manager for the Film Booking Offices was in the city for several days, conferring with W. C. Corby, manager of the local F.B.O. exchange in the policies of the company in presenting the pictures on the new spring program.

W. C. Gehring, manager of the Fox Film exchange, returned from Los Angeles last week, where he attended the conference of the exchange managers of the Western Coast Division. He reports the convention as entirely successful. The managers had their pictures taken with Tom Mix, Fox star, in front of his training quarters, and one of the shots adorns Gehring's office walls.

Last Saturday evening the employees of the Metro exchange enjoyed one of their quarterly social affairs with a dinner at the Newhouse Hotel. A timely novelty surprise for the guests was a live parrot, symbolizing the Metro emblem, in the center of the table, and which enjoyed the liberty of the top of its cage during the affair. At a given signal, each diner pulled a red ribbon and theatre tickets came from under the cage, to the Wilkes theatre, where they went in a body. After this a special screening of the latest Metro special "The Uninvited Guest," was enjoyed at the Pantages theatre, after the regular evening performance at that house. Each employee contributes weekly to a fund, which supplies the wherewith all for these social occasions, and George L. Cloward, Metro manager, says that the plan besides affording an enjoyable evening does much to cement the cooperation and good will of the employees. Joseph S. Samuels, and Joe Koehler, salesmen for Metro have returned to their territories following the event. Samuels, who regularly has the local country to work went into Montana to start a complete swing over the territory, upon the completion of which he will return to his regular run. Koehler went into Idaho.

Last Monday the nuptials of Roland S. Stackhouse, local manager for Vitagraph, and Miss Marcile Smith, of Salt Lake City were celebrated.

George Jones, auditor from the New York Vitagraph office, is here inspecting the records of the local exchange. Upon the completion of his work here, he will go to the coast.

Paul C. Mooney, vice president of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation was in Salt Lake City conferring with Charles Knickerbocker, resident manager, in the interest of the new features which are now selling under the Hodkinson banner for the new spring season.

E. A. Eschmann, Manager of Distribution for Associated First National is visiting L. L. Hall, manager of the local exchange on his tour of inspection of all exchanges, on his way to the coast. He came in from New York City headquarters.

Exhibitors swooped down on the Salt Lake exchanges in a body and kept local managers busy lining up business with them. Those who were seen on the Rialto this week were: T. M. Chestler, who runs the Princess theatre at Bingham Canyon; J. E. Ryan, operating the Liberty at Brigham City; J. F. Goss, Orpheum, Ogden; A. L. Stallings, Kinema, Richfield; Van Pleete, Strand, Garland; S. B. Steck, Lyceum, Ogden; J. J. Gillette, Strand, Gillette, Idaho; and Don Carruthers of the C. & A. Amusement Co., at Pocatello, Idaho.

Fred Gage, Universal Division Manager left for Butte, Montana, following preparatory work for the showing of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in Salt Lake. King Fisher, exploitation man, also left, his next destination being Laramie, Wyoming, where "The Hunchback" will be shown next.

A special screening of "The White Sister," and "Scaramouche," will be held at the Strand Theatre at Provo, Utah, next Sunday, with "The White Sister," at two thirty in the afternoon, and "Scaramouche" at 8 o'clock at evening. This will be an invitational affair, with special music having been arranged for to play the scores which accompany each picture. George L. Gloward, local manager for Metro will have charge of the details of the screening.

W. C. Gehring, manager of the local Fox exchange, is in Los Angeles, where he went to attend the convention of the Western Division branch managers. During his absence, the affairs of the local office are in the hands of C. L. Walker, booker and city salesman.

Frank White, owner of the Realart Theatre at American Fork, Utah, was in Salt Lake City, visiting the exchanges and signing up for productions on the spring programs.

H. W. Braly, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange will be in the Idaho territory the next two weeks lining up contracts on the features released on the spring business program, at the key centers.

W. H. Shurtliff, of Bountiful, Utah, and owner of amusement halls throughout the northern part of the state, was here visiting the Universal exchange.

Norman Parry, exhibitor of Ogden, Utah, operating the Ogden Theatre, stopped off in this city enroute to Los Angeles where he will spend the next two weeks. He will seek new ideas with a view of incorporating them into the final completion and policy of his new theatre, the Egyptian, which will open some time in April.

Florida

OPENINGS held the center of the stage the past week. In Tampa the beautiful new Franklin theatre was opened Friday with great ceremony, Mayor Perry G. Wall, and others delivering addresses. The house is a real beauty and a credit to Tampa. The Franklin is under the management of John B. Carroll, who also manages the Victory, with J. H. McLaughlin as house manager.

In Bartow the "Ernada" was opened to an audience that filled the auditorium to capacity. Musical numbers were given by a special orchestra and short talks given by prominent people as a preliminary to the showing of "Merry Go Round", which was the opening attraction. The house is under the management of V. L. Marquis.

In Palmetto, W. L. Strawn opened a new theatre for colored folks, called The Dixie. Mr. Strawn stated the opening was quite a success, with the S. R. O. sign being up all the evening. Mr Strawn also operates the Central in Bradentown, which is just across the Manatee River from Palmetto.

The Rivoli, in Ybor City, is now running daily matinees and the returns are most satisfactory. Ybor has always been considered a "night show town," and though a few attempts have been to give matinees, they have never before proven very sucessful, except on Sundays and holidays, but Manager E. J. Walton decided to give the daily matinee a good try-out, and the receipts are climbing daily.

B. H. Trumbull, who operates the Liberty, in St. Petersburg, was a visitor in Tampa this week. While here he looked over a tab company and booked it as an added attraction for a run in his house.

Sulphur Springs, a fast growing suburb of Tampa, wants a theatre. They are advertising in the Tampa papers calling attention to the needs out there, and a theatre is given as one of them.

MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE exchanges have been the scenes of many changes in the sales staffs lately. E. D. Saiter, formerly with Universal at Chicago, is now traveling northern Wisconsin for Famous Players Lasky, and E. G. Louthain, who has recently been with Warner Brothers, is now assigned to this same territory for Famous Players. J. H. McFarlane, formerly a United Artists' man in Chicago, and a veteran in film circles, has been added to Mr. Wooden's staff also, and is in charge of the Marshfield and Wisconsin Rapids section of the state. F. G. Felzman is a new city man for F. P. L., and D. J. Rowe, formerly in the Chicago office is now advertising manager for the Milwaukee branch. F. P. L. was also visited by Geo. W. Weeks, general sales manager, who is making a tour of the Middle West.

Sam Shurman, Goldwyn's manager, has returned from a sales congress held by Goldwyn Cosmopolitan forces in Chicago under the direction of Vice-President W. E. Rogers.

Gene Hemings, formerly with F. B. O., has been added to Celebrated's staff.

Rudolph Kopp, former director of the Chicago theater orchestra, spent several days in Milwakee last week. Mr. Kopp has been appointed director of the orchestra of the New Wisconsin theater, Milwakee's 3,500 seat house which is to open March 28.

A valentine dance and entertainment was given under the auspices of the Milwaukee Theatrical federation at the Milwaukee Auditorium. In addition to three other unions employed in the various theatres making up this federation, Local No. 164 Moving Picture Operators played a prominent part.

Ellis Bostick, former manager of the Merrill theatre, and also a member of the staff of the Saxe Amusement enterprises was a recent visitor in the city. Bostick, who is a veteran in the motion picture game, is now engaged in similar activities on the west coast.

Cecil B. DeMille said "One very important reason, in my opinion, for the sensational success that has been won by The Affairs of Anatol at the Rialto, aside from its story and its all-star cast, is that the Music to which the production has been wedded, by the Genius of Mischa Guterson reinforces, supports, promotes and develops the drama of the plot with the sympathy of the bow-arm of Kreisler following the curves of a superb melody."

THE biggest yellow sheet exploitation supplement yet issued by Goldwyn Cosmopolitan for its releases of the season is that prepared for Goldwyn's first Victor Seastrom production, "Name the Man!" from Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Master of Man."

An introductory page is devoted to the press value of exploitation, followed by editorial comment on the picture.

"Name the Man!" received simultaneous first run showings in fifteen or more of the key cities of the country and the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Exploitation Department had access to the exploitation ideas and materials used in several of these campaigns.

EVER since the Movie Carnival at the Plaza Hotel several weeks ago, the beauty of Jean Tolley, who appeared there in connection with the showing of part of Metro's "The Uninvited Guest" in which she plays a leading role, has been much discussed.

"The Uninvited Guest" marks Miss Tolley's first screen appearance although she already bears the title of the "most photographed girl in the world." This is because Miss Tolley's beauty was long ago recognized by leading advertisers in the country who used her delicate features to draw attention to their merchandise.

AN unusually complete and helpful exhibitors' service book has been prepared for Cosmopolitan's picture, "The Great White Way," based on H. C. Witwer's story "Cain and Mabel." On the front cover which is printed in black and red, is a scene from the prize fight, from the rehearsal of the "Follies" chorus and caricatures by the various cartoonists who appear, incidentally, in the film.

The inside cover page is devoted to a detailed account of the story, the second page contains the cast and pictures of the stars and many notable writers, artists, fight promoters and others who figure in the incidental action. Another page contains a night photograph of the great crowds that thronged the Cosmopolitan Theatre for the first midnight showing of "The Great White Way."

Two pages are devoted to reviews of "The Great White Way" and four pages to stories for motion picture editors of newspapers. The advertising cuts are most attractive and are unique in conception and in execution.

Charles De Roche, now playing in Maurice Tourneur's "White Moth" for Paramount.

PLANS for the drive on all theatres in his territory, to be designated as "Cubberly Month," are being elaborated and whipped into shape by Fred Cubberly, manager of the F. & R. Film Co., of Minneapolis. The drive begins April 20 and closes May 17, during which period he hopes to have combed the territory thoroughly in Warner Brothers Eighteen features in general, and Ernest Lubitsch's "The Marriage Circle" in particular.

"During the playing of 'The Marriage Circle,' said Mr. Cubberly, "we have arranged to have some theatres celebrate their Anniversary Week, which will include specially arranged programs."

Flora Le Breton, English star, signed to play ingenue lead in Hodkinson's "Another Scandal."

RESPONDING to calls of "Author" by the large audience that saw the opening of "After the Ball" at Sydney Cohen's Theatre, New York, Charles K. Harris appeared upon the stage and received an ovation.

When the presence of Charles K. Harris in the theatre was announced, the author of both the song and the photoplay, "After the Ball," was forced to make a personal appearance.

PUTTING behind "The Mailman," the full power of their great national influence among the laboring classes, the leading postal authorities of the West Coast have sent broadcast to postmasters throughout the nation a letter asking them to get behind the Johnson picture and boost it to the limit of their capacity, according to F. B. O.

A portion of the letter states:

"Every man, woman and child in the United States must see 'The Mailman' because of its tremendous human lesson, its stirring argument for more understanding and human sympathy in our daily lives. As drama, as comedy and as sheer entertainment it is in a class by itself."

Natalie Joyce, the new leading lady signed to play opposite Neal Burns in Christie Comedies.

THE press book on C. C. Burr's latest production for the independent market, "The Average Woman," is just off the press and is being shipped this week to the exchanges controlling distribution franchises on the current Burr productions, which include "Three O'clock in the Morning," "The New School Teacher," "Restless Wives," "Lend Me Your Husband" and "Youth To Sell."

Mr. Burr has found in the past that exhibitors find so-called teaser ads of real value in arousing interest in a production. In this press book in addition to a well conceived series of "teasers" picturing "The Average Woman" from the time of Eve to today's flapper frivolities, Mr. Burr provides a special teaser set of drawings depicting in cartoon style some of the humorous tendencies attributed to the aforesaid "Woman."

ONE of the most extensive advertising campaigns ever prepared for the premier of an American feature in South American countries has been outlined by the foreign publicity department of Fox Film Corporation for "If Winter Comes," the screen version of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel.

Modern Theatre Approaching Perfection

Suburban House, Incorporating Many Features, Held Up as Example

MODERN theaters in the suburbs of large cities or prosperous small cities and towns have become a predominating factor in the advancement of theater design and the poularity of motion pictures themselves. It has been left to these houses, with their detailed attention to complete appointments for the patron's comforts, to interest that part of our potential clientele that have hitherto ignored motion pictures.

To be sure, regardless of the beauty and comfort incorporated in theaters, their drawing power would be practically nil without proper pictures. But the combination of good pictures and fine theaters results in greater patronage and—of paramount importance—higher admissions.

The Claridge theater, Montclair, N. J., offers an excellent illustration, through its many noteworthy features, of the advance in theater construction technique. On this and succeeding pages are shown views of this house.

As has become an accepted practice for the purpose of neutralizing the degree of risk of an investment in theater property alone, the Claridge is the main feature of a very attractive business building. This building comprises high class retail stores and offices.

Mention of the importance of electric signs and marquees as a medium for advertising a theater and its picture attractions has often been made in these columns. The owner and manager of the Claridge, Ernest Hinck, apparently fully appreciated the value of these features. At night the exterior of this theater can be clearly seen from a great distance, dominating all other store fronts for several blocks.

Advantage of location of the theater block built at the V intersection of the two busiest thoroughfares of the town gives the Claridge an entrance on both of these streets. The lobby, 60 feet in width and 350 feet long, extends from entrance to entrance, opening into the theater auditorium at its center.

This wide and spacious lobby, extending through the center of the business block is utilized after the fashion of an arcade, adding greater value to the store space.

While this feature of display space is excellent in this particular instance, it is well to bear in mind that a small lobby cannot be employed in a similar way. Crowding will result from the audience lingering after each show. Also the space used for store display can be of unlimited value to the theater itself for advertising of coming attractions.

The auditorium has a seating capacity of 1,400, there being no balcony.

A mezzanine floor affords an attractive place for lounging and resting, the picture being conveniently viewed from this floor. This unusual design of the mezzanine is shown in a reproduction of the interior on a succeeding page. The direct view permitted of the picture is worthy of consideration for other houses of this type.

The interior of the Claridge is treated in Adam style architecture, the ornamental work being beautifully decorated in ivory and gold and the dome on the ceiling is treated in polychrome combination of colors. The side walls of the theater are of genuine caen stone imported from France.

The combination as described, and the views shown of this theater, convey an idea of its beauty in design and decoration.

Yet all these features would likely pass with casual observation by the clientele of the house if it were not for the lighting system and its effective control. In bringing forth the beauty of the theater and in securing a pleasing atmosphere, through modified lighting, the Claridge has taken full advantage of this modern art. The lighting control equipment is of the latest design and adequate of complete flexibility of performance of duty as required of it by a theater of this type and size.

The stage is of the concert type, of ample size to permit the presentation of the more elaborate prologues along with full sets.

Realizing the importance of excellent music as a necessary adjunct to the successful presentation of pictures, especial consideration was given this feature. An orchestra pit of sufficient size to accommodate several pieces is available along with a high class theater organ. The organ installation was studied and carefully planned before the theater was constructed in order that the sound chambers could be positioned to greatest advantage.

The organ has proven an excellent investment as music, particularly organ solos, are exceedingly popular with the theater's clientele. It is of interest to note that good music finds almost universal popularity among motion picture theatre goers, regardless of class.

The projection department of the Claridge gives conclusive proof of its modernization. In this feature, no expense has been spared, the best of equipment being installed throughout. As a safeguard against emergency and as a relief unit, an auxiliary motor generator is available for use at all times.

It is such theaters as the Claridge, along with the finer pictures, that is grad-

Two Organ Installations Made in Kansas Theatres

William McDowell, manager of the Ashland Theater at Wellington, Kan., will install a Wurlitzer pipe organ in his theater. He has signed the contract for installation in the near future. The Dreamland Theater at Herrington, Kan., also has installed a pipe organ of the same make.

Eaton's Theater at Waynoka, Okla., was damaged by fire which broke out at 6:30 o'clock in the morning, February 10. The fire was of unknown origin. The front of the theater, the booth and two machines were destroyed.

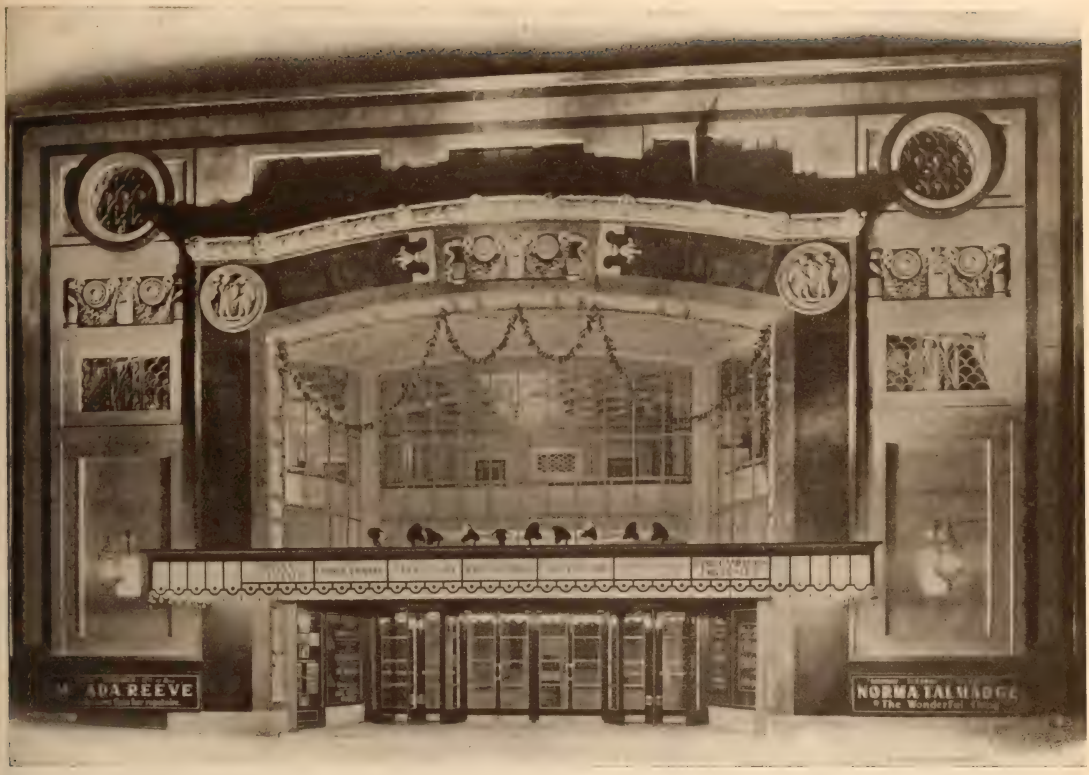
WASHINGTON

Spokane—C. E. Stillwell, has announced plans for the construction of a down town theatre building to cost $100,000 at W. 509 Main Ave., which will seat 820, 142 x 50 ft., of steel construction, roof of reinforced concrete and walls of brick reinforced.

Seville Theatre, Inglewood, Cal. Follows Spanish Design

THE new Seville Theater, Inglewood, Cal., opened its doors to the public recently with "Judgment of the Storm" as the initial attraction. Oscar A. Kantner and C. Robison, share in the managing of the new house.

Nothing has been spared in the creation of the Seville theater, and the thoroughness with which it has been erected and the detail which as been carried out in its designing, decorations and modernized conveniences are worthy of the highest possible commendation upon the part of the designers and builders.



The heating and ventilating of the theater is of the very latest type, and its efficiency and accuracy might well be comprehended when it is learned that the air in the entire structure is completely changed every ten minutes.

Heated air for cool and chilly weather and pure fresh air for exceedingly warm weather is insurance against stagnant and stuffy air at any time. The system is mechanically controlled, thereby delivering a non-fluctuating tempertaure and atmospheric condition at all times.

The impression the passerby gains from the front appearance of the entire structure is forcible and lasting. The theater being in Spanish design lends an unusual appearance. The large Mission style bronze bell that swings in the illuminated opening at the top of the theater front is impressive. Through every opening in the Mission style front wall is seen vines and foliage protruding, and the illuminated effect, colorful yet in keeping with its theme is strikingly impressive and evidences the detail effected in the treatment of the theater's exterior.

Mr. Kantner has been identified with the motion picture industry for the past eight years, the greater part of that time being associated with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in various parts of the country.

Mr. Robinson, is well known in theatrical circles.

Individualizing Your Theatre

HERE is a new way of individualizing your theatre. All that is needed is an attractive theatre exterior and a few flood lighting units properly placed. The effect produced is striking.

The view shown above is that of a theatre in England with its exterior brightly illuminated by ten flood lighting units. Thus all the beauty of design is brought into the greatest of prominence at night.

If you own a theatre that has an attractive front, lighting it at night offers an unequalled opportunity for securing distinctive individuality by enhancing its beauty. This flood of light also gives preeminence by its brightness alone.

An efficient flood lighting installation is inexpensive.

We invite any exhibitor who desires to investigate the advisability of illuminating the exterior of his theatre to write our Lighting Department, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J. Inquiries are also welcomed pertaining to all other phases of theatre illumination.

Special MAZDA lamps are needed for flood lighting, as are required for sign, marquee, lobby, auditorium, stage, projection, etc. There is a proper Edison MAZDA lamp for every requirement of the theatre. Specify Edison and insure satisfaction in your theatre illumination.

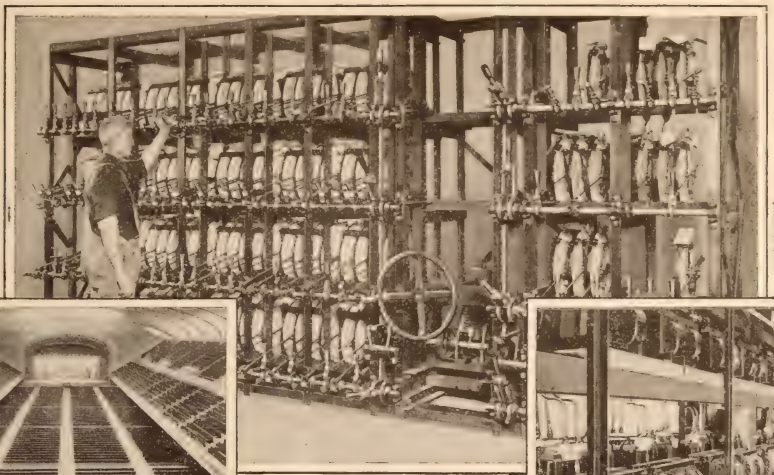
"Varsity" Ranks With Buffalo's Attractive Community Houses

THE Kensington section of Buffalo may well be proud of its new Varsity theatre, a thoroughly modern, completely equipped community motion picture house which has just been opened to the public by James Cardina, one of the most progressive exhibitors in the Queen City of the Lakes.

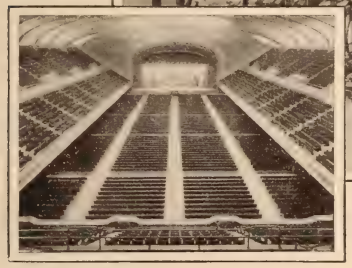
The Varsity is located at 3161 Bailey avenue. It was built by James O. Cristina, contractor, from plans by Lewis & Hill, architects of Buffalo. The house has a frontage on Bailey avenue of 85 feet and a depth of 140 feet. The Varsity is constructed entirely of fireproof materials such as concrete, brick, steel, marble and seagiolia, and represents an outlay of $150,000.

Five oak and glass doors lead into the spacious lobby, which is 19 by 35 feet. At the right going in is the box office which contains an automatic ticket machine. Stanley frames are used in the lobby. Three double oak doors lead into the auditorium which is of ideal design for a neighborhood house, cozy, roomy and homelike. The stage is attractively framed, with Corinthian pillars at each side. Large silk curtains, containing the letter V in the center hide the screen from view when it is not in use. Ivory and old rose is the color scheme of the auditorium interior.



The Varsity has a beautifully toned organ manufactured by Marr & Colton of Warsaw, N. Y. C. L. Tofford, formerly at the Strand and Bellevue, Niagara Falls, N. Y. presides at the console, which is placed in the center of the orchestra pit.

The projection booth is placed directly above the entrance to the auditorium and is one of the finest in the city. There are two Simplex machines, spotlight and a Westinghouse generator. The length of throw is 96.4 and A. L. Bothan, one of the veteran operators of western New York, is in charge. Federal house phones keep the office in direct touch with each department of the theatre. Westinghouse electric equipment is used throughout the Varsity.



Perhaps one of the most interesting features is the heating plant, which is Duplex Automatic, which makes it possible to automatically control the warmth in every section of the building. This gas burning system overcomes low pressure. It does away with a furnace in the basement, is clean, convenient, efficient and above all, healthful. The heaters are exact duplicates of steam heat radiators, except that a gas burner is placed in the center of each radiator. In the lobby several radiators are placed behind a latticed frame and controlled by a thermostat in the wall near the box office. Radiators are also placed along the walls of the auditorium and one is used beneath the organ which keeps the instrument in splendid working order at all times.

There are 863 seats in the house of American Seating manufacture. The seats are all on one floor. The lighting is indirect, coves running along the top of each wall in the auditorium. There is a large dome in the center of the house in basket work, personally designed by Mr. Cardina. There are several smaller basket work domes in the lobby, all of which are lined with artistic silks. Two spans of frosted bulbs run across the ceiling of lobby. In front of the Varsity just over the entrance is an attractive electric sign, designed and built by the Broadway Electric Sign System. There is a flasher used in connection with the sign in which illuminated letters are also used.

is equipped with Vitrohm Dimmers

ONE of the most striking monuments to public enterprise in Cleveland, Ohio, is the huge City Auditorium, seating 12,000 persons—largest convention and exposition hall in the United States. Large in proportion—in fact, the largest dimmer installation in the world—is the 900 kw. capacity WARD LEONARD VITROHM DIMMER used for controlling the auditorium and stage lighting of this tremendous building. WARD LEONARD Vitrohm Dimmers are compact, light, dependable, easy to operate and absolutely safe. For more than twenty years, their service has been proving the superiority which has won them the preference they today enjoy among hundreds of prominent theatre owners; theatrical producers and stage architects and engineers.

Movable Contact

(Skate Shoe)

Unless properly designed, the movable contact of an adjustable resistance may be a source of continual trouble. Such troubles never occur with WARD LEONARD Theatre Dimmers. The movable contact is both a self-aligning and a self-adjusting shoe which is held firmly in contact, yet freely rides over ordinary projections. Simple, positive; can't get out of order. Requires minimum effort to operate; needs no attention.

Types of Mirrors and the Law of Reflection by Plane Mirrors

Lesson II.—Part I.

THE accurate control of light is effected by means of mirrors and lenses. It should be understood that by "control" of light is meant control as regards direction only. Of course for extreme accuracy in the control of light, it is necessary to build special forms of mirrors and lenses in order to correct for the faults ordinarily found in commercial types of these devices.

The laws which governs the action of mirrors are in many respects similar to those of lenses. This being so, the action of mirrors will be described in detail first while those of lenses will be reserved for later treatment.

Types of Mirrors

Mirrors can be classified according to their shape, as for instance

Plane
Concave (spherical)
Convex
Elliptical
Parabolic

They are also commonly classified according to the material from which they are made, such as

Glass
Metal—Silvered Metal
Nickel-plated metal
Polished aluminum

It is also ordinary practice to combine both of these classifications when describing a particular reflector as, for instance, a polished aluminum parabolic reflector.

Strictly speaking, there are no glass reflectors in the ordinary sense of the word. A glass reflector, such as a common "looking glass" really consists of a highly polished piece of metal with its reflecting surface protected by glass. A section of such a mirror is shown in Fig. 9. A represents the highly polished metal reflecting surface which may consist of either silver as in the case of high grade mirrors or quick-silver (mercury) in the case of the cheaper kind. The front protecting surface of glass—from whence this type takes its name is shown by B. Where the back of the mirror is unprotected and liable to be injured, a heavy protective coating of pure copper, C is electrolytically deposited on the top of the mirror backing A and thus both front and rear surfaces are fully protected from accidental injury.

In some cases, as a means of further protection, it is customary to apply a heavy coat of special paint, D, to the copper backing which also serves to improve the appearance of the mirror. Sometimes, the copper backing is omitted and the heavy coat of paint applied directly to the mirror backing.

Figure 9

Action of Mirror

A surface in order to regularly reflect light, as in the case of a mirror, must have a polished surface. Why should such a surface, though, reflect light differently than any other, as for instance, a plaster wall which gives diffuse reflection–

Briefly the size of the surface irregularities, in comparison with the wave length of light determines what kind of reflection the surface gives. Now the wave length of ordinary light ranges from 1/35,000 inch for red light to 1/70,000 inch for violet light. In order for a surface to reflect light regularly, as in the case of a mirror, the small ridges, depressions, or irregularities in the surface must not be farther apart than one-quarter wave length. Thus, in the case of red light, these ridges would have to be no farther apart than 1/140,000 of one inch! If this distance is exceeded, the surface will diffuse the light. It is for this reason that all good reflectors must be highly polished and the higher the polish the better the reflector.

In this connection it might be well to state that the surface of glass, when ground to a very smooth surface, acts as a reflector depending upon the angle at which the light strikes it. At high angles of incidence (80°—85°) between 50 and 60 per cent. of the light striking its surface is reflected.

The Law of Reflection

When light strikes the polished surface of a plane mirror, it is reflected in a certain direction depending upon the angle at which it strikes it.

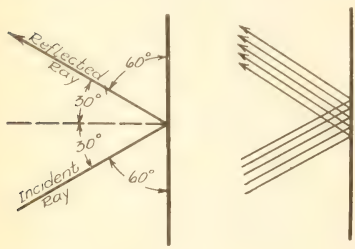

Figure 10

Herein really lies the difference between polished reflectors and other kinds such as diffuse and spread reflectors. Thus in the case of Fig. 10a, if the light traveling toward the mirror, marked "incident ray" strikes it, the mirror at an angle of say 30°, with the perpendicular line erected at the point where the ray and mirror meet, then the reflecting ray (so marked) will also make an angle of 30° with the perpendicular. Furthermore the angle between the incident ray and the mirror (60°) and that between the reflected ray and mirror, will be equal (also 60°) as shown. The angle which incident ray makes with the perpendicular is known as the angle of incidence and the one made by the reflected ray and the perpendicular is referred to as the angle of reflection.

Fig. 10-b shows that a pencil of rays which were parallel before striking the plane mirror will remain parallel after reflection from the mirror.

Co-operation

We are dependent for knowledge, to a great extent, upon what we learn from other people. The average person finds out very few new things for himself and his fund of general information consists of the experiences of many other people which have come to his attention through either seeing them, hearing of them or reading of them.

Civilization can be defined as a state of enlightenment. The more we learn, the more civilized and cultured presumably, we become. Barbarism, then, according to this definiton, would consist of a state of ignorance.

There are, at the present time, four great civilizing influences in the world; Social Intercourse, Printing, Motion Pictures and Radio Telephony. The last two are comparatively new but possess unlimited possibilities for bringing into close contact the various peoples of the world.

The average human being is a social creature. When two persons get together it is only natural that they begin "swapping yarns" and thus add to each other's stock of information. We use this means of increasing our knowledge every day. Naturally, since most of us must work for a living, the greatest exchange of ideas occurs with our fellow-workers. Now the process of exchanging ideas by means of social intercourse can be summed up in one word—"co-oneration." If we co-operate willingly with a fellow worker, it is only natural for him to reciprocate and thus there results harmonious working conditions which are mutually beneficial.

Not all persons, however, are willing co-operators. The writer, a short time ago had occasion to pay a visit to a metropolitan theatre and, while enroute to the projection room, stopped to chat a while with the house manager. He was informed that the regular projectionist was off duty and that the regular relief man was working in his place. The information was also advanced that the projection was not all that it should be and that a considerable number of lamps were being burned out prematurely. It so happened that this house was using a 30 ampere D. C. arc in competition with a Mazda outfit to determine the advisibility of changing over com-

Allender & Neal Add the New Ritz Theatre to Spokane String

SPOKANE'S new motion picture house, the Ritz, will be open to the public March 15, according to J. W. Allender of Allender & Neal, operating a string of motion picture theaters there. The Ritz, to cost in the neighborhood of $15,000, stands completed today, so far as the exterior is concerned, a strikingly beautiful edifice in the Italian Renaissance style of architecture, and work on the interior is being rushed to completion.

The picture firm has taken a long lease on the building, located at 520 Main avenue, and will make it a "first run" house exclusively, popular prices prevailing. The property is leased from G. F. Heiber. Westcott and Gifford are the architects. The house will seat 550, with the balcony taking care of 200.

The new theater, which is fireproof construction throughout, will have a projection of 80 feet. The newest ideas in lighting have bee nemployed and an electric organ has already been ordered for the house. It will be heated from the Central Heating plant there. A system of indirect lighting will be used throughout, and outside, to illuminate the front of the theater flood lights will be used.

It is long and narrow and the soft glow from the exit lamps will throw a subdued light over the audience without affecting the screen. The stage will have a proscenium arch, elaborately decorated. An excellent ventilating system will be installed. The rest room is back of the balcony and the offices are to be on the mezzanine floor.

The theater is of stucco construction, with brick and tile trimmings to give it color, in reds, greens and blues. The building is of three stories, with a frontage of 31 feet and runs back 100 feet to the alley. An ornamental iron balcony gives a touch of elegance to the front, and a huge electric sign, 12 by 30 feet will carry the house showing. There is a big 12-foot arch for the entrance, and the box office is in the center of the archway.

Woodland Invents Singing and Talking Pictures

Woodland's Talking and Singing Pictures, a new process of synchronizing motion pictures and the human voice, will have its first public demonstration at the Civic Theatre, Liberty Avenue and 114th Street, Richmond Hill, Queens, N. Y. on Monday and Tuesday, February 25 and 26. This system of synchronization has been invented and perfected by John Woodland, for years one of the most expert projection men in the industry. The claim is made for these talking motion pictures that they are not as complicated in method as the other systems that have been hitherto shown publicly and that the synchronization is perfect.

The first demonstration will include two songs which were sung by Scott Welsh, well known musical comedy star, who has made many phonograph records.

Old Everett Theatre Being Replaced

Contracts for the complete equipping, furnishing, decorating and lighting of the new Everett at Everett, Wash., were let recently to the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle. The house will cost approximately $125,000, and will represent the finest motion picture theatre in that territory. It is being built by the Star Amusement Company, under the direction of C. A. Swanson, and will replace the former Everett Theatre, which was totally destroyed by fire a few months ago. It is located in practically the exact center of the downtown business district, and will be devoted to a high class first run policy. Present plans call for a seating capacity of practically 1,100.

Sanik Brothers Will Build Theatre in Astoria

Joseph and Alexander Sanik purchased the plot, 175x100, adjoining the northeast corner of Ditmars and Second avenues, Astoria, Long Island City, for development with a theater and stores. The transaction was negoitated by Jacob and Emil Lettner, Inc.

The above view shows a specially equipped chassis built for Burr Nickle, Los Angeles, for publicity in his production, "The Land of Whispering Hope." This chassis was equipped with convertible berths, film room and a Tanley selfplaying Air Calliope which was built by the Tangley Mfg. Co.

pletely to the latter. A test of this kind, by the way, would not be worth much due principally to the difference in color quality of the two illuminants and furthermore — however, that's another story.

Being naturally curious to get a line on the new man, he was sought out while the show was in progress and engaged in conversation.

The first thing which caught the writer's ear as he entered the projecton room was a noise which so closely resembled the rumble of a subway train that he instinctively reached overhead for a strap and fished around in his pockets for a paper with which to occupy himself until the next station was reached. The floor of that room actually shook. The trouble lay in the worn out drives of both machines which were old models.

Here, evidently, was the cause of the lamp trouble and after introductions were over, attention was called to this possibility. The conversation from then on was as follows:

"Yes, I know, but that's none of my business."

"Does the regular man suspect this is the the cause of his lamp trouble?"

"Naw,—he's a dumb-bell."

"Why not tell the manager and advise the purchase of new drives?"

"Why should I? I'm only the relief operator."

Further observation disclosed the fact that one reason for the poor screen illumination was due to the fact that a piece of tin, stuck in the port hole opening to cut off the stray light was cutting off fully one half of the beam, in addition thereby reducing the screen intensity to half its effective value. Conversation as follows:

"Wouldn't it be better to remove that port-hole plate and use all of the beam?"

"Yeh, I know, but why should I do it?"

"Does the other chap know about it?"

"No he don't, but why should I tell him. That's his business."

And so it went with the line-up of the both systems and other points. If the Mazda line-up was out he couldn't be bothered learning how to adjust it. He was paid for running the show. "Let the other fellow do it," he grinned.

Yet this same man came regularly to that theatre once a week! Co-operation simply wasn't in his vocabulary.

Guild Fellowship Scholarship for Organists

To encourage the study of advanced organ playing under notable French instructors the Council of the American Guild of Organists have announced the establishment of a scholarship in organ playing at the School of Music in Fontainebleau, France. The scholarship will cover transportation, expenses and tuition for an American organist at the 1924 summer course at the school. This year it will be awarded to the candidate receiving the highest mark in the regular Guild Fellowship examination which will be conducted in 15 or more cities from Boston to San Francisco on May 15 and 16, 1924.

It will be known as the Estey Organ Company Scholarship as the necessary funds are contributed to the guild by the Estey Organ Company of Brattleboro, Vermont. The competition will be national in scope as the American Guild has 37 chapters and members in 44 states.

Theatre Seating Two Thousand Planned for Topeka

A $200,000 theater which will seat 2,000 persons will be built in Topeka, Kansas. According to reports, George Moore, Robert Stone and Albert P. Simpson of Topeka, have closed a real estate deal for a site on Tenth avenue between Kansas avenue and Quincy Street. The theater would cover a space 75 to 150 feet. It would handle both legitimate and motion picture productions and is predicted will be the finest theater in Kansas outside of the Miller in Wichita.

"Yolanda"— Cosmopolitan, Cosmopolitan, N. Y.

Times—"Miss Davies never looked more beautiful. Her acting is effective throughout . . . A beautiful and colossal production. Scenes and settings of this film are a tribute to moving pictures as are also the faultless and expensive costumes. It fills one with admiration for the sheer beauty of the scenic effect."

Don Allen, in the Evening World—"Marion Davies in 'Yolanda' is one of the best actresses we have ever seen on the screen. It's a picture worth any one's while to see. If you don't take our advice and see it, it will be your own fault."

Harriette Underhill, in Tribune—"Marion Davies is Charming in 'Yolanda.' One of the screen's most arresting actresses. A gorgeous production. It is costly, beautifully directed, marvelously photographed and well acted."

Robert E. Sherwood, in The Herald—"Marion Davies looks lovely . . . Undoubtedly the loveliest and most convincing scenes that have ever been built in an American studio . . . 'Yolanda' is gorgeous to behold."

Quinn Martin, in The World—"Great Pictorial Beauty in 'Yolanda' . . . Deserves the highest praise which can be bestowed upon it for loveliness of scenic mounting and costume. Fully as expensive and fully as beautiful as 'Knighthood'."

Thomas B. Hanly, in The Morning Telegraph—"A splendid picture. Miss Davies scored in the role of Princess Mary. The picture early won and retained to the end the marked approval of everyone present."

Robert Gilbert Welsh, in The Evening Telegram-Mail—"Marion Davies' new role equals her best work. She is charming in the lighter scenes, touching in the pathetic moments, and is always a delight to the eye. The distinguished audience applauded her performance with real enthusiasm."

"Judgment of the Storm"— F. B. O.— Heilig, Seattle.

Star—"Put 'Way Down East' and 'Over the Hill' together, cut them down to regulation length, add a new leading lady who is 'New' in every sense of the word and you have 'Judgment of the Storm'."

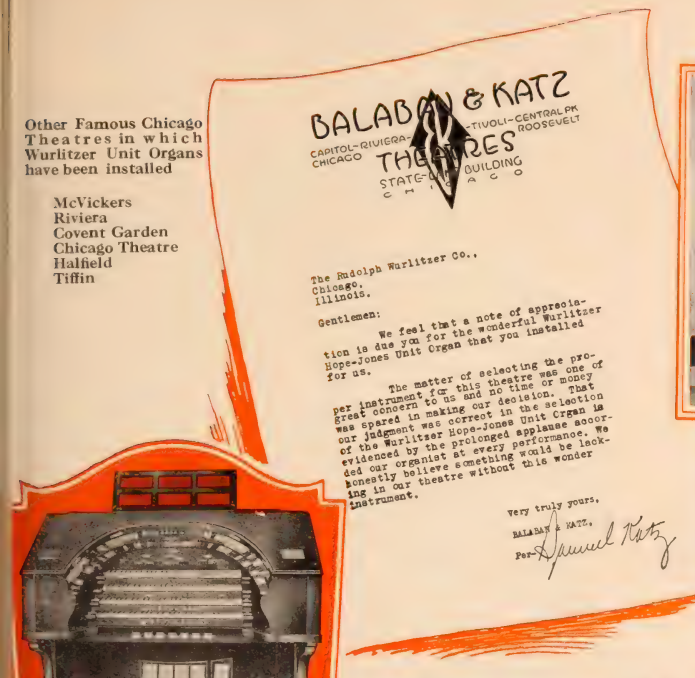
"'Judgment of the Storm' is life itself, swirling, hurrying and tumbling by, like the snowflakes do in the blizzard scenes of the picture which, by the way, are some of the greatest of the kind ever made."

"Maytime"— Preferred — Metropolitan, Baltimore.

Post—"Another flapper picture, yet different, is being offered at the Metropolitan this week. And it's good."

"Maytime"— Preferred — Madison, Wisconsin

Times—"'Maytime' is without a doubt one of the most delightful and pleasing pictures that has been shown here for quite a while. Even admirers of blood and thunder films like a change to sympathetic romance now and then, and 'Maytime' furnishes just that kind of restful entertainment."



"The Virginian" — Preferred Monroe, Chicago

Virginia Dale, in the Chicago Journal—"The old favorite, 'The Virginian' has come to light again, this time to flicker proudly on the screen. To Kenneth Harlan is entrusted the title role of the cowboy and this would seem a wise choice.

"The old melodrama lends itself well to the gesturing celluloid. The punchers, quick draws and the celebrated line, 'When you call me that—smile!' are all pictured."

MELODRAMA — That fascinates and enthralls. A genuine love story of really human folk certain to appeal to every class.

ACTION — So amazingly swift it will keep any audience a-thrill, with a river fight scene that has no equal in any picture.

COMEDY — Situations so comical they bring uproars of laughter, with an acting bear that keeps everybody a-chuckle between roars.

THRILLS — A plot so full of mystery, treachery, intrigue, that it puzzles to the very last, but runs straight and clear all the way.

MARY PHILBIN IN "FOOL'S HIGHWAY"

Star Is Charming in Universal's Production of Kildare Novel, "My Mamie Rose."

AT MOSS'S BROADWAY THEATRE

By SAM COMLY.

"Fools Highway" is one of those rare pictorial treats that once in a long while slip into town and reveal an almost perfect co-ordination of acting, continuity, directorial and title-writing talents. There is nothing very pretentious about it, just a simple love story of a Bowery tough and a little seamstress, that has the valuable audience assets, of the suggestion of a tear mingled with the smiles. Unless we are very much mistaken, Carl Laemmle will roll up a larger score on the net profit side of the ledger with this picture than some of his past million-dollar spectacles.

As a colorful record of bygone days on the old Bowery, "Fools Highway" is a faithful document, but what to most people is more important, it is very good entertainment, and as such will be recognized by the motion picture fans throughout the country. We cannot recall seeing Mary Philbin act with more charm in any of her past features as she does in this version of Owen Kildare's story. The audience which witnessed the first public performance of the picture yesterday at B. S. Moss's Broadway Theatre, was generous in its applause, especially for the work of the leading players, Mary Philbin and Pat O'Malley.

ROBT. G. WELCH
in
The N.Y. Evening Mail and Telegram

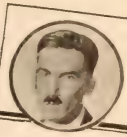
The picture teems with vigor and animation, and has succeeded in bringing back the Bowery in all its old activities, some of them a bit sinister, in the days and nights when the horse-cars angled under the elevated road, and when the first automobile was a thing to be marvelled at

There are other marvels in this Bowery film, and one of the greatest is the beauty and charm of Miss Mary Philbin as Mamie Rose, one of the sweetest and most ingenuous characters ever presented on the screen. She is wistful and sweet, and at the same time is delightfully humorous in many of her best scenes.

LOUELLA PARSONS
in
The N.Y. American



"Fool's Highway," in spite of its silly name, offers good entertainment for those who care to enjoy a good, old fashioned melodrama with the three requisites, a hero, a heroine and a villain.

Mary Philbin as Mamie Rose, the orphan seamstress, is a delight. I wonder if she enjoys her work as much as she seems to. Her eyes shine with the joy of living and she fairly radiates the spirit of youth.

The N.Y. Tribune

Yesterday afternoon at the Broadway we stood for an hour in a terribly hot theater, jostled by men who were having an extended lunch hour, to see "Fools' Highway." And we were not sorry, nor even disagreeable, for we saw Mary Philbin, than whom there is no more alluring young person on the screen. For some time we have suspected Miss Philbin was in a class with Lillian Gish and Mary Pickford. Now we know it. We doubt if either of these actresses could have given a greater performance than Mary Philbin gives in "Fools' Highway." She is a delight, as well as a thing of Beauty. We shall never tire of Mary Philbin.

ROBT. E. SHERWOOD
in
The N.Y. Herald

'FOOLS HIGHWAY' AT BROADWAY THEATER

Picture Accurately Portrays New York of Past.

"My Mamie Rose" is generally acknowledged as being one of the most powerful stories ever written. Certainly it has all the elements needed for a great motion picture. And in the opinion of this writer, "Fool's Highway" is nothing less than great.

The picture is well and carefully produced: the direction is good and the acting excellent. In this latter respect Mary Philbin as Mamie Rose is to be particularly commended. Others may wear clothes better, display prettier backs, shed more evident tears and heave heavier sighs, but when it comes to playing on the sympathies of the spectators Mary leads them all. She is better than Lillian Gish at her best and what praise for a picture star could be greater than that?

There is no hesitation in recommending "Fool's Highway" as first rate entertainment, but why Carl Laemmle allowed his henchmen to name this photoplay anything else but "My Mamie Rose" is beyond understanding.

IN "Flapper Wives" Laurence Trimble and Jane Murfin have created a distinctly different type of screen-play.

Flawless direction coupled with discriminating casting has made possible a production which, while tensely dramatic, is consistently convincing at all times.

Adapted from the play of the same name by Jane Murfin, the action carries just enough true comedy to act as an admirable foil to the dramatic situations.

A story of man and woman's primitive passion, old and eternal as the hills—of Pedro the Fox, his seductive wife, and her soldier lover—but with NIBLO'S treatment, and the flaming background of the Spanish Pyrenees, it gets under the skin. Broadway audiences are sitting up and gasping at its daring. The title will bring them running to any theatre anywhere!

"Enough strokes to swim the English channel," as depicted by one of the titles, describes this roaring farce of the twenty-four-hour stay of a pair of novices on a golf course. This Jack White production and Mermaid Comedy is an excellent short subject for any program. It will go especially well where a few in the audience have a knowledge of golf.  A runaway trolley car which dashes through the business section of a city terminates this two-reeler with quick heart action.—Moving Picture World.

The Measure of Your Message

THE measure of your message is the number of actual readers reached by the publications carrying your advertising.

You may buy "10,000 circulation," but is it delivered or is it merely a "claim" of the publisher?

The A. B. C. offers a service that will enable the advertiser and advertising agent to measure every message placed in the leading publications of the United States and Canada.

Every day in all parts of the Continent A. B. C. auditors are checking the records of publishers, and their findings are tabulated in the form of A. B. C. reports.

These reports, by the authentic, reliable, verified data they contain, enable the advertiser to measure exactly how widely his message has been distributed.

A. B. C. audits of the Motion Picture Trade Journals will be ready shortly — Study them carefully and buy your space according to the story they tell.

Making real profits in Oil!

One of the First National 20 February to June 1924

WHAT condition could be more ideal than that which exists right now for the keen exhibitor.

The country is hearing and talking of nothing but oil. It's the greatest front page story of years.

Here we have a picture, a great picture of the oil country about which the Moving Picture World says:

"THIS FIRST NATIONAL SHOULD PROVE ONE OF THE BEST MELODRAMATIC BETS OF THE SEASON."

Is this the opportunity of an exhibitor's life-time? You can bet your last dollar it is—with the biggest kind of an O.

Watch New York pack the MARK STRAND, as it packed them in other cities, when it opens there week of March 9th.

The Church and The Picture

THE attitude of the church toward the picture was recently placed before me by one of the leading executives of the Church Federation—a man, by the way, of broad vision and practical affairs.

Said he: "The church sees in the motion picture a force so great that the picture could, if it would, tear down faster than the church could build up. Consequently, the church faces these alternatives: to cooperate with the picture industry or to fight the pictures of the picture industry with the pictures of the church.

"We greatly prefer the former course, but if it is necessary, the church is ready to go into pictures with adequate finance and organization just as the church has gone into other educative fields."

This statement is logical enough. We have reason also to believe that it is a statement of fact—that, in other words, the united churches of this country have the funds, the personnel, the organization, the exhibition outlet to go right ahead, if they will; and do just as they say.

So we pass along for the consideration of this industry what seems to us to be a matter of very large importance.

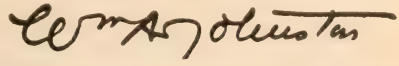
* * * *

For whatever gap of sympathy and understanding there exists today between the picture people and the leaders of the church, each side is probably about equally to blame.

On the one hand the makers, distributors and exhibitors of pictures must realize that theirs is by no means merely a theatrical enterprise. The theatre, until the advent of the film, was a large city problem, a matter mostly of the transient attendance of city visitors. The film has reversed the situation and brought the theatre to the home—to the American home in some 14,000 towns; so that the picture is a home problem of the nation. It is today the most powerful agent of expression—more powerful than the pulpit, the school, the printed page; and as such it must do its part, upward, in the construction and maintenance of social, political and economic order. The church feels that this is also its function, as it is—and so the church feels that the agency of the motion picture should work along with the church or separately, in, through and for the church.

* * * *

Again pictures improve — approach nearer we will say church standards — as the public taste improves. Fanatics would change the public mind and habit overnight — by legislation for instance; but every sensible person knows that reform can't be done by force — that education is a slow process. The voice of the public is a factor to which both church and picture must listen.



* * * *

So there's the situation.

It greatly behooves each side to understand the other. Knowledge is the key to the problem.

Let the picture makers and the executives of the united Churches talk together; and let the exhibitor everywhere, as he can and sometimes does, effect an intelligent working cooperation with his local church, civic and women's organizations.

That is the one true way to an inevitable end.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WHEN the week of March 9th is brought to a close, "The Covered Wagon" will have rounded out a year of continuous performances on Broadway. It broke the record for a continuous showing some weeks ago—a record held by "The Birth of a Nation." A year on Broadway—there is an achievement for you!

No one ever dreamed in the days of the nickelodion—when the feature picture was in the first stages of development that the silent drama would become such an important factor in the amusement world that it could possibly bid for patronage along with the older art—the spoken drama. Extended runs for pictures on Broadway have become an old story—but the presentation at one theatre—without interruption for fifty-two weeks is something to enthuse over.

"The Covered Wagon" shows no signs of abated interest among screengoers. It seems destined to make a mark which will stand for years.

LOUIS B. MAYER'S production, "Thy Name Is Woman," sponsored by Metro, had its New York premiere Monday night at the Lyric Theatre. Everyone who knew what Fred Niblo, the director, had accomplished with "Blood and Sand," and "Strangers of the Night," came to see what he would make out of this graphic story of the triangle—a story of Latin love and vengeance. Every seat was occupied—and standing room was at a premium.

THE many friends of Andrew Cobb, the exhibitor-manager, will be pleased to learn that he has recovered from his recent illness which confined him for several weeks in the hospital.

MARY and Doug will broadcast over the radio the evening of March 12th, at 8:15 their personal messages to their respective publics and movie fans in general through Station WJZ, New York. Which marks the first formal use of the radio by these stars for communicating first-hand with the theatre-going and newspaper-reading population of the world within the radius of this powerful nation.

There was lively competition among the large broadcasting organizations to obtain their services—with WJZ the winner.

The dual "vocal appearance" of these two stars is expected to arouse exceptional interest for not before has any such simultaneous undertaking been arranged by picture celebrities.

It also presents an unusual opportunity for exhibitors who will be able to notify their patrons of the broadcasting event and the date and hour ,thus enabling movie fans within the wave length of WJZ to hook up their receivers and listen in to the messages of Doug and Mary.

SEVERAL of our American travelers abroad who have struck out with caravans across the hot sands or grouped themselves for pictorial effects in the capitols and way places of the Old World — have returned to their native soil, while others are due back in a week or so. Among those who have passed the New York customs officials are Peter Milne (not so glad to be back because of the appeal of Paris) who served as Edwin Carewe's doctor of publicity during the filming of "A Son of the Sahara" in Algeria, Walter McGrail and wife — and Rosemary Theby — also members of the Carewe company.

Due this Saturday on the S.S. Paris is Carewe himself, Montagu Love, Bert Lytell, Claire Windsor and the director's technical staff. In about a week Rex Ingram will set foot on American soil. He went to Africa — Tunis and environs, to be exact — six months ago to make "The Arab." Accompanying him are Ramon Navarro and Alice Terry.

A traveler in another direction is Renee Adoree who, trailed by an impressive array of trunks, departed from New York for Havana last week to linger a while before she returns.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN sails this Saturday for Rome, where he will join Director Brabin, June Mathis and George Walsh for active work on "Ben Hur." He will be followed abroad in the course of a few weeks by Gertrude Olmstead, Carmel Myers and Kathleen Key.

PEARL WHITE, who has been a resident of Paris for several years, and who returned to the United States to defend an action for damages instituted by Jack Beatty against her and the Fox Film Corporation, embarked for France the other day, the winner of the suit. Beatty claimed $50,000 from the actress and Fox because a horse he was riding during the filming of a picture refused to register repression.

Pearl White, who was one of the greatest box-office attractions a few years ago, announces that she is through with the screen so far as appearing before the camera is concerned. She will confine her efforts hereafter to the megaphone, directing for the French Co-Operative Motion Picture Company.

America who brought her fame and fortune is renounced in favor of France.

"It ees not zat I dislike America, but zat I love Paris more."

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER, the director, is an accomplished composer and musician. Long before he became identified with the camera he achieved recognition in musical circles. Everywhere you go o' nights you will hear his lilting melody, "Marcheta," which is the year's musical sensation. It is one of the biggest sellers among talking machine records— and one of the favorites with the leading dance orchestras. Spanish of theme and rhythm—it carries grace and color.

Mr. Schertzinger has composed another song—which will be used as the theme for Mary Pickford's "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." It lacked nothing but a title—so Miss Pickford came to the rescue with the suggestion that the song be named "Love Has a Way."

REPORTS from the Coast tell us that Jackie Coogan is using more than a hundred children in his second picture for Metro. Since the Los Angeles school board provides that one teacher must be engaged for every six children employed by a film company, there are seventeen teachers in daily attendance at the studio.

T is not recorded whether a film salesman got through to Atlin, British Columbia, but if he did he has qualified to travel with North Pole explorers. But word reached Vitagraph's Winnipeg office that the Pillman Theatre at Atlin wanted to book "Pioneer Trails."

In order to fill the order the office rushed a print to make the once-a-year boat to Atlin. This remote spot is situated 125 miles northeast of Juneau, Alaska, and about 60 miles directly west from Skagway. Open water permits vessels to make Atlin once a year.

IT took a long time for Tom Allenby, fifty-nine years of age, and an ex-cowpuncher and old miner of Melbourne, Australia, to bask in the public spotlight. The Klondyke was unkind to him—and working as an extra in Hollywood earned him a precarious living. His experience as an erstwhile member of the Northwest Mounted interested Cecil De Mille who gave him the opportunity to drive one of the chariots in "The Ten Commandments."

It is Allenby who furnishes the thrill in the scene showing a chariot plunging over a steep embankment. The old-timer miraculously escaped injury—and out in Hollywood they are making hero of him.

Old Man Opportunity waited a long time to give Allenby his chance. It took a film mishap to bring him success.

IF you would be advised as to the present capacity of J. W. O'Mahoney, who formerly occupied the publicity chair for Educational, let us inform you that he left the amusement world to take up commerce. He is president of the Tap Tea Co., Inc., one of the largest tea distributors in the United State—and according to a few statistics, we have before us, he is putting over his product with a bang

NATHAN BURKAN, a lawyer well known in film circles, always has something to say when he starts his summation. He can sum up the problems of the screen in very few words—but these words carry weight. He recently declared himself on the radio. It is his contention that if legitimate and motion picture theatres are not careful they will find themselves entirely without audiences.

Mr. Burkan cited the fact that one of his clients found his theatre (a neighborhood house) almost bare on the night President Coolidge delivered his Lincoln Day address. This exhibitor complains that the speeches of big men or accounts of prizefights have had a marked effect on attendance.

There is a sting in Mr. Burkan's prophesy that when the radio has developed until the entire world is hooked up with the receiver of private homes there will be 365 days' programs for the fans.

"Then," he asks, "what will become of the box-office?"

Meanwhile the debate is waxing warm in several quarters over the effect of the Radio on attendance. S. L. Rothafel of the Capitol, New York, is a champion of the radio. He believes that the radio installation at the theatre has been of great benefit to his establishment. There are others who are firmly convinced in their own cases to the contrary.

DAVID HIGGINS long identified with the stage as a star of his most famous play, "His Last Dollar,"—one of the first five reel motion pictures ever made, will appear in one of the important roles in the new Thomas Meighan feature, "The Confidence Man."

Mr. Higgins is a real old-timer in theatrical circles. He toured for many years in "His Last Dollar"—and every opry house of old traditions has presented the melodrama. He also wrote "Piney Ridge," another memorable melo—which was produced by him at the American Theatre, New York in 1897—at a time when it was the only theatre on 42nd street.

CECIL B. DE MILLE will present "The Ten Commandments" at the Presidio, San Francisco, in the near future. The showing will be for soldiers only. In order to project a proper atmosphere, Mr. De Mille, has called upon Rudolph Berliner, former musical director for the Ritz-Carlton Hotels in New York and Montreal and now member of the De Mille production staff, to pick from two army bands seventy-five musicians to render the musical accompaniment.

COAST rumors have it that "The Great Divide"—which has been called the great American play—will be filmed again, the first filming having been made by Vitagraph back in 1915.. It is said that Reginald Barker will direct the picture for Metro from a continuity prepared by Waldemar Young.

THE sailors of the United States battle fleet anchored in the Hudson River—and who are on a ten days' furlough, are wasting no time looking over what New York affords in the amusement line. Last Wednesday more than 200 gobs from the fleet attended the Cameo Theatre to view "When a Man's a Man." The jackies came direct from their ships and proceeded in a body to the theatre.

A FINE glow of sentiment was generated during the premiere of "Fool's Highway" at that famous old landmark of the Bowery, Atlantic Gardens, last Friday night. It was fitting and proper that Universal should reproduce as much as possible the atmosphere of the mellow yesterday when the celebrated street and the picturesque German Beer garden which still continues its original name—Atlantic Gardens, though it has been made over into a picture house—were in their glory.

The premiere, to the old-timers in the audience who knew the character of the Bowery and the time-honored shrine, carried them along on a wave of sentiment. And the younger generation was transported.

Then on the stage stepped a few favorites of yesteryear—among them Maude Raymond singing the melodies she originated for the Atlantic Gardens, and Maude Nugent, who sang her own song, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," and Harry Von Tilzer, who sung over the refrains of hits which were popular twenty-five years ago. The biggest ovation was offered Charles Lawlor, the blind composer. A few bars of a great song were played and his face lighted up with enthusiasm. It is his own song—the one that helped elect Al Smith—and which endures as a classic along with "Swanee River." It is "The Sidewalks of New York." Senator James J. Walker followed with eulogistic remarks paid to the Bowery, the Governor and the sponsors of the picture.

The prolgue was over; we were placed in the proper atmosphere to see the picture.

T. O. C. C. Wins Arbitration Ruling

Playdate Declared Integral Part of Film Contract In Test Case Before N. Y. Board

An important interpretation of the uniform contract, by which a playdate is declared to be an integral part of a film contract and not subject to change without mutual consent of distributor and exhibitor, was reported to the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce at its regular weekly meeting, March 4.

A test case was made in behalf of a member theatre, which alleged that a certain New York exchange had altered a playdate arbitrarily. The T. O. C. C. appointed Bernard Edelhertz as special counsel and he argued the case before the New York Joint Arbitration Board. President Charles L. O'Reilly told the trade press the Board had ruled unanimously that a playdate was an integral part of the contract.

Mr. O'Reilly has been nominated to succeed himself as President of the T. O. C. C. Nomination without opposition is equivalent to election.

The following slate was also nominated at the March 4 meeting, to be voted on, two weeks hence:

For first vice-president — Charles Steiner. For second vice-president — Joseph Jame and Rudolph Sanders. For secretary — Samuel A. Moross. For treasurer — Sam Schwartz. For sergeant-at-arms — Al Friedlander.

Board of Directors (nine to be elected) — Sol Raives, Leon Rosenblach, Bernard Edelhertz, Hyman Rachmil, Lee A. Ochs, I. Gainsboro, William A. Landau, Sol Brill, John Manheimer, A. H. Schwartz, Sam Sonin, Charles Moses, Joseph Stern, and J. Arthur Hirsch.

Finance Committee (three to be elected) — Harry Brandt, E. R. Behrend, Bernard Grob, Morris Needles, and Herman Pollak.

At the Chamber meeting this week, it was decided to co-operate actively in aiding the Jefferson Memorial Fund by giving morning matinee performances for children in thirty key theatres of the city. Raising of the fund to buy the Jefferson home, Monticello, near Charlottesville, Va., as a national shrine has been furthered by the purchase of "mileage tickets" by those of the public who wished to take a pilgrimage in spirit to Monticello. These "spirit mileage tickets" will be redeemed by member theatres of the T. O. C. C. the week of March 12 in observance of Jefferson's birthday, March 13.

The annual installation dinner will be held in April. The exact date will be announced later.

Ontario Gathering Urges Tax Remission

Representatives of many municipalities of Ontario gathered at Toronto on February 26 for a special conference, when it was decided to wait upon the Provincial Government with a request that a share of the Provincial Amusement Tax be remitted to the cities and towns each year by the Government. It is not expected that the civic representatives will gain their point, however, as the Provincial Treasury showed quite a deficit for 1923.

First National Club Holds Leap Year Dance

Five hundred attended the Leap Year Dance of the First National Club held February 29, at the Hotel Astor, New York. The affair brought out practically every official of the company and almost the entire office personnel.

George Bilson is president of the club.

Informal Conference Considers Taxation of Eastman Theatre at Rochester

THE COMPREHENSIVE program for the enrichment of community culture and education by the fostering of musical interests through the Eastman Theater and School of Music was unfolded in detail on Friday, February 29, by George Eastman at an infomal conference of the State Tax Commission convened to consider whether the theater should be taxed.

The conference was held in the office of Charles L. Pierce, corporation counsel, and for nearly two hours Mr. Eastman discussed the ideas he entertains in the promotion of musical interests in Rochester, which have led him to make a gift of the magnificent theater and school to the people of the city, representing an expenditure of more than $5,000,000.

annually in taxes or otherwise, above its present expenses, Mr. Eastman said. At the conclusion of the hearing Attorney James L. Brewer, representing labor interests, who want the theater put on the tax rolls, filed a brief and series of legal decisions bearing on the matter

Rental of the theater to commercial interests would be a possibility if the University of Rochester, owner of theater, was required to pay from $40,000 to $60,000

Mark Graves, head of the State Tax Commission, promised an early decision.

He declared the Commission has no arbitrary power to compel taxation of the theater and can act only in an advisory capacity. Nothing in the attitude of the commission indicated that it believed special privilege has been afforded Mr. Eastman by the exemption of the costly gifts he has made to the people of Rochester, as is raised in the argument of Mr. Brewer.

Present at the conference were Coporation Counsel Pierce, George S. Taylor, chairman of the board of assessors; James Mangan, of the Rochester office of State Tax Commission; Eugene Chrystal, assistant to the president of the Eastman Kodak Company; Hiram L. Davis, city assessor, and several others

"The theater to date has just been able to come out even and pay the orchestra," said Mr. Eastman. "It is earning more this year than during its first year of operation, but the cost of the orchestra has gone up about $1,000 a week. The university has no funds to meet a debt incurred by taxation," Mr. Eastman declared.

Texas To Get Lower Rates Of Insurance

AT A MEETING of the M. P. T. O. of Texas, held at Dallas last week, business was transacted that will result in lowering rates on fire insurance; will provide for coverage of liability—employer and public—and other forms of interest to the exhibitor.

About $3,000 of annual revenue is assured from slide contracts, on the basis of slide reports received by the slide agents. Reports were read from the committee of ten reporting developments in the admission tax repeal and a move to amend the copyright law so as to remove the music tax fee.

Kansas Protests Against Cyclone Picture

Protests against continued showing of the film, "Flying Finance" are being filed with Will Hays, director of motion picture industry, by members of Kansas commercial clubs because the picture shows a storm in an imaginary town called, "Cyclone Center, Kansas."

W. E. Holmes, secretary of the Wichita, Kan., Chamber of Commerce, in a letter to Mr. Hays, quoted government statistics to show that tornadoes occur less frequently in Kansas than in many other states of the Union. He said that he had information that while "Flying Finance" was being filmed that the wind blew seventy miles an hour a short distance from Hollywood, Calif., blowing the home of a fireman down flat.

Suit Reveals $1,426,000 As "Knighthood" Cost

An award of $2,000 to Jose Rubens against the International Film Corp. by City Court Justice Walsh during the week revealed the fact that "When Knighthood Was In Flower" cost $1,426,000.

Rubens sued on a contract by which he was engaged for four weeks at $500 a week.

Director George E. Baker is also suing International for $14,000, which he alleges is due him under a contract signed by William R. Hearst. He claims $7,666 for twenty-three days extra work due him for each of the films, "Heliotrope" and "Buried Treasure," $1,333 for work on script not included in the contract and $4,000 due on proxies.

Buffalo Board Starts Crusade Against Bicyclers

Sydney Samson, president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo, announces that the switchers and bicyclers are becoming very active again all over the territory and that the board is about to take decisive action to suppress this evil. It is reported that a detective agency's service have been engaged. Mr. Samson says that the Board will have the cooperation of the members of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc.

Mr. Samson has been appointed a delegate from the local board to the meeting of the Cleveland organization to exchange ideas.

Exhibitors Discuss Print Situation

Reply to M. P. News Questionnaire

RESPONSES to MOTION PICTURE NEWS' questionnaire on the print situation are pouring in from exhibitors throughout the country. They give first-hand information, from the theatre viewpoint, as to the real status of the Print Problem in the small house, which is, of course, the place to find out whether prints are good, bad or indifferent.

In order to make the information sought readily accessible, detailed questions were asked. They follow:

1. Would you be willing to pay more for your pictures if you could get better prints?

2. Suppose you were offered two grades of prints, one new and the other commercial, the former at, say, five dollars more than the latter, which would you select?

3. Has the condition of prints on the average improved within the last year or so?

4. Do you find that the conditions of the prints on good pictures is apt to be worse than on a poor feature?

5. How long after release date do you figure a print on a popular picture will remain in good condition?

6. Do you sometimes pass up purchasing a production because you fear that you will not be able to secure a print in good enough condition to put on a satisfactory show?

7. Do you find your exchange holding back playdates for some unexplained reason and do you think it is because they do not have prints enough to serve all their customers at the time each theatre desires to play the picture?

8. (A) Do you think poor prints are detrimental to the attendance at your theatre? (B) Do your patrons complain about "rain," unsteady projection and pull-aparts?

9. Do you try to improve the condition of film before running it, by careful inspection?

Replies are Varied

In response to the first question, about fifty per cent of the exhibitors replying declare they would be willing to pay more for better prints. Of the other fifty per cent, the answer is generally a flat "No," but it is sometimes qualified by "small town exhibitors cannot pay more, but good prints would help business."

On the second question, the higher-priced better print vs. the commercial, the averages are, of course, about the same. That so large a percentage of exhibitors would be willing to pay more is the surprise brought out by the questionnaire and stresses the importance they attach to the physical condition of the picture as related to box-office receipts.

As to possible improvements in prints within the last year, about seventy per cent of the replies give an affirmative answer. The remaining thirty per cent say "No," or report "very little," "doubtful," "improving slowly," etc.

Question Four results in about an even division of opinion between exhibitors who find that the print condition of a good picture is worse than a poor feature. One exhibitor, in replying, declares that he has "cut out those distributors who do not give me good prints as a rule," while others point out that the inferior condition of the good picture is due to its popularity.

Life of Print Puzzles

A variety of answers is given to Question Five which concerns the life of a print on a popular picture, which is certainly one of the most important problems raised by the Questionnaire. The replies range all the way from two months, which is the average, to six. Some exhibitors say: "Ask the exchanges."

By a two to one majority, exhibitors, in replies thus far received, declare they often refuse to book a picture if they have doubts about being able to secure a print that will be satisfactory. This, again, stresses the fact that the condition of prints not only has a direct bearing on bookings but also is deemed of first importance by the theatre in relation to box-office success.

So that, while exhibitors, in the larger percentage appears to believe that print conditions have improved within the last few years, they indicate clearly enough in response to Question Six that they consider the situation far from ideal.

On the subjects of playdates as controlled by the number of prints available, an overwhelming majority of exhibitors declare they have experienced the holding back of dates by the exchange, and the reason they assign is the lack of prints. Evidently, this is a familiar fact to the small-town house and it gives great impetus to the argument now heard in many quarters that a larger number of prints should be issued, on good pictures, so that theatres may be enabled to play them when their patrons most desire to see them, and particularly before the effect of key city exploitation has worn off.

That poor prints are detrimental to theatre attendance and lead to complaints from patrons there is unanimous testimony in exhibitor answers to the questionnaire.

Finally, Question Nine reveals that by far the largest percentage of theatre men inspect the condition of film before they put on their shows. This indicates that exchange inspection is not yet all it should be.

Further replies to the Print Questionnaire will appear next week. Exhibitors who have not yet responded are urged to do so, thus aiding a campaign which MOTION PICTURE NEWS believes is of vital importance to the whole industry.

The questionnaires will be tabulated in a convenient form that will make comparisons possible at a glance.

S. Carolina Considering Tax Revision Bill

THE SOUTH CAROLINA Legislature now has a bill before it to amend the statewide ten per cent admission tax law to exempt those houses located in any unincorporated industrial or manufacturing community from the tax.

Loew Directors Declare Quarterly Dividend

A QUARTERLY dividend of fifty cents per share on Loew's Incorporated stock, to be paid March 31, to stockholders of record March 15, was declared following a meeting of the board of directors Monday, March 3.

Harry Davis Enters Suit Against T. O. D. C.

Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, a vice-president of the M.P.T.O.A., and one of the organizers of the Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation, announced last week that his attorney had filed an application for a receiver against the T.O.D.C. with a claim of $6,400.

Mr. Davis declared he had entered suit because he had made demands on officials of the T.O.D.C. for return of his money without satisfaction. At a reorganization meeting held recently, Glenn Harper of Los Angeles was elected to the T.O.D.C. Board to replace Mr. Davis, who was dropped from the personnel of the corporation.

Sydney S. Cohen was elected President in place of W. A. True, the latter becoming chairman of the board of directors and treasurer, replacing Mr. Cohen. Carl Anderson was elected vice-president in place of Mr. Davis and R. F. Woodhull was named secretary.

In commenting on Mr. Davis' action, Mr. Cohen said: "This action is a surprise to all concerned in view of the fact that the corporation is in splendid shape and in a formative period where it is moving along the lines that brought about its formation. The company has no outstanding indebtedness except advances made by the directors."

Carl Anderson declared the corporation owned no money except "a loan made by Harry Davis and some of the other directors. He was dropped from the board because of his arbitrary manner and we look upon this action merely as a reprisal."

Brandt Off To Organize Coast Independents

JOE BRANDT is bound for the coast in the interest of C. B. C. Film Sales Corp., of which he is president, and the Independent Picture Producers and Distributors, of which he is vice-president.

In co-operation with Ben Wilson, William Steiner, Morris B. Schlank and Harry Cohn, Mr. Brandt will call a meeting of the independents on the coast to line them up in the new organization. It is the intention to establish an office of the organization in Los Angeles to work directly with the main office in New York.

Censor Repeal Bill Fight Due Soon

Will Pass Senate Within Week and Real Fight Will Be Staged in Assembly

WITH the final session of the New York State Legislature definitely set for either April 4 or April 11, the bill calling for the repeal of the motion picture censorship law will be reported out of committee on the Senate side within the next week or ten days, and after passage in the upper house, will go at once to the Assembly, where the battle will be staged. This much has been practically settled upon. The Walker bill, known as the "administration bill," will be given so-called preference over the Hackenburg bill, introduced in the lower house, and identical in its wording.

The bill which was introduced some time ago making provision for the admittance of unaccompanied children and which has undergone certain changes, is to be further amended to the end that the measure will become almost totally one of local option. It will be reintroduced in its amended form during the next few days. Samuel Berman, secretary of the New York State M. P. T. O., was in Albany the past week, and conferred with a number of the legislators in reference to the changes. It is now proposed to leave the question of age with each city. For instance, Buffalo, through its common council, might pass an ordinance making the age from 8 to 16 years, when unaccompanied children would be admitted to the motion picture theatres of that city under conditions described in the bill. Again, on the other hand, Rochester, through its governing body, might fix the age range in that city as being from 10 to 16 years. No opposition is expected to the bill once it is introduced in its final form, and reported out of committee.

Indiana Indorsers Plan Big Meeting

The Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays are arranging for a speaker of national note and a pre-release showing of one of the bigger pictures at their annual convention at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, April 3 and 4. A luncheon will be given at the Claypool April 4.

Mrs. Bloomfield Moore, 289 Burgess Ave., Indianapolis, is corresponding secretary of the indorsers. The indorsers are opposed to censorship, believing indorsement of good pictures in lists sent to newspapers and women's clubs and ignoring of bad will accomplish more for better films.

Would Ban Scene Scoffing At Prohibition

The Indiana League of Women Voters board of directors has adopted a resolution favoring the elimination of scenes from movies and lines from vaudeville and legitimate theatrical productions tending to scoff at prohibition.

Exchange Manager Lays Blame for Bad Prints on Exhibitors

"AN EXCHANGE manager who has some faults, but ruining prints is not one of them," has sent a communication to Motion Picture News. Discussing the Print situation from the viewpoint of the exchange man, and addressing his remarks to exhibitors, he writes:

"Brother, have you given this any serious thought? We are all human, and prone to pass the buck. How much of the trouble rests with you? None, you say? Good. You are one in one thousand.

"How much do you know about your own projector? You say you pay an operator to look after that. All right, we pay inspectors to examine the prints after you have used them, but just as long as the human element enters into the thing there will be mistakes, and sometimes a tendency to lay down on the job.

"The fault is always with the exchange, because I have never known an operator or an exhibitor who would admit they ruined a print. Get This: The exchange does not run the pictures. The theaters run them. The exchange supplies them; so if the films are damaged, some machine did it. We realize that films can't last forever, but I have known Prints to be returned to the exchange after only three bookings, absolutely ruined.

"We know the fault lies in one of the three theaters, but unless the print is returned after each booking, we can't place the blame, because each of the three will pass the buck to the other.

"We do not dare circuit a print. How much trouble did you have in the old days of the lock system. Very little. Why? Because you thought some of the fellow who followed you, and he thought of you. In those days prints were out on circuit as long as four weeks.

"The 2,000-foot reel is the worst factor that the exchange has ever had to deal with. In nine cases out of ten, the sprocket holes are sprained by the teeth pulling the weight of the extra reel. You may not notice it, but the inspection shows it. The tension on your take-up must of necessity be tightened to take up the extra pull, and the strain on the first 400 feet is bound to strain the sprocket holes. Result: The next fellow hollers 'Rotten Print!' and according to you the exchange is at fault.

"If you had a new suit of clothes and your brother wore them until they were no longer of any use, you would know he did it, not you. That is our case, exactly. We have new clothes, but the brothers wear them out. But the hell of it is, the brothers say we wear them out ourselves, and being a brother, we don't dare call him a liar.

"The exchanges do not run pictures, therefore if any damage is done it must be done by exhibitors. Learn some more about your projectors, and stop passing the buck to the exchanges. They try to repair the damage you do.

"Sounds like a lot of children: 'No, mother, Johnny did it,' and Johnny, who is me, gets the spanking."

Storage Licenses Revoked in 1600 Broadway

THE New York City Fire Department has notified the film concerns in the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, that licenses to store more than the customary five reels of film in an office building have been revoked. The letter of the law will in future be strictly followed, the companies were told.

Effort to have the restriction lifted will be made by the film concerns, which include Universal, Pathe, Warner Brothers, C. B. C. and Apollo.

Suits Are Filed Against Detroit M. P. Corp.

Denials are being made of insolvency by the Detroit M. P. Corp., despite two suits filed and rumors against the concern. Kenneth Harlan has filed a suit in the amount of $1,041.29 alleged to be due as wages and traveling expenses in the production of "Mary."

The Englander Company has also filed a suit for $270 for an auto top alleged to have been furnished the company during the filming of "Mary."

The company was organized in Detroit in 1922. Thomas G. Baillie, a former associate of Governor Alex J. Grosbeck is said to have represented the company before the Michigan Securities Commission, which authorized the sale of stock.

Bridgeport Manager Dies After Operation

Warde Johnstone, formerly manager of the Palace Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., died at the Stearns Hospital, New York February 28, following an operation for stomach trouble.

Mr. Johnstone had been an executive associate to S. Z. Poli theatrical magnate, in connection with his chain of moving picture houses throughout New England. He became manager of Polis' Palace Theatre at the time of its opening and was director of the orchestra, an organization of Mr. Johnstone's own selection.

Mr. Johnstone was 50 years of age and is survived by his widow.

Goerz Meets Price Quoted By Eastman on Stock

Goerz is prepared to meet the price on raw film stock offered by the Eastman Company, according to announcement made by Ferdinand Schurman, vice-president of the Fish-Schurman Corp., American distributors for Goerz.

The company is ready to sell perforated raw stock at 1.50 cents a foot and negative perforated at 3.50 cents a foot. The figure on the positive meets that quoted by the Eastman Company. Contentions have been made that importers of foreign raw stock would be unable to compete with Eastman in the sale of positive stock.

Sunday License Revoked at Baltimore Theatre

A license for motion pictures and religious services on Sunday nights at the New Theatre, Baltimore, has been revoked by the Baltimore Police Commissioner. A police inspector reported to the commissioner that the services had no religious quality and, presumably, were a means of making money.

Why Not a Short Subject Theatre?

By Earl W. Hammons

EDITOR'S note—The all-short subject program in various high class theatres that have been presented from time to time with unfailing success suggests that a theatre, especially in the larger cities, devoted exclusively to short subject programs, might make quite as [illegible] a hit.

At the request of Motion Picture News, E. W. Hammons, president of the Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in the following article, discusses the merits of the idea.

THERE is a vast amount of potential box-office business in every large city in the country — business which cannot be successfully bid for by the usual type of motion picture theatre — waiting for the wide awake showman who will establish under the right conditions a theatre to run Short Subjects programs exclusively.

The Short Subjects program so far has been more or less of a hit-or-miss experiment, with occasionally such theatres as the Capitol in New York running such a program as a novelty. Where the program has been well chosen and exploited with any degree of real showmanship, this program has almost invariably proved successful. But it has seldom been treated as anything except an experiment.

Why not have a Short Subjects theatre — sort of informal "drop-in" kind of theatre — in the heart of every big city, where those who like variety can always count on finding it?

The News in last week's issue printed in its very interesting survey of the public attitude toward different types of picture programs a report from the postmaster of Philadelphia. "I wouldn't go four blocks to see the so-called super-special," he said, "but I would walk a mile to see a good comedy and a news reel."

To Increase Patronage

Now, every thinking exhibitor knows that there are still millions of people in this country who can and should be made regular motion picture patrons. The Philadelphia postmaster represents a large part of this potential patronage. And he represents a group of the public that could be won in no better way than through the exhibition of Short Subjects programs, handled properly by a real showman.

There can be no hit-or-miss tactics in the establishment of the Short Subjects theatre. Every step in its planning and in its progress must be taken deliberately and carefully. First of all, its location is a most important consideration. The size and physical arrangements of the house are vital. And, of course, the program and the method of advertising and exploitation must be such as to make a definite appeal to a big patronage.

In the shopping district of the average large city, there are each day thousands of people who would be glad of an opportunity to step into a motion picture theatre for half an hour or an hour if they were sure of being able to see one or two complete pictures in that time. When the important shopping street also happens to be the street of greatest transient activity, this would be the ideal location. In Chicago the logical place to establish such a theatre would seem, therefore, to be State Street. But in New York there can be no doubt that Broadway in the neighborhood of Times Square offers advantages far greater than any other location in the city.

The house should preferably be a little theatre, more nearly like the Cameo Theatre than any other well known theatre in New York. And the seating and general physical arrangements should be such as to permit entrance and exit with the least possible confusion. For the Short Subjects theatre would make a big appeal through the fact that a patron could "drop in" at any time, stay as long or as short a period as desired, and depart with his money's worth of entertainment, and the result undoubtedly would be a steady flow of patrons coming and going throughout the hours of this continuous performance. Quick turnover, a maximum number of patrons with a minimum number of seats.

Suggests Program

As to the program, it should by all means be jazzy — not cheap or containing anything which could give offense to the higher type of patron, but snappy, fast moving and ever changing in type of entertainment. The music should be as good as could be afforded, for a good orchestra could add a great deal to the zest and snap of the entertainment, especially with the comedies which would form a large part of the program. With the orchestra as with everything else in connection with this theatre the first consideration should be quality rather than quantity. As the auditorium would be small, the orchestra could be limited in number, but the musicians should be the best obtainable and the selection of instruments should be made carefully, with plenty of thought given to sound effects for the comedy and novelty pictures.

An occasional musical selection might be offered in the nature of an overture, but it should be popular music rather than the extreme "classical" type, unless this could be treated as Dr. Riesenfeld offers his famous "classical jazz."

As we have intimated, comedy would form a large part of the program, but the program should always be carefully "balanced," so that two broad comedies would never be shown in succession. The Short Subjects theatre would be the Vaudeville Theatre of the Screen, and many of the principles of vaudeville presentation could be followed to good advantage. Another important unit of the bill would be the newsreel, which might be divided into two or three sections and interspersed through the program. News of one character, as for example all pictures of sporting events, might be shown at one time, while at another point in the program the interesting personalities in the current news would follow, etc.

It would be well for each program to include a dramatic subject or some other subject of serious nature, as well as some scenic beauty. There are many such pictures to select from, such as our own Wilderness Tales (the outdoor dramas by Robert C. Bruce), and several other series of one and two-reel pictures now being released.

For Distinctive Advertising

The advertising done by this theatre would be radically different from the usual type of picture theatre advertising. There should be a steady campaign of advertising on the theatre itself, pointing out its many special appeals, for which copy and layouts could be prepared that would make a strong appeal. The advertising of the program could be handled separately. Here again the lesson of vaudeville comes to mind. Every unit on the program should be advertised. The strongest item on the bill would naturally be given first place — made a head-liner — but every other picture and every musical selection should be described sufficiently to carry its own special appeal.

The price of admission could and should be much below the average downtown theatre price. The Short Subjects Theatre would not have to be a first run house, and the fact that any unit on the program had previously been run at an ordinary first run theatre would make little difference, certainly not enough to make up for the lower film rental. The cost of the show would be far below the first run ordinary program rental; rent would be lower because of the smaller size of the theatre; the staff would be small, and in general the overhead would be at a minimum, except in advertising, upon which the success of the house would depend to a considerable extent and which, therefore, should not be slighted. The admission price need not be more than the ordinary neighborhood admission, and might even be lower. An admission varying from fifteen to thirty cents depending on the city, location and other circumstances, probably would show a handsome profit.

Kunsky Plans New Detroit Theatre

Investment of $2,000,000 Said to be Involved in Deal for Fourth House

JOHN H. Kunsky of Detroit, is to have another large theatre.

Negotiations were completed and leases signed, February 25th, covering one of the largest plots of downtown property in the Motor City, which will give Kunsky a fourth large house in which to accommodate his extensive picture bookings.

Already operating the Capitol, capacity 4,250, Madison, capacity 2,350 and Adams, 1,950, besides several large residential houses, as well as other theatres in Detroit, the new theatre completes a string of downtown holdings which more firmly than ever place Kunsky in the foremost ranks of Detroit theatre operators.

The new house, as yet unnamed, will occupy a site within a stone's throw of the other Kunsky houses about Grand Circus Park, the new business center of Detroit, and will seat more than 3,500. The investment amounts to better than $2,000,000.

Negotiations were successfully completed for the huge realty deal by Mr. Kunsky's associate, George W. Trendle, acting for Kunsky.

With a frontage of 110 feet on Woodward, the town's main thorofare, and 400 feet on Elizabeth St., there will be built, in addition to the theatre itself, a modern office building with stores and shops occupying the first two floors. The building will be eight stories high. Work will begin during the coming summer, notice having been given already to all tenants occupying the present buildings on the site.

The theatre will be built under the supervision of C. Howard Crane, constructor and architect of the Music Box, New York, and who has been recently selected to draw the plans for the new Theatre Guild, New York. Crane, a Detroit man, has drawn the plans for all the Kunsky houses in Detroit.

With the construction of the new house, Messrs. Kunsky and Trendle will be able to absorb for Detroit showing, the output of virtually every large producer, as well as having housing for first runs for the cream of the product of the independent producers.

Paramount Employees Start Club In Atlanta

All members of both the Paramount theatre and exchange departments in Atlanta are members of the new Paramount Club, permanent organization of which was perfected last week at their first Wednesday night meeting.

The following officers were elected: A. C. Cowles, president; O. L. Freeman, vice president; Mrs. J. N. Thomas, secretary; Mrs. A. K. Dunn, treasurer; Mrs. C. E. Lawrence, chairman entertainment committee; M. J. Mullins, chairman athletic committee; Mrs. V. J. Ray, chairman publicity committee; Ford Anderson, DeSalles Harrison, F. L. Metzler and F. F. Creswell, honorary members.

Business meetings will be held the first Wednesday in each month and social gatherings the fourth Wednesday night of each month. A dance was given last Wednesday night as the first social event.

Will Train Engineers By Motion Pictures

"Commerce," a commercial journal of Calcutta, in its issue of December 22, refers to the plan to train young Indian engineers by motion pictures. "The Bengal Association has found," it says, "the exhibition of motion pictures concerned with the cultivation of cotton, and other basic products, so successful, that it is planning a complete program for exhibiting motion pictures, giving details of manufacturing processes. This decision was the result of a persistent demand for rendering as much assistance as possible to young engineers in India, who have not had opportunities to observe foreign manufacturing methods."

Admission Tax Collections Show Increase of $5,000,000 For 7 Months' Period

TAXES on admissions to amusements took a big jump during the seven months' period ended January 31, according to figures made public last week by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. During the period July 1, 1923, to the January date mentioned, collections increased more than $5,000,000 over the corresponding period in 1922-23.

The month of January alone reached a total of $7,576,991, an increase of more than $500,000 over the month of December, 1923, when the total reached $7,047,876.

For the seven months' period the figures were $44,107,730, as compared with $38,593,465.

Analysis of these increases show that business at the box-office everywhere in the country was better in January than any time since June, 1921. The Government figures include, of course, all forms of amusements, but the bulk of the collections represent motion picture theaters, according to the generally accepted view.

Collections for the seating tax in January were 27,707 as compared with $37,035 for January, 1922.

Here are comparative figures on admission tax collections for the last few months, compared with corresponding months in 1922:

	1923	1922
October	$6,999,867	$5,396,461
November	6,849,212	5,484,790
December	7,047,876	6,825,249
	1924	1923
January	$7,576,991	$6,766,208

Famous Abandons Plan To Build In Indianapolis

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION has abandoned the project to build a million dollar movie theater in Monument place, Indianapolis, on the west half of the English Hotel site. Capital stock in the Market Circle Realty Company, holding corporation for the ninety-nine-year lease on the site for Famous Players has been purchased by a syndicate of local business men, of whom E. O. Hunter, architect, is the only one whose name was announced.

Hunter said a theater would not be built upon the ground, it being the syndicate's intention to remodel the hotel property into modern storeroom and office quarters.

23 Concerns Formed in N. Y. State in February

There were 23 motion picture companies incorporated in New York State during the month of February, these companies aggregating $485,500 in capitalization, as compared to 33 companies with a total capitalization of $1,617,000 formed and incorporated during the same month a year ago.

The past week brought the incorporation of the following motion picture companies in New York state: K. R. H. Amusement Corporation, capitalized at $50,000, and having as directors: George Goldberg, Jamaica; Francis L. Garfunkel, Matilda Singer, Brooklyn; 10th Street and Broadway Theatre Corporation, $1,000, Daniel G. Griffin, Eman Brooks, J. A. Gazpari, New York City; Spectacular Productions, Inc., $1,500, L. H. Allen, M. F. Beier, J. L. Hochman, New York City; B. P. Schulberg-Preferred, Inc., capitalization not stated, Freda Freeman, Brooklyn; Samuel Zierler, Woodmere; Benjamin P. Schulberg, Los Angeles, Calif.; Echo Motion Picture House, $12,000, S. Marrow, Y. Marrow, New York; Benjamin Eisenberg, Brooklyn; Los Angeles Playhouse, Inc., $1,000, Daniel G. Griffin, Eman Brooks, C. I. Johnson, New York City; Reel-Colors, Inc., $200,000, George A. Canalizo, Freeport; S. B. Godoy, A. L. Godoy, New York City; Dewhurst Films, Inc., capitalization not stated; O. L. Johnston, P. E. Cowan, C. W. McConaughty, New York City.

N. J. Exhibitor Loses "Little Old New York" Suit

Herman Wellenbrink, owner of the Wellenbrink Theatre, in Montclair, N. J., brought an action in the Chancery Court of New Jersey, for an injunction against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Cosmopolitan Corporation and Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, to restrain them from licensing the Clairidge Theatre, of Montclair, to show the picture "Little Old New York," on the ground that away back in 1922, Wellenbrink had made a contract for that picture with the Famous.

Vice-Chancellor Lewis vacated the preliminary restraining order and denied the plaintiff's motion for an injunction, on the ground that Wellenbrink had been guilty of inexcusable laches; that he had waited for over a year after he had received a notice of cancellation, and that it was too late at this time to apply for a temporary injunction.

Theatres Aid Radio Men in Music War

Kansas City M. P. T. O. Acts

FOLLOWING the action of the National Association of Broadcasters in Chicago last week, in which organization of all forces opposed to the music tax was urged, the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A. this week is combining strength with broadcasters in an effort to combat the tax.

The Kansas City Star, through August F. Seested, business manager, gave $60, double the amount of the largest contribution thus far, towards a fund to employ attorneys. The Star operates one of the largest sending stations in the Middle West and it is said on good authority that the music tax amounts to approximately $1,000 a year. There are about five other broadcasting stations in Kansas City, with which exhibitors will seek affiliation.

With music tax cases against Kansas City exhibitors still pending in Federal Court, Samuel Handy, attorney for the exhibitors, today made this statement:

"The fact that a member of the music tax society is seeking to withdraw from the organization, but cannot do so because it is bound by a bonafide contract, which the society points to, and all its interests assigned to the society, proves my contention in the case — that in suits against exhibitors the suit is not brought by the principal parties at interest, which is not in accord with federal statutes. That is the grounds upon which Missouri and Kansas exhibitors will wage their fight."

Chicago Exhibitors Invited

The Exhibitors Association of Chicago, at a general meeting scheduled for this week, was to consider the invitation which the National Association of Broadcasters has issued to motion picture theatre men, hotel men and ballroom proprietors to join with the Broadcasters in their fight on the music tax.

The association of broadcasters' plan of battle has developed two points of attack on the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' position. First: the refusal to pay for and play the copyrighted music of the Cociety, thereby depriving this music of the great popularizing publicity broadcasting would bring it; and, second, to secure a change in the copyright law which would end the practice of the Society from collecting, first, a royalty on sheet music, and then a royalty on broadcasting or playing for public entertainment of this music.

In order to furnish broadcasting stations, which do not use the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' music, with suitable instrumental and vocal numbers the Broadcasters Association has developed a working plan which is said to have provided radio stations with a plentiful supply of litigation proof, tax free, popular copyrighted music and the Broadcasters Association now plan to extend the services of this bureau to picture theatres and other purveyors of entertainment, upon whom the Society is levying tribute.

Many Scores Received

E. F. McDonald, Jr., president of the National Association of Broadcasters and president of the Zenith Edgewater Beach Hotel Broadcasting Station and Zenith Radio Laboratories, Chicago, stated that in the last year three thousand musical scores have been received by the bureau and approximately two hundred and fifty of these numbers accepted and released, tax free and litigation proof to its members.

All numbers offered the bureau are passed upon by a competent musical committee and only those accepted, which, in their opinion would please the public taste. An additional safe-guard to users of this music is the contract which owners of the copyright make whereby irrevocable public performing rights are conveyed to members of the Broadcasters Association. After these contracts are filed in the copyright office at Washington, the music is released to members, and even if a song thus released is sold to any member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the contract is still binding and members of the Association are still at liberty to play the music tax free.

In order to give motion picture theatres the advantage of the music privileges of the Broadcasters Association, a Class B associate membership has been formed and motion picture men are invited to become members, "writing their own ticket," as Mr. McDonald expressed it, their own organization fixing the membership fee they should pay. He also states that funds collected under this Class B membership will be used only by the Association of Broadcasters for the expense of maintaining and operating the music release bureau and for the purpose of conducting a nation-wide campaign for the amendment of the present copyright law.

Mr. McDonald made it plain that the Broadcasters propose to go ahead with the fight on the music tax, regardless whether others affected join in the battle or not, but pointed out the tremendous influence that the combined interests could make felt. He presented figures showing that one broadcasting station received over one hundred and seventy thousand letters in a period of fifteen days, indicating an audience of eight million, according to conservative advertising men's estimate.

To Organize Coast Branch Of I. M. P. D. A.

THE immediate organization of the independent producers and distributors on the West coast will be undertaken early in March, following the arrival in Los Angeles of Joe Brandt, Vice President of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, who left New York on Thursday on his semi-annual trip of inspection of the C. B. C. exchanges.

Plans for the meeting of the units on the coast were discussed at the monthly meeting of the Independent Association held at its new headquarters, 1650 Broadway, New York City, on February 28th, when President I. E. Chadwick assured Vice President Brandt of the fullest co-operation of the association's members on the coast for his mission, including Ben Wilson, Morris Schlank, William Steiner and Harry Cohn.

The membership of the association has been increased to twenty-five by the election of the following companies: Burr Pictures, Inc., New York; George M. Fecke, Boston; William Steiner Productions, New York. A new contract with the Hoy Reporting Service was approved as recommended by the Executive Committee.

Chicago Exhibitors Launch Membership Drive

THE EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION of Chicago is this week distributing membership slides and trailers to its members, and next week these announcements are expected to appear on the screens of more than two hundred Chicago houses.

Theatres are also printing announcement of their membership in the association on their programs. The regular monthly meeting of the Exhibitors' Association will be held on March 7. Among the matters which will be taken up at this meeting are the elimination of the music tax, the musicians' wage scale and working conditions, and other matters of equal importance. It was announced that this is the last meeting where theatre owners who are not members will be admitted.

Bridgeport Plaza Turns To Pictures

The Plaza Theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., will in future be devoted to pictures, a stock company having closed there last week. S. Z. Poli, owner of the house has appointed Louis Cohen manager. Popular priced pictures, with changes three times weekly have been announced.

Cleveland Fears Sunday Closing Enforcement

SHOW PEOPLE in Cleveland are concerned over Governor Vic Donahey's statement here Thursday, that he proposes to lend his influence to the enforcement of the law, according to the Commercial Times of Friday, February 29. The Times further went on to say that the Governor, while in Cleveland, indicated that he was not pleased with the failure of officials to enforce Sunday closing laws.

The enforcing of the Sunday closing laws finds no sympathy in Cleveland. Local motion picture exhibitors are not taking the Governor's statement as serious enough to openly combat. Theatrical interests of the State helped to elect Donahey. Nevertheless, the situation is being carefully watched by those interested in the continuance of Sunday amusements in Cleveland.

Women Vote For Diversified Program

Favor It Over the Super-Special

IT is an axiom in the show business that woman has the deciding voice in the fate of a picture or a play. If the picture appeals to women, it will be, nine times out of ten, a success. The reverse is just as true. It is also pretty generally accepted that woman more often than not compels or prevents the attendance of mere man at the picture theatre — as the case may be.

Woman's opinion on the super-special vs. the diversified program is, therefore, of the first importance. A survey conducted among women fans by MOTION PICTURE NEWS in representative cities shows these results:

PHILADELPHIA—In this city alone, the super-special won. Sixty per cent of women fans interviewed voted for the "big" picture; thirty per cent declared for the varied program; ten per cent non-committal. Representative opinions: "I far prefer the long production to the short, tragedy pictures that seem to creep into the programs of even the best picture houses. A good story with a good plot cannot be properly told in four or five reels. It must have a chance to expand and gather its force and beauty unrestrained by the number of feet of film into which it must be crowded."

The opposite view: "Give me the short, varied program, full of thrills, laughters, news and a little scenic beauty, and I go home refreshed and re-energized. The long picture generally drags, and I would seek it out very seldom as a form of entertainment."

ALBANY, N. Y.—Seventy per cent for the diversified program, with this opinion typical of the majority of women fans interviewed: "The diversified program, with a feature, news-reel and a comedy furnishes me with a complete evening's entertainment, and I prefer such program to so-called super-specials."

Of the thirty per cent who declared for the "long" picture, this view is representative: "Super-specials are like superior theatrical offerings, and have the same place, to my mind, in the motion picture field as best of the spoken drama in the theatrical field, and are not only necessary for the elevation of the picture world, but also for exceptional entertainment."

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sixty per cent for the varied program. Opinions gathered from shopgirls, housewives, college students, society girls, stenographers and clerks. Typical opinion: "No long pictures for me. I'll take a mixed program every time in preference to one of those tiresome whole-evening shows."

For the super-special: "The movies are unknown to me except for what you call a ten or twelve reeler. If there were more of them, far more people of my sort would be movie devotees instead of mockers. My children entice me to go to a program occassionally, but I am unusually disgusted with the slapstick comedy, the bathos of the drama and the falsity of the scenes of 'society.' I do like the news pictures and, I must confess, the animated cartoons."

TOLEDO, OHIO By a proportion of eight to two feminine fans in Toledo voted for the diversified program. Without exception, however, the majority declared that a few super-specials were exceptionally worth-while, and expressed the wish that the same high standard could be maintained in the shorter features.

ST. LOUIS—Sixty per cent for the varied program; forty per cent for "big" pictures with appropriate music. Opinions gathered from clubwomen, stenographers, telephone operators, school teachers, city employees.

BUFFALO The women and girl picture fans interviewed seemed to like the diversified program rather than the super specials, with a few exceptions.

Secretary: Personally, I prefer a big super-special such as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Covered Wagon," etc., to the ordinary program because the average bill is light and generally similar, while the big super-specials always offer entertainment.

Stenographer: My personal preference on feature shows is one that consists of an ordinary length feature, a good comedy and a news reel. A feature with a lot of action is more entertaining in my mind than one of the elaborate super-specials.

Girl clerk: I much prefer programs made up of a good five reel feature, a comedy and a new pictorial and scenic to the long and often long drawn out super-production. I think there is more entertainment to be found in the diversified program.

Girl fan: In my opinion a diversified program furnishes much more entertainment than elaborate productions. The latter are often depressing and very rarely leave you in a pleasant state of mind after the unreeling of their 10,000 to 12,000 feet of film.

Stenographer: I much prefer the big productions like "Scaramouche," "The Woman of Paris," and "The White Sister,' to programs made up of ordinary features, comedies and news reels. I never did like comedies or news films.

Girl office employe: I much prefer a good super-special to a diversified program, inasmuch as the latter is usually only mildly amusing and seems a waste of time. Whereas a good super-special usually teaches one something if only from an historical viewpoint.

Woman secretary: I enjoy a show much more when the bill consists of a diversified program such as a six-reel feature, a comedy and news reel or scenic rather than one long production. The longer features get so tiresome before they are finished that I lose my interest in them. Would much rather attend a show when I know there is going to be a diversified program.

A mother who is an ardent film fan: When I go to the theatre I usually take the children with me and my pleasure is much marred when I have to sit through a long production, first because I prefer the diversified program and secondly because the children become very restless when forced to sit through the extra long subjects. Variety is my idea in film entertainment.

Annual Convention Is Held by Ohio M.P.T.O.

WITH important exhibitor figures from other states present, the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio was held at the Hotel Chittenden, Columbus, Thursday and Friday of this week. President Martin G. Smith, of Toledo, presided.

After an address of welcome by Mayor Thomas of Columbus, business sessions engaged the attention of the delegates. The Music Tax situation was discussed by George P. Aarons, of Philadelphia, counsel for the Eastern Pennsylvania M. P. T. O., and Lawrence G. Collister, of Cleveland, State Senator and counsel for the Ohio organization. President Sydney S. Cohen, of the M. P. T. O. A., spoke on the repeal of the admission and seat taxes and the proposed amendment to the Copyright Law which would eliminate the Music Tax.

Other scheduled speakers were: C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization; Charles C. Perrin, of the Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange, Philadelphia; Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, of the Cleveland Cinema Club; M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the M. P. T. O. A., Public Service Committee and Gov. Donahey, of Ohio.

At the banquet on Thursday evening the speakers' list included Vernon M. Riegel, censor chief in Ohio; Lieut.-Gov. Earl D. Bloom; H. H. Griswold, Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives; Attorney-General Crabbe and Robert E. Welsh, editor of Moving Picture World.

A complete report of the convention will appear in next week's issue.

Reeland Wins Suit Over Robertson Cole

The Reeland Publishing Company, Inc., of New York City, in the New York State Supreme Court, Part XIII before Judge Hatting, obtained a verdict Monday of $40,334.00 with interest from the date of action, March, 1921, against Rufus S. Cole, John Robertson and Robertson Cole Company, 723 Seventh Ave., New York City for goods sold and delivered and breach of contract.

The Reeland Publishing Company was represented by the law firm of Leo Oppenheimer, and the Robertson Cole Company by Benjamin P. De Witt.

Col. Varner Opens New Theatre in Carolina

Colonel Henry B. Varner announces the auspicious opening of the new Palace Theatre, Thomasville, North Carolina, owned by the Thomasville Theatre Company, Inc. which took place on February 22nd. There were appropriate dedication exercises.

H. B. Varner is president, C. F. Finch vice-president and J. W. Prevo, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Prevo will manage the house

John Selig Dies at Home in Chicago

John Selig passed away last week at his home in Chicago. He was a brother of Colonel William Selig, and for a number of years was connected with the Colonel's motion picture company. Many Chicago film men attended the funeral to pay him final tribute

Why Not a Short Subject Theatre?

tainment would work in favor of the Short Subjects Theatre. There would be, first of all, unusual variety, so that anyone could always be sure of finding here some picture or pictures to his liking. Patrons could come and go at any time, and the low admission would send them away feeling they had received their money's worth even if they saw but one picture.

The supply of quality Short Subjects for such a theatre is assured. The Short Subjects produced during the last two or three years would have been adequate to its needs, and during the coming year, Short Subjects not only are certain to show a big improvement in entertainment and box-office value, but are sure also to increase in number, inspired by the sincere efforts now being made by leading feature producers to curtail the length of their productions to normal footage.

When Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., was organized several years ago to specialize in the distribution of Short Subjects, there were many who told me, "It can't be done." Of course, there will be many who will say to the Short Subjects Theatre plan, "It can't be done." There always will be those to say this to any proposal that is new and different. But it can be done. How long will it be before some wide awake showman comes forward in each large city to do it?

Weekly Fire Inspection For Charlotte

Following the destruction of the Charlotte Famous Players exchange by fire, heads of all Charlotte exchanges called upon the mayor of Charlotte last week to discuss in a frank manner the subject of fire prevention. The Paramount fire was the first in an exchange in Charlotte in eleven years, and it is felt that this in no manner should reflect upon the conditions with regard to fire prevention prevailing around Charlotte exchange buildings. There will, however, be a weekly inspection by the fire department, just as an extra precaution and a moral effect upon visitors and hangers-on.

Kokomo Ministers Advocate Six-Day Permits

A new scheme to force Sunday closing of photoplay theatres is being attempted by the Ministerial Association at Kokomo. The association presented to the city council an ordinance which would require theatres to take out licenses which would permit them to operate six days a week only.

Mayor James Brown indorsed the movement. Theatrical interests are vigorously opposing it.

Kentucky Exhibitors Will Fight New Bills

Representatives of more than one hundred Kentucky theatres have organized to fight general assembly bills which provide for the creation of a State board of censors and a ten per cent tax on all amusements.

Tom Russell of Maysville, J. B. Stout of Danville, E. J. Wiseman of Harrodsburg and W. R. Patti of Frankfort were named members of a legislative committee to represent the theatre owners at Frankfort.

In and Out of Town

J. B. CLINTON, prominent exhibitor of Duluth, Minn. was a Broadway visitor this week.

B. P. SCHULBERG, President of Preferred Pictures, left for the Coast on March 1. F. C. Munroe, President of Hodkinson Corporation, accompanied by Harry Richards, arrived from Los Angeles this week.

RAOUL WALSH will leave Los Angeles shortly to attend the premiere of the new Fairbanks picture, "The Thief of Bagdad," which Walsh directed. It will open at the Liberty Theatre, New York, March 17.

RALPH INCE, accompanied by Cameraman J. O. Taylor, has gone to Hollywood to direct a series of pictures.

JOHN D. TIPPETT arrived last week from London. Among recent departures for the Coast was J. D. Williams, of Ritz-Carlton.

E. M. ASHER, personal representative of Mack Sennett, has left for a conference with Mr. Sennett at the Coast.

LEE MARCUS, of F. B. O., has gone to the Bahamas for a vacation.

AND Charles S. Goetz, manager of the Dependable Exchange of New York and Buffalo, is leaving shortly for a vacation in Cuba.

SIDNEY GARRETT, of Inter-Globe Export Company, London, is in the city on a three weeks' visit.

CHARLES CHRISTIE left for the Coast March 1, after a visit of several weeks in New York. Jesse L. Lasky is due to return to Hollywood on March 20.

ARTHUR S. FRIEND has returned from a vacation spent at Palm Beach. George D. Baker, the director, is a recent arrival from Los Angeles.

HARRY ROWSON, of Ideal Films, London, is ill at his suite in the Astor Hotel. His condition was reported improved early this week.

JACK KEEGAN, Hodkinson exploiter, has returned from an eight weeks' trip in the Michigan territory.

REX INGRAM was expected to sail for home this week, according to advices received by Metro. "The Arab," which Ingram went to Africa to make six months ago, is finished.

PAUL EAGLER, has gone to Italy to join the camera staff engaged on "Ben Hur."

ANDREW J. COBE, veteran Broadway theatre manager, who was stricken several weeks ago while managing the Astor Theatre has recovered.

FRANK L. NEWMAN, of Kansas City and Milton H. Feld, of the Newman Theatres, were among the prominent visitors to the city this week.

Paramount Pep Club Has Annual Ball

The third annual ball of the Paramount Pep Club of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will be held this Friday evening, March 7, in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

Dancing will be continuous from 9:30 o'clock on, the dance music being furnished by Jay Cox's Society Orchestra.

At twelve o'clock sharp a special vaudeville show will be presented. Among the performers will be Ann Pennington and Brooke Johns, from the Ziegfeld Follies; the famous pianists, Zez Confrey, Victor Arden, Phil Ohman and Max Kortlander; Vincent Lopez, three big-time acts, supplied through the courtesy of the B. F. Keith office.

The general chairman of the ball is P. H. Stilson and the subcommittees are in charge of the following: Entertainment, Oscar Morgan, chairman; H. B. Franklin, honorary chairman; Roy Berrick, vice-chairman; Sidney Smith, stage manager; Reception, Lacey Johnson, chairman; Agnes Mengel and Tom Walsh, vice-chairmen; Finance, E. R. Short, chairman; Tickets, W. J. O'Connell, chairman; J. R. Wood, vice-chairman; Decorations, Mrs. Emma Peters, chairman; Programs, Miss Bert Wiener, chairman; J. A. Walsh, vice-chairman; Publicity, C. L. Gartner, chairman.

Mel Shauer is president of the Paramount Pep Club, which is now in the fifth year of its prosperous existence.

Topeka Negroes Boycott "Birth Of Nation"

Negroes of Topeka, Kan., who have been protesting against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Topeka have now decided to boycot a weekly negro newspaper published there because it carried advertising of "The Birth of a Nation" film.

The picture was barred from Kansas when it was first made and only a few months ago was it admitted to the state by the board of censors. It has been showing at various places in the state, but only recently has it shown in a city with a large negro population.

Blackboard Shows Paid Up Exhibitors

Signs not only sell pictures, but they sell exhibitors. At least, that is the theory upon which C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas, is working. In the M. P. T. O. K. headquarters, which is in the heart of Kansas City's film colony, is a huge blackboard, bearing the names of "paid up" exhibitors in the organization. More than 70 per cent of Kansas City exhibitors visit the headquarters daily while buying film. Before them is flaunted the names of members in good standing.

Indianapolis Musicians Strike Is Off

Dispute of the number of musicians to be employed at the Lincoln Square theatre, Indianapolis, which resulted in a strike of operators, musicians and stage employes at that theatre, the Manhattan, Gem, Irving, Lenwood and Gayety all of the Rembusch string, has been amicably settled and the strike called off.

Maryland Censor Body Makes Report

Only Three Films, Out of 5,473, Condemned in Toto, During Year Ending Sept. 30

ONLY three films out of 5,473 examined during the year ended September 30, 1923 were rejected in toto by the Maryland State Board of Censorship, according to its report recently presented to Governor Albert C. Ritchie.

Five films, the report says, were "found totally unfit for exhibition," but two of these were reconstructed and finally passed. Eliminations were ordered in 785 subjects. "Significant is the fact that the percentage of cuts shows a decrease amounting now to about one in seven, as against one in five films in former years," the report declares. A marked improvement in quality of films presented for censorship is noted in the report.

This is attributed to the work of the Hays organization, and if this "marked improvement in quality" were true of all producers there would be "no need for censorship," the Board indicates.

As to Federal regulation, the report declares: "Federal control of the films cannot affect the control exercised by the State over the subject that is within the police power of the Commonwealth." The Board holds that "the motion picture is a legitimate industry and as such should be fostered. It is a medium of education possessing boundless powers for good or ill."

The financial statement shows receipts of $46,938.01, of which $19,878.50 came from the State Treasury. Only $130.00 was collected in fines. About $25,000 was received in fees for censorship. Expenditures amounted to $19,892.93, of which $15,300.55 went for salaries and wages.

The right of appeal to Baltimore City Court from decisions of the Board has been retained in the act of 1922, but in no case have the exchanges or theatres appealed to the Court, from rulings of the Board. Many appeals from cuts ordered have been modified after being heard by the Board, sitting as an Appeal board of two or more members, in the presence of the applicant, pursuant to law. A few rejected films have been passed in amended form.

"Less friction with the exhibitors and distributors, has been encountered than heretofore. Such violation as has occurred were generally more due to negligence of employees, than to any intent to evade the law," says the report.

F. B. O. Selects Cast For "Fools In Dark"

Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller have been engaged as the starring team in F. B. O.'s new production "Fools in the Dark," work on which began at F. B. O.'s Hollywood studios on Monday, according to announcement by General Manager B. P. Fineman.

Al Santell will direct. Roland Asher will assist him and Pan Berman will complete the technical staff. Others in the cast are Charles Belcher, Bertram Grasby and Tom Wilson.

The story was written by B. C. Millhauser and the continuity prepared by John Grey.

Re-Issuing Tom Mix In "Pals In Blue"

Exclusive Features, Inc., are re-issuing Tom Mix in "Pals in Blue" on the State right market March 15th. Many well known players support him, among them Bessie Eyton, Bob Anderson, Al. Merrill, Eugenie Forde (Mrs. Tom Mix) and others, including a whole tribe of Indians from the Oklahoma reservation.

Pickford-Fairbanks Studio Now Being Rented

With Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks in New York preparing for premiere showings of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" and "The Thief of Bagdad," there has been no let-down in activities at their Hollywood studios.

Plans are now being made to allow several independent producing companies to operate the Pickford-Fairbanks studios on a rental basis, using all the equipment and facilities the studios afford. Already Frank Woods, formerly chief supervisor for Famous Players-Lasky, has begun work on a W. W. Hodkinson release. As yet the Woods' production is un-named. John G. Adolfi is directing and Dorothy Mackail is the star, with John Harron as her support. The story is an original by Mr. Woods who is a veteran photoplayright.

Arrow Serials Sold For Coast Territory

W. E. Shallenberger of Arrow, announces that Nat A. Magner of the American Film and Equipment Co., San Francisco, has just contracted for four of Arrow's Serials, "Santa Fe Trail," starring Neva Gerber, "The Fighting Skipper," starring Peggy O'Day and "The Blue Fox" and "Nan of the North" both starring Ann Little, for release in California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

"Damaged Hearts" is a Pilgrim Pictures production which will be distributed by F. B. O.

Eschmann Returning from Successful Tour

AFTER a tour of the country during which he visited the majority of First National exchange centers, E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution is en route to New York. Mr. Eschmann, having launched the successful First National month campaign, left New York eight weeks ago on his first extended tour since joining First National last July.

"Approximately five hundred new accounts were added to the First National list of exhibitors during First National month," writes Mr. Eschmann from the Coast, "and after an inspection of some of the 'First National 1924-20' here at the studio, I am confident that our newly made friends will be equally enthusiatic over our new group of pictures."

Gasnier Starts Casting On "Breath Of Scandal"

Gasnier begins this week the selection of players for the cast of his next Preferred Picture, "The Breath of Scandal," which will be put into production immediately at the Hollywood Studios. This story by Edwin Balmer received its first publication last year as a serial in Cosmopolitan Magazine and subsequently gained wide popularity in book form.

Samuel Goldwyn Talks on Publicity

Tells Wampas Members of Dangers in Inflating Salaries and Other Stories

BIG salary stories, salacious advertising and talk about million dollar productions must stop. This was the message given to the Western Motion Picture Advertisers at its meeting Monday evening by Samuel Goldwyn, the guest of honor.

Instead of devoting his entire address to telling the publicity purveyors that they were the brains of the industry, Mr. Goldwyn spoke of the pitfalls of thoughtless publicity and his sincerity won him one of the most enthusiastic ovations ever accorded a speaker before this body.

"We have heard much about the fallacy of advertising and exaggerating the salaries of persons employed in pictures, but we still find the papers full of 'million dollar this and million dollar that,'" said Mr. Goldwyn. "Never in the history of motion pictures have the advertising men of this business held such an important position as they do today. Never before have they found themselves in a more strategic position to render the industry a great service or a great harm.

"Stories about tremendous salaries must cease. A motion picture person receives a salary of $50,000.00 a year and it is heralded throughout the country and shouted from every house-top. It is nothing unusual for a bank executive to receive $75.000.00 or $100,000.00 a year — but we never hear anything about that. They would regard it silly as well as harmful to advertise their large salaries. We of the motion picture business must look at the situation in the same light. Nothing but resentment on the part of the public and unfavorable political and federal action can result from the untruths that are printed about salaries, in the motion picture business.

"Salacious advertising is another evil of motion picture advertising men. Things that never appear in a picture are made the basis of advertising campaigns. This is absolutely wrong and instances where the advertising is salacious, it embodies one of the most powerful practices the industry has ever been subjected to. There is absolutely no excuse for any man to put out salacious advertising. If I were a publicity man and my employer asked me to do this sort of thing I would absolutely refuse to do it.

"Publicity men have sold the motion picture industry to the public. They have paved the way to success. Let's appreciate this and let's do nothing that will harm the publicity man in this particularly vocation, or give ammunition to those who launch tirades against this industry.

"After Six Days" Sold In New Territories

Harry Grelle purchased Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, on Weiss Brothers ten-reel spectacle, "After Six Days" and the B. & W. Booking Office at Shelby, North Carolina, purchased North and South Carolina. Both of these territories are planning big openings and road-shows to follow.

The Epic Film Attractions of Chicago, who control the Northern Illinois and Indiana territory expect to open downtown at the Loop, sometime in March. Mr. Lalumiere in Canada, who controls the picture for the entire Dominion of Canada, has three copies working in Montreal alone, it is said.

World's Premiere Is Held on Bowery

Enthusiastic Audience Sees "Fools Highway" In Famous Atlantic Gardens

AN unusual picture premiere took place last week in the Atlantic Garden Theatre, 50 Bowery, New York City, when Universal presented its newest Jewel production, "Fools Highway," starring Mary Philbin in a screen adaptation of Owen Kildare's Bowery romance, "My Mamie Rose."

In selecting the Atlantic Garden Theatre, Universal picked a spot hallowed in the memory of the Bowery's old-timers. Standing today as an up-to-date moving picture theatre, it is built on the spot which thirty years ago — the time of Kildare's story — marked the Atlantic Gardens, the most famous music and beer garden in New York.

It was an invitation affair. Seated in the motion picture theatre were judges, State and City officials, politicians, newspapermen and hordes of others who remembered the Atlantic Gardens when the place was famous.

Included in this gathering were such persons as Senator James J. Walker, Judge Otto Rosalsky, Assemblyman Peter J. Hamill, Alderman Martin Tanahay, Judge Nolan, Judge Hoyer, Judge McCaffrey and Judge Raimo. Jesse Lasky, who used to sing in the Atlantic Gardens, was there, as was Sam Harris, theatrical producer.

The picture was preceded by songs and talks by persons who had appeared in the music hall years ago. Harry von Tilzer sang his world famous songs, "Take Me Back to New York Town," "Down Where the Wurtzburger Flows," "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie," etc. Maude Raymond sang several of the songs she made popular a generation ago. Maude Nugent, who wrote "Sweet Rosy O'Grady," led the audience in singing this heart-hymn of Irish-America. Then Charles Lawlor, the blind composer, swept the crowd with tears and memories with his famous ballad "The Sidewalks of New York."

Al Smith, New York's popular Governor, who was born and raised on the East Side, was expected, but his official duties kept him away. In his place, Senator Walker gave a rousing talk.

The spirit of the old Atlantic Gardens was maintained by a real Ladies' Orchestra, just as melodious, and garbed in the same quaint garments of 1890, and bevy of girl ushers, also costumed in the leg-of-mutton and similarly out-of-date clothes of the '90ties.

One of the most striking features of the premiere was the lobby decoration. The large lobby had been transformed into a veritable bar-room. A regular bar with all the trimmings and fixings, flaunting all the cheap drink signs of 1890, occupied one side of the lobby. A real old-time bar-tender drew Volstead beer from cool kegs, and dispensed pretzels and other free lunch to all comers.

Paul Gulick, director of publicity for Universal, staged the premiere. He was assisted by Donald Cobb and Paul Perez of the publicity staff. Joe Weil of the Universal exploitation department, arranged the unique lobby display, under Gulick's direction.

The picture was received with great applause, and heralded as a faithful reproduction of the famous New York thoroughfare and its denizens, as they existed thirty years ago.

Warners Purchase Rights To "Lost Lady"

Warner Brothers have purchased the motion picture rights to "A Lost Lady," from the pen of Willa Cather which has lately gone into its seventh edition. Final arrangements were consummated this week at the Warner home offices.

With this announcement comes another to the effect that the novel has been syndicated by the Bell Syndicating Company, installments starting March 1st, and to extend over a period of some nine months.

I. M. P. P. D. A. Seeks Support of Exchanges

The active support of three hundred manager-owner independent exchanges throughout the United States and Canada, has been solicited in behalf of the Independent M. P. P. and Distributors Association in a letter just sent out by I. E. Chadwick, President of the organization.

The state right operators and exchanges constitute one of the most important factors in the independent branch of the motion picture industry, and are to be encouraged in every possible way, President Chadwick declares, while advising that many managers have already volunteered their services in aiding in the establishment of the independent market upon a firm and sound foundation.

Goldwyn Buys Rights To "Mary The Third"

Goldwyn has purchased as a new vehicle for the directorial genius of King Vidor the motion picture rights to Rachel Crother's play, "Mary the Third," which scored a big success in New York last season.

Carey Wilson, assistant editorial director, is writing the continuity in close association wth Mr. Vidor. The script is being rushed and production will start soon. No announcement has yet been made as to the identity of any of the players.

Hamilton Is Completing "Killing Time."

Lloyd Hamilton is rapidly nearing completion on his next Educational-Hamilton comedy, "Killing Time," for release through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

Hamilton has surrounded himself with Dick Sutherland, "heavy" in comedy, Ruth Hiatt, leading lady in this and last year's series, and June Marlowe.

Buddy Messinger In Cast Of "Relativity"

Buddy Messinger has been added to the cast of Sophie Kerr's Saturday Evening Post story, "Relative Value," which is being filmed at Universal City, under the studio title of "Relativity."

Mae Murray Will Make "Circe" In Europe

Mae Murray is planning a trip to Europe, where important scenes for "Circe," her next picture for Metro, will be taken. With Miss Murray will go her husband, Robert Z. Leonard, who will direct the picture.

Because "Circe" is a story of Europe, written by Vincente Blasco Ibanez, most of the casting will probably be done over there in order to get more accurate types.

Miss Murray is planning a brief visit to New York in the near future, before departing for Europe. It is said she will buy all of her clothes for "Circe" in Paris.

New Washington Exchange Buys Arrow Product

W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film Corporation, has sold to the newly organized independent exchange in Washington, D. C. twelve Arrow Specials and twenty-six Arrow Westerns. The new firm is Trio Productions, Inc., and will be open for business on March 15th.

This new Exchange is made up of Messrs. Luchese and Neufeld of the DeLuxe Film Co., Amsterdam and Korson of the Masterpiece Film Corp. and the Marcus Brothers of the Twentieth Century Film Co., all prominent Philadelphia Exchange men.

Grand-Asher to Film Tarzan Story

Twenty Feature Productions and Many Two-reelers on Season's schedule

"TARZAN AND THE GOLDEN LION" one of the latest of Edgar Rice Burroughs' series of Tarzan stories, will be filmed at the Grand Studio for Grand-Asher, it is announced by General Manager Samuel Bischoff, following a conference with Samuel V. Grand, President.

"William S. Campbell, director of many animal pictures will direct this Tarzan story, and Elmo Lincoln, will play the title role. It will be a full-length feature. Further details of cast, starting date, and other plans have not yet been concluded."

Mr. Grand stated that his complete schedule for the coming season included twenty feature productions and fifty-two two-reel subjects.

R. William Neill, who has just completed shooting "Rose of the Ghetto" will, as previously announced, make four more Grand-Asher features, including "The First Violin," "The Furnace of Life," "Back of the Beyond" and "The Way of All Flesh."

Charles Swickard will direct four features for Swickard productions and all will bear the Grand-Asher trademark. The first, "San Francisco" is now in the making, and others will be announced shortly.

Ethel Clayton will star in four features directed by Travers Vale. These will be high grade society dramas.

With the Tarzan picture, this makes fourteen of the twenty features. Others will be announced from time to time.

Forty other short subjects are also to be made and there will be the Grand-Asher Laugh-o-Graphs directed by Geo. H. Kern, as well.

To clarify an erroneous impression, Mr. Grand states that there is no thought of moving the Grand-Asher studio to Boston or elsewhere away from Hollywood.

Grand-Asher have large interests in New England and naturally lean toward pictures involving the characteristic scenery and customs of their home. Thus the people of New England may reasonably expect to see considerable production activity in and around the Hub in the next few months and it is even possible that an auxilliary studio or at least a well-equipped lot will be established there.

Cast Selected For Ruth Roland Feature

The cast has been selected by director Tod Browning to support Ruth Roland in her initial feature production "Dollar Down," which is to be made at the F. B. O. Studios. This is the first of the Co-Artists Productions, an organization recently launched by Miss Roland and Mr. Browning.

The supporting cast includes Henry B. Walthall, Mayme Kelso, Roscoe Karns, Earl Schenck, Jane Mercer and Lloyd Whitlock.

"Dollar Down" was adapted for the screen by Fred Stowers. Errol Taggart will assist Browning in the direction.

Paramount Signs Marmont For "Enemy Sex"

Percy Marmont has been engaged by Paramount to play the leading male role opposite Betty Compson in James Cruze's production, "The Enemy Sex," which is an adaptation of a novel by Owen Johnson. The picture is being started this week at the West Coast studio.

Marmont's last work with Paramount was in George Melford's production, "The Light That Failed," in which he played the leading character, Dick Helder.

Paramount Managers Talk Problems

Four Day Conference of Theatre Heads May Result In Many New Policies

MATTERS of importance that will have a bearing on future policies in theatres controlled by Paramount were discussed at a four day conference during the week of district managers and managers of the more important of the Paramount houses. The conference was called by Harold B. Franklin, manager of the theatre department, at the Paramount offices in New York City.

The sessions which were held each afternoon starting Tuesday and continuing through Friday, were devoted largely to an informal discussion of problems confronting the managers. Evenings were devoted to the entertainment of the visitors, with a luncheon at the Astor on Wednesday, a dinner at the Commodore on Thursday and the Paramount ball at the Astor on Friday.

Among those who addressed the convention on different subjects were, Adolph Zukor, Harold B. Franklin, Claude Saunders, A. M. Botsford, Hugo Reisenfeld, F. B. Warren, M. Blumenstock, Lem Stewart and C. E. McCarthy.

All phases of theatre management were under discussion. The Tuesday afternoon session was devoted to the discussion of the buying of product, which included a review of the pictures bought during the past season, a discussion of future buying policy, the type of pictures not wanted, the handling of state right features, serials, short subjects, road show contracts and percentage vs. flat prices.

Under the head of booking the subjects under discussion were, present booking system, balancing of programs, protection, class of product for individual theatres, specific days for certain types of pictures, local rents charged for use of theatres, children's matinees, screen advertising, definite policies and change days and missouts.

Interesting and instructive talks were given at the Wednesday session on advertising in all of its different angles. A. M. Botsford discussed newspaper advertising, F. B. Warren, institutional advertising; Claude Saunders, exploitation; M. Blumenstock, miscellaneous house organs; Lem Stewart, screen and lobby; C. E. McCarthy, general advertising.

Under the head of general, the following subjects were considered: pass problem, summer policies, standardized uniforms, admissions increase for specials, effect of tax reduction on admission, leases and renewals, legislation, which included censorship, Sunday and taxation; policy during Lent, civic cooperation and radio.

Under the head of "presentation" the following subjects were discussed at the Friday session: music, lighting, presentation, music tax, projection and service.

Many of the problems will be decided by the individual theatre managers while others will be settled as definite policies for all houses. The sessions were voted the most helpful ever held at the Paramount home offices.

Universal Releases For March Announced

UNIVERSAL announces the release of one Jewel production and four five reel features during the month of March. This schedule is the equal of any month's output made available to exhibitors by Universal in many months.

The Jewel production for March is "Fools Highway," the new Mary Philbin picture. The features, in the order of their release, are "The Phantom Horseman," a Jack Hoxie picture; "Stolen Secrets," with Herbert Rawlinson; "The Night Message," a special written and directed by Perley Poore Sheehan, and "The Galloping Ace" another Hoxie picture.

Prints of all these pictures are now in the various Universal exchanges and can be pre-viewed by Universal's exhibitor patrons.

Schertzinger Does Score For "Dorothy Vernon"

Mary Pickford, who is in New York arranging for the premiere showing of her new photoplay, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," a screen version of Charles Major's romantic novel of the same title under the direction of Marshall Neilan, makes the announcement that the musical score for this picture has been written by Victor L. Schertzinger.

Mr. Schertzinger is one of the most versatile men in motion pictures, having directed many productions, and in addition having made an enviable reputation as musician and composer. Among his notable picture scores was that for "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."

Brush Visits New York On Way to Miami

Wm. B. Brush, studio owner of Miami, Fla. and producer the past year at the Hollywood Studios, arrived in New York City March 3rd. He will be here about a week and then with Elinor Fair, one of the '24 Wampus Baby Stars, go to Miami to film the under-water sequences of "The Water Babies," a screen adaptation of Charles Kingsley's story.

Vitagraph Will Syndicate "Captain Blood"

Vitagraph announces the purchase of newspaper serial rights to "Captain Blood" by Rafael Sabatini, which will be furnished without charge to newspapers throughout the United States and Canada. The novel will be cut to newspaper serial length before its release which will be probably in the early part of the summer.

The contract by which Vitagraph acquired the serial rights from Houghton, Mifflin & Company, of Boston, was consummated through Max Elser of New York City.

President Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph personally will supervise the making of this super-feature which will be directed by David Smith. The continuity is now in course of preparation by C. Graham Baker, editor-in-chief of Vitagraph. The production will be made at the Hollywood studios.

Clarence Badger To Direct Laurette Taylor

Clarence Badger has been engaged to direct Laurette Taylor in her third Metro picture, "One Night in Rome," taken from Miss Taylor's stage success, written for her by her husband J. Hartley Manners.

"One Night in Rome" follows "Happiness" the Metro picturization of another of her stage plays also from Mr. Manners' pen.

Mr. Badger is now busy with the direction of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," the Sawyer-Lubin production which Metro will release late this month. Miss Taylor is in New York, having returned for a rest from Hollywood several weeks after "Happiness" was completed. She will head back again within the next several days.

J. R. Bray Leaves For Trip To Europe

John R. Bray, President of Bray Production, Inc., sails for England on the SS. "Berengaria," March 8th.

While the duration of his stay abroad is uncertain Mr. Bray expects to remain on the other side at least six weeks, during which time he will purchase new material for the Bray Magazine and the Bray Nature Pictures. He will also arrange for the introduction of his latest invention, a novel and compact projector that is smaller than a desk telephone, which is designed to project motion picture film.

Hepworth Productions To Keep Book Title

Hepworth Productions has decided to stick to the book title of the Thomas Cobb story, "Mrs. Erricker's Reputation." It was originally intended to produce the picture under the title of "Speak No Evil."

Cecil M. Hepworth directed and produced the picture with a cast headed by Alma Taylor, among the most popular of the English stars. Others who have important roles are, Gerald Ames, Gwynne Herbert, James Carew and Eileen Dennes.

Hap Hadley Engaged For "Floodgates"

Alvin G. (Hap) Hadley has been engaged by Lowell Production Inc., to supervise and prepare art work for the exploitation and advertising of their production, "Floodgates" for release on the independent market. All art work and advertising work in the press book will be personally created by Mr. Hadley, it is said.

Metro Will Release Four This Month

THIS month will witness the release of four Metro pictures in this order: "Women Who Give," "Sherlock Jr.," "Don't Doubt Your Husband" and "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."

"Women Who Give" is released this week. This is the latest of the series of productions that Reginald Barker has been making under Metro-Louis B. Mayer auspices. It is taken from Sarah P. McLean Greene's novel, "Cape Cod Folks."

"Sherlock Jr.," will be released next week. This is Buster Keaton's third Metro feature length comedy. It was directed by Keaton himself from the story by Jean Havez, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman.

"Don't Doubt Your Husband" is Viola Dana's fifth Metro starring picture this season. It was written for her by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, and directed by Harry Beaumont.

"The Shooting of Dan McGrew" is a Sawyer-Lubin Production for Metro, a picturization of Robert W. Service's poem of the Yukon.

Tom Moore Signs For Lead In "Manhandled"

Tom Moore has been signed to play opposite Gloria Swanson in her next Paramount picture, "Manhandled," which will be put into production soon at the Famous Players Long Island studio under the direction of Allan Dwan. Moore was recently featured in Allan Dwan's production, "Big Brother," and since the completion of that picture has filled a stage engagement.

Lowell Productions Make Foreign Deal

John Lowell Russell announces that David P. Howells, Inc., who are handling the foreign rights on his latest production "Floodgates," have closed a contract with Mr. Ricci of the Argentine American Film Co., whereby that organization has acquired "Floodgates" for Argentine, Peru, Uraguay, Paraguay, Bolivia, Chile, and Equador.

Lloyd Completes Cast for "The Sea Hawk"

With his First National picture "The Sea Hawk," by Rafael Sabatini, half completed Frank Lloyd has added the last of the principal characters to the cast in selecting Wallace MacDonald to play the part of Peter Godolphin.

Colleen Moore Starts on "Perfect Flapper"

Production has been started on "The Perfect Flapper" which will be Colleen Moore's next picture for Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

"The Perfect Flapper" will be directed by John Francis Dillon, who was in charge during the filming of "Flaming Youth."

Harry H. Hoyt has prepared the screen adaptation. The story originally appeared in magazine form under the title "The Mouth of the Dragon." Jessie Henderson is the author.

Frank Mayo is playing the male lead, Sidney Chaplin is prominently cast and Mary Carr and Phyllis Haver have important roles.

"The Perfect Flapper" has been given a June release date by First National.

Two Paramount Productions Started During Week

Paramount's "The Guilty One," a Joseph Henabery production featuring Agnes Ayres was started during the week. This is an adaptation of the stage play of the same name by Michael Morton and Peter Traill, in which Pauline Frederick starred a year ago at the Selwyn Theatre, New York.

Victor Fleming started his new Paramount production, "The Code of the Sea," Thursday in San Francisco. Rod La Rocque and Jacqueline Logan head the list of featured players in this picturization of Byron Morgan's tale of the Lighthouse Service. Among the other players recently named for the cast are Maurice Flynn and George Faweett.

"His Forgotten Wife" New F. B. O. Title

Announcement is made from the Film Booking Offices studios in Hollywood, that the title of the third Palmer Photoplay Corporation production "Lost," has been changed to "His Forgotten Wife." It was directed by William Seiter.

Featured in the cast are Madge Bellamy, Warner Baxter, Maude Wagne, Hazel Keener, Tom Guise, Willis Marks and Eric Mayne. Will Lamber wrote the story and Del Andrews adapted it to the screen.

Mae Murray and Keaton Complete Features

Mae Murray has completed her third Metro picture for this season, "Mademoiselle Midnight" from the story by John Russell and Carl Harbaugh.

Buster Keaton has completed his third Metro feature length comedy, "Sherlock, Jr." and the combined forces of the titling, cutting and editing departments are now busy preparing it for release this month.

Fox Completes Program For Season

Finish of Final Series of Specials Concludes Twentieth Year of Production

COMPLETION of the final series of special pictures for 1923-24 by Fox Film Corporation brings to realization the most ambitious program in twenty years of production by that concern. A program consisting of twenty-four special productions and dozens of lesser pictures, together with features and comedies, has been completed. Without pause, the New York and West Coast studios launched into the 1924-25 program, which promises to be an even greater undertaking.

Among the notable productions most recently completed is "The Plunderer," from the story by Roy Norton. In the leading role is Frank Mayo, supported by such performers as Tom Santschi, Evelyn Brent, Peggy Shaw, James Mason, Edward Phillips and Dan Mason. This drama was directed by George Archainbaud, who filmed many of the scenes in an actual gold mine and in typical mining towns of the gold country. One scene shows the dynamiting of a huge reservoir, which releases a torrent of water upon a sleeping village in the lowlands.

In the list of final specials is "The Arizona Express," from the story by Lincoln J. Carter. This picture was directed by Thomas Buckingham. It is reported to contain more hair raising episodes than "The Eleventh Hour," which was Carter's masterpiece previously. The cast consists of Pauline Stark, Evelyn Brent, Harold Goodwin, David Butler, Anne Cornwall and other equally well known screen players.

"The Shadow of the East," also a George Archainbaud special, was adapted from the novel by E. M. Hull, author of "The Sheik." It is a story of oriental romance, with the mystic lure of the far east. In the cast are Frank Mayo, Mildred Harris, Norman Kerry, Bertram Grassby and Evelyn Brent.

"The Blizzard," is from the story by Selma Lagerlof, winner of the Nobel prize for literature. The National Board of Review was extravagant in its praise of this drama, describing at length the remarkable spectacle showing thousands of reindeer in terrifying stampede in the northern snow wastes. The production was directed by Mauritz Stiller. Mary Johnson has the leading role.

Paramount Makes Changes In S. F. Staff

Arthur Pickett, formerly Paramount exploiteer in the Pacific Coast territory, has joined the sales department of the San Francisco Paramount exchange. He has been succeeded as exploitation representative by Harry C. Eagles, who formerly was stationed at Seattle.

Douglas MacLean Starts "Never Say Die"

To Investigate Small Town Exhibitor Needs

GOLDWYN-Cosmopolitan is going to find out from first hand knowledge just what are the problems and needs of the exhibitor in small towns and of the small theatres in large towns. Future exhibitor aids will be affected by the information gathered through this investigation.

New York State has been selected as the experimental field where the needs of the small exhibitor will first be looked into. Every town of 1,000 population and more will be visited and the exhibitors interviewed. The information gathered will be co-ordinated and submitted to the sales department which will work out from it an innovation in exhibitor service.

A six weeks' intensive tour of New York State was begun in Buffalo this week by Eddie Bonns, special sales representative.

"Along Came Ruth" Next For Viola Dana

When Viola Dana completes her present Metro starring picture, "Don't Doubt Your Husband" by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, her last for this season, she will find a new story awaiting her — also a director and a cast all ready for beginning her series of pictures for Metro's next season.

Metro has announced the purchase of "Along Came Ruth" for Miss Dana. This was Ruth Chatterton's stage success a season or so ago produced in New York by Henry Savage. Winifred Dunn has already begun on the adaptation.

Eddie Cline will direct. The cast consists of Walter Hiers, Raymond McKee, Tully Marshall, Victor Potel, Nelson McDowell, Dewitt Jennings, Adele Farrington and Brenda Lane.

"Monsieur Beaucaire" Cast Is Augmented

Ian MacLaren, now playing the Archbishop in the Theatre Guild production of Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," has been selected to play the role of the Duke of Winterset in "Monsieur Beaucaire," Rudolph Valentino's new Paramount picture, now in production at the Famous Players Long Island studio.

Other players recently selected for parts in the English sequence are Templar Powell, who will have the part of Molyneux, and H. Cooper-Cliffe, who will play Beau Nash.

Arrow Completes Deals For "Days of 49"

Arrow has completed a number of deals for its new chapter play, "Days of '49." Frank Zambreno of the Progress Company, Chicago, has secured it for his Chicago, Indianapolis and Milwaukee offices. Four More Stahl Pictures for First National ASSOCIATED First National Pictures, Inc., announced this week that it had contracted for four more John M. Stahl productions to be presented through Louis B. Mayer.

The first of the new Stahl productions will be "Why Men Leave Home," which is to be issued during the present month and is included among the "1924-20" of First National. It is a satirical comedy of married life and is an adaptation of Avery Hopwood's stage success of the same name.

In the cast of "Why Men Leave Home" are Lewis Stone, Helene Chadwick, Mary Carr, Alma Bennett and William V. Mong.

Muller Wins Promotion with Selznick

W. C. J. Doolittle, president of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, announces the promotion of H. J. Muller to the position of secretary to the president. In making public the advancement of personnel, Mr. Doolittle stated that it was in accordance with the policy of the company to make all new appointments from within the organization.

From last May, and up to the time of his appointment to his new post, Mr. Muller was comptroller of the Selznick Distributing Corporation. He will still continue his supervision of the company's accounting department.

Hodkinson Releases for New York Cameo

Under contracts just closed the productions released by the Hodkinson Corporation will be shown at The Cameo Theatre on Broadway, New York, for a period of eight weeks, beginning March 9.

"Love's Whirlpool" will be the first attraction, starting March 9, for a week's run, to be followed possibly by "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" the Whitman Bennett production featuring Henry Hull and Jane Thomas.

Loew's State Broadcasts from Stage

The first experiment of radio broadcasting from a theatre stage met with success at Loew's State Theatre in New York City during the week. The broadcasting was preceded by the regular vaudeville performance. That the radio stars have a wide following was evidenced by the response from among the spectators when selections were asked to be suggested from the audience. The broadcasting continued afternoon and evening throughout the week, each program being different.

F. B. O. Will Distribute Truart Product

The Truart Film Corporation and the Film Booking Offices have consummated a deal whereby the latter firm has acquired for distribution the bulk of the Truart productions in nearly all parts of the country. The contract does not take in the state of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and New Haven territories.

The first productions to be distributed under the new deal are: "Broadway Gold," an Edward Dillon feature starring Elaine Hammerstein; "The Empty Cradle," adapted from Leota Morgan's novel "Cheating Wives"; "The Unknown Purple," a Carlos production; "Women Men Marry"; "Let's Go!", a Richard Talmadge production; "On Time!", another Richard Talmadge picture, and Elaine Hammerstein's "Drums of Jeopardy."

Start New John Gilbert Feature on Coast

Production has been started at the William Fox West Coast studios on "The Mark of Cain," the latest vehicle for John Gilbert. Howard Mitchell is directing the picture from the story by Fred Jackson and the scenario by Charles Kenyon.

Evelyn Brent, who had a prominent part in the Fox special, "The Shadow of the East," will be seen as Gilbert's new leading lady. The others in the cast are: John Miljan, Edward Tilton, Frank Beal, Harry Todd and Florence Wix.

Final Selections Made for "Cytherea" Cast

Norman Kerry and Betty Bouton have been selected by George Fitzmaurice to complete the cast of "Cytherea," the Goldwyn-Fitzmaurice production which he is now directing for First National at the United Studios. Others in the cast are Alma Rubens, Irene Rich, Lewis Stone and Constance Bennett.

Violet Mersereau Returns For Burr Feature

Violet Mersereau, who has been vacationing from screen work for some time, returned to the films this week when C. C. Burr engaged her for a leading role in "Lend Me Your Husband," now being produced by Burr Pictures, Inc., at the studios in Glendale, Long Island, under the direction of William Christy Cabanne.

"California or Bust" for Universal

Universal has purchased from Byron Morgan his latest story, "California or Bust." It will be one of the 36 which Universal is planning for next year.

"His Forgotten Wife" is a forthcoming F. B. O. Release, starring Madge Bellamy, Warner Baxter and Hazel Keener. These scenes are from the production.

"A Man's Mate" Scheduled on Fox Releases

"A Man's Mate," one of the William Fox star series attractions, featuring John Gilbert and "Feathered Fishermen," an Educational Entertainment will be released the week of March 6, by Fox Film Corporation.

In his latest picture, which was produced on the coast under the direction of Edmund Mortimer, Gilbert plays the role of a young artist. The story and scenario came from the pen of Charles Kenyon.

Renee Adoree is the new leading lady for the Fox star. The supporting cast includes: Noble Johnson, Wilfred North, Thomas Mills, James Neill, John Giddings and Patterson Dial.

"Feathered Fishermen" presents some interesting scenes of bird life on the islands off the coast of California.

Seven Hepworth Pictures To Be Franchised

Between now and next August, seven Hepworth Productions will be released through the State rights market, according to announcement from that office. With the Chicago territory having been turned over to Edward Grossman, of Epic Film Attractions, Grossman will see that Hepworth photoplays will receive thorough distribution through Northern Illinois and the entire state of Indiana.

As a result of the new concentrated effort on the part of the Hepworth Productions, a New York exchange will be opened which will have complete facilities to enable exhibitors taking the Hepworth releases to give the pictures proper exploitation and presentation. R. T. Cranfield and Joseph Di Lorenzo are looking after the distribution of the Hepworth products.

Urson Succeeds Mitchell With De Mille

Bruce Mitchell, who has been acting as assistant director for Cecil B. DeMille, has resigned this position to direct a production to be made in New Orleans under the personal management of J. G. Mayer. Mitchell will leave for Louisiana with his company this week.

Replacing him with Mr. DeMille is Frank Urson, who for the past several years has been a successful director for Paramount, Realart, Marshall and other producing organization. Mr. Urson was formerly associated with Mr. DeMille during some of the latter's biggest undertakings. He is now at work with the director-general at the Lasky studio on the concluding sequences in "Triumph," Mr. DeMille's new Paramount picture, screen play by Jeanie Macpherson, founded on May Edginton's Saturday Evening Post story.

Anna Q. Nilsson Is Signed By Vitagraph

Anna Q. Nilsson and Alice Calhoun, who recently completed work in Richard Walton Tully's "Flowing Gold," have again signed to play together, this time in the Vitagraph picture, "A Woman Between Friends." Miss Nilsson will play the leading role opposite Lou Telligen. The story is by Robert W. Chambers.

Rau is Again Managing Universal Units

"BILLY" RAU, veteran unit production manager at Universal City, who for months has been absent from his desk on account of illness which necessitated weeks in the hospital and a long trip to regain his health, is again managing units at Universal City. He resumed his old desk last week.

Rau will manage four units, one to be the Robert Hill unit, producing Laura La-Plante plays, another, directed by Edward Laemmle, featuring Billy Sullivan in "Fast Steppers" series adapted from Gerald Beaumont's racing stories. The other two have not yet been assigned.

Gustavus Rogers Honored At N. Y. Dinner

The motion picture industry paid an unusual compliment to one who has been long associated with the development of the business, when many of its leaders gathered to honor Gustavus A. Rogers, attorney, at a testimonial dinner given by his friends at the Hotel Plaza, Wednesday evening, Feb. 27th.

Will H. Hays, head of the M. P. P. D. A., Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, John C. Eisele, Jack G. Leo and S. L. Rothafel were among those present. Saul F. Rogers, general counsel for the Fox Film Corporation, and a brother of the guest of the evening occupied one of the tables. At the tables were Cortland Smith, J. Gordon Edwards, Julius Stern. At Mr. Zukor's table were Jesse L. Lasky, Richard W. Saunders, Ralph A. Kohn, Robert T. Kane, Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Charles E. McCarthy, A. M. Botsford and Henry Salisbury.

Others who had tables were Sidney Cohen, head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners, and Charles O'Reily, president of the state exhibitors' league. S. L. President Smith, Vice-President J. Stuart Blackton, and Pauline Frederick and Lou-Tellegen, stars of the picture, were among those present.

Schulberg Goes To Coast For Production

B. P. Schulberg, President of Preferred Pictures Corporation, has concluded his stay in New York and is now en route to Los Angeles where work on his next production, "The Breath of Scandal," will start immediately.

Gasnier who is to direct the production is now busy with the preliminary casting and it is expected that shortly after Mr. Schulberg's arrival in the west, announcement of the complete list of players will be made.

This novel by Edwin Balmer will be the first Schulberg production to be filmed at the Hollywood Studios which were taken over a few weeks ago by Preferred Pictures.

As soon as "The Breath of Scandal" is under way, Mr. Schulberg will begin work on "The Triflers" by Frederick Orin Bartlett. Waldemar Young has recently completed the script for this last named story.

Joseph Dowling Signs For Neilan's "Tess"

The first selection for the cast of Marshall Neilan's fourth production for Goldwyn, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," from Thomas Hardy's novel, aside from the two leading players, is Joseph Dowling, one of the old time actors of the stage who has repeated on the screen his success in character roles. He has been cast as the priest in "Tess."

Blanche Sweet and Conrad Nagel are now working under Mr. Neilan's direction in the sequence following their marriage. The South American episode, for which a big set was built at the studio, has been completed.

F. B. O. Appoints Salt Lake Office Manager

Able Davis has been appointed manager of the Salt Lake branch of the Film Booking Offices, according to an announcement made from the office of Harry M. Berman, general sales manager.

Davis made an enviable record as a salesman in the Denver territory for F. B. O., and his appointment as manager of the Salt Lake exchange has been made in recognition of his exceptional sales ability.

Metro's "Happiness" Opens At N. Y. Rialto

Laurette Taylor's new picture for Metro, "Happiness" begins its Broadway engagement at the Rialto theatre, Sunday. This is a screen version of Miss Taylor's stage success of the same name with which she held the stage for several seasons.

"Happiness" was written by J. Hartley Manners who also wrote "Peg O' My Heart." It was directed by King Vidor and photographed by Chet Lyons.

"Floodgates" Story Will Be Syndicated

Lowell Productions, Inc., who are distributing their latest production, "Floodgates" on the independent market announce the closing of a deal with Percy Eastment whereby the story will be novelized by the author, L. Chase Russell, and syndicated to over fifteen hundred newspapers in weekly installments covering a period of forty weeks.

Director Takes Role in Gibson Picture

Hoot Gibson's director has joined the ranks of "supporting players" in "Forty Horse Hawkins," Hoot's newest starring vehicle at Universal City.

Edward Sedgwick has donned the grease paint for some of the theatrical scenes in the picture which he is directing. Sedgwick plays the stage manager. It has been ten years since he abandoned the footlights to direct pictures.

"Forty Horse Hawkins" is an original story by Sedgwick and Raymond L. Schrock, scenario chief of the Gibson unit.

Arrow Appoints Foreign Representative

Fritz Jacobsohn of Berlin, now on his way back to Europe, has been appointed by W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film Corporation, to be the resident foreign sales representative of Arrow.

Mr. Jacobsohn was the German correspondent of the Hearst papers for five years prior to the war and during the first year of that catastrophe was war correspondent.

He was publicity man for U.F.A., the German Film Trust, when they produced "Passion," "Deception," "Arabian Nights," "Golam," etc. Later he became associated with Independent producers, eventually operating the largest cinema theatre in Berlin, "The Alhambra."

Truart Completes Cast for "Driftwood"

Truart has completed the cast for "Driftwood" the next starring vehicle for Elaine Hammerstein, being made at the Goldwyn Studios, Culver City. In the leading male role opposite the star is Ralph Graves. Walter Long has the "heavy" role and the cast is rounded out by Gertrude Astor, Edward Earle and "Cissy" Fitzgerald.

The story is by Albert Payson Terhune, adapted for the screen by Willard Mack and Roland West, with continuity by Hope Loring and W. D. Leighton.

Progress Pictures Buys "You Are Guilty"

The C. C. Burr offices report the sale of several territories on "You Are Guilty," the Edgar Lewis production co-starring Doris Kenyon and James Kirkwood, to Progress Pictures Incorporated, Washington, D. C.

Through this deal Progress Pictures control the rights for the States of Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

In addition to the co-stars the cast includes Mary Carr, Edmund Breese, Robert Edeson, and little Russell Griffin.

"Trouble Shooter" Under Way with Mix

"The Trouble Shooter," the latest William Fox program feature in which Tox Mix is starred was started this week at the Fox West Coast Studios. John Conway is directing this production from the original story and the scenario by Frederick and Fanny Hatton.

Kathleen Key, who has played opposite Mix in several of his other pictures, has the leading feminine role in "The Trouble Shooter." The other principals in the cast are: Earl Fox, J. Gunnis Davis, Howard Truesdale, Frank Currier and Mike Donlin.

Sennett Names Cast for "Kid from Hollywood"

"CHARLIE Murray, Ben Turpin, Marie Prevost, Billy Bevan, Phyllis Haver and Madeline Hurlock all appear in Mack Sennett's latest two-reel comedy, "The Kid from Hollywood."

The hero of this Hollywood travesty is little Jackie Lucas, who becomes a movie prodigy in the picture. Mack Sennett himself plays the role of the motion picture producer who signs up the child actor.

"The Kid from Hollywood" was directed by Roy Del Ruth, and the cast also includes Louise Carver, Vernon Dent and Elsie Tarron. Teddy, the famous Sennett dog, Billy the chimpanzee and Numa, the six-hundred-and-fifty-pound lion, have important parts as well.

"The Kid from Hollywood" is scheduled for early release by Pathe Exchanges.

Sullivan Will Supervise Talmadge Films

C. Gardner Sullivan, has been appointed supervisor of all future Constance Talmadge productions, according to an announcement made recently by John W. Considine, general manager of Talmadge Productions.

The entire second floor of the Joseph M. Schenck offices at the United Studios has been turned over to Mr. Sullivan and his staff and work under the new arrangement will begin immediately. In addition to visiting New York twice yearly to view the latest stage plays Mr. Sullivan will employ a staff of readers to go over the latest books and magazine stories which might prove available for Constance's use.

Olive Hasbrouck Assigned Lead with Hoxie

Olive Hasbrouck, who has done so well in small parts at Universal City, has been cast as leading woman for Jack Hoxie in "Ridge way of Montana" which is being directed at Universal City by Clifford Smith.

Others in the cast are Herbert Fortier, Pat Harmon, Lou Mehan and Pierre Gendron and Colonel W. F. Fleming. Incidentally, this Colonel Fleming is the "Kit Carson" of the show business known for his characterization of the famous plainsman of the west.

"White Sin" New Title for F. B. O. Release

The Film Booking Offices release "Unguarded Gates," the second picture to be produced by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, has been renamed "The White Sin." Harold Shumate wrote the story which was directed by William Seiter. Madge Bellamy, John Bowers, Francelia Billington, Hal Cooley, Billy Bevan, Otis Harlan and other well-known players appear in the cast.

Horne to Direct Denny in "Missourian"

James W. Horne, who started his directoral career at Universal City, has been engaged to direct Reginald Denny in "The Missourian," the story of Mexico's emancipation from Maximillian, by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr.

Madge Tyrone is Writing "Wildcat" for Screen

Madge Tyrone, veteran screen writer, is now engaged in preparing the screen play of "The Wildcat," the popular Spanish opera by Manuel Penella which George Melford will produce in the near future for Paramount.

Antonio Moreno is the only featured player definitely selected for the cast of this production. Bebe Daniels, who was announced as a featured player with Moreno, will remain in New York for another picture instead of returning to California.

Melford recently completed the filming of "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," featuring Jacqueline Logan, Alma Bennett, David Torrence and Raymond Griffith.

Univeral Buys New Novel by Kelland

Universal reports that it has obtained the screen rights to "Miracle," a new novel by Clarence Budington Kelland.

"Miracle" is still in manuscript form. It will be published serially in the Ladies' Home Journal, beginning next August. Later it will be brought out in book form by Harper. It is very likely that Universal will bring out "Miracle" at the same time it is running in the Ladies' Home Journal.

The story was recommended to Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

Donald Crisp Will Direct Keaton's Next

Donald Crisp has been engaged to direct Buster Keaton in his next comedy to follow "Sherlock, Jr.," which is now in production for Metro.

Mr. Crisp is one of the veteran directors of the industry. He returned to Los Angeles some time ago from London where he produced a series of photoplays for the European market.

Big Cast is Selected for Christie Feature

Tully Marshall has been added to the cast, headed by Dorothy Devore and Walter Hiers, that Al Christie has assembled for his forthcoming feature on the Hodkinson program.

Jimmie Adams, featured Christie comedian, has been assigned a comedy role; while Jimmie Harrison, will also play a prominent part.

Others included in the cast are: Priscilla Bonner, Rosa Gore, Patricia Palmer, Jay Belasco, Lincoln Plumer, George Pearce, Victor Rodman and Earl Rodney.

Richard Talmadge to Start "Stepping Lively"

"Stepping Lively" will be the forth of the series of Richard Talmadge productions being produced by Carlos Productions for Truart Film distribution. The story is by Scott Darling and is now being adopted by Garret Elsdon Fort and will be produced at the F. B. O. studios, work to commence immediately upon completion of "In Fast Company" which is now in its final stages. "Stepping Lively" will be directed by Arthur Rosson.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

UNIVERSAL

Fool's Highway—
Fair picture. Receipts good, helped by other attractions. (West).

White Tiger—
Will fit into most programs. Patrons praised. Receipts averaged up. (Middle West).

Ride for Your Life—
Regular thriller that goes big in a house that always plays thrillers. We had to hold 'em out on opening day. (Middle West).

Hook and Ladder—
This picture was not high class enough for this reputable house, although it contains some good comedy. Business weak, despite a strong surrounding program. (West).

METRO

White Sister—
Well acclaimed by all. Still a steady stream in front of box office, during fourth and last week. Critic called it a "wet movie," but stated that people liked to cry. (Middle West).

Thy Name Is Woman—
Splendid audience picture. Extraordinary film. Did big business for us and ought to for every picture house. (Middle West).

Went across in big style. One of the season's best. Had popular appeal. (Middle West).

Good picture. Box office receipts very good. Considered one of Metro's best. (West).

Eagle's Feather—
Average crowds saw this one for a week. (Middle West).

Scaramouche—
Excellent film entertainment from every viewpoint. Broke all attendance records for week run. (East).

Business fell off a little the second week, after capacity first week. It is an excellent picture, receiving much praise, however, and is starting a third week here. (West).

PARAMOUNT

West of the Water Tower—
Average feature with Main Street background. Shown to fair business. (Middle West).

Next Corner—
Story not new, but treatment is clever and acting fine. (Middle West).

The Stranger—
A wonderful box office attraction. Universally liked. (Middle West).

Heritage of the Desert—
Drew good crowds for a week (Middle West).

Call of the Canyon—
Interesting treatment of old tale and one that always pleases. Business was up to standard. (Middle West).

Pied Piper Malone—
Inocuous, pleasant picture that drew big business on the strength of Thomas Meighan's popularity, rather than on its merits. (Middle West).

Good clean picture; business fair. (Middle West).

Picture perhaps not quite up to the Meighan standard, but they liked it and it showed good receipts for the week. (Middle West).

Just say Thomas Meighan, and they come from miles around. This picture was not considered as strong as some others he has appeared in, but was pleasing, nevertheless. (West).

Shadows of Paris—
Although Pola Negri is usually very good here, this one failed to create any excitement. Business was only fair. (West).

This feature went just fair. Pola Negri was not a strong draw against some big counter attractions. (Middle West).

Big Brother—
This feature was well liked here and did good business. (Middle West).

FOX

Stepping Fast—
The mere announcement of a Tom Mix picture always means S. R. O. for this house. This picture is up to Mix's standard. Business excellent. (East).

Mile-a-Minute Romeo—
Good picture; business good. (Middle West).

Just Off Broadway—
Merely another film play with nothing to label it as off the beaten track. Business only fair. (East).

Hell's Hole—
This one held its own against strong competition for a week. (Middle West).

Gentle Julia—
A weak sister. Didn't last the week out. (Middle West).

The Blizzard—
A wonderful picture. Good receipts. (Middle West).

You Can't Get Away With It—
Not especially good. Many thought it too sad. Receipts fair, drawn by advertising. (West).

Distinctly unusual ad on "Why Worry?" (Pathe), at Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theatres St. Louis.

The Gun Fighter—
Patrons who enjoy this type of picture were satisfied, but it hasn't a strong appeal. The name is against it with some people. Business just average. (West).

D. W. GRIFFITH

America—
Was given a trial showing here ahead of Broadway run. This is a 100% picture that every exhibitor should try for. It is a world beater and one that every man, woman and child should see. Believe it will surpass "Birth of a Nation." (East).

PREFERRED

Virginian—
Personal appearance of the star helped business greatly, the picture playing to good crowds for a week. (Middle West).

FIRST NATIONAL

The Wanters—
Pleasing light feature with up to the minute story. In connection with special syncopation week, played to packed houses. (Middle West).

Just a fair program picture Rather monotonous story. Strong supplementary bill helped to jam them in. (East).

Boy of Mine—
A nice little picture, but it only did fair business for us. (Middle West).

Generally considered a very pleasing little picture. Has been doing a very nice business. (West).

Her Temporary Husband—
Did very nicely with this one and a strong musical bill. (Middle West).

When a Man 's a Man—
Not quite what was expected. Business fair. (Middle West).

UNITED ARTISTS

Rosita—
Played to big attendance for a two-weeks run. (Middle West).

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Great White Way— — — —
This picture was considered good, although some thought it a bit sophisticated. Receipts good and picture held for second week. (West).

Through the Dark—
Colleen Moore scores another success in this excellent feature Business much above average. (Middle West).

F. B. O.

Judgment of the Storm—
This is a good picture, not the shoot 'em up stuff that might be expected from the title. It was played here at the wrong house, one which runs Westerns. It did a pretty good week but should do more. (Middle West).

HODKINSON

Down to the Sea in Ships—
Good picture; business poor. (Middle West).

VITAGRAPH

Let No Man Put Asunder—
This picture has a great combination and proved the proper one for the box office. Doesn't require much exploitation to get 'em in. (Middle West).

SELZNICK

Woman to Woman—
Betty Compson does some nice work in this. Business good. (Middle West).

PATHE

Why Worry?—
Another good Lloyd comedy. Went over big. (Middle West).

Way of a Man—
This picture has been cashing in on the name of Emerson Hough, and has been doing a good business here. Picture itself is satisfactory, but not overly strong. (West).

WARNER BROS.

Country Kid—
Weak vehicle all through, both as to plot and performance. Fair business. (Middle West).

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

YOUR IDEA

THOMAS D. SORIERO, general manager of the Combined Whitehurst Interests, of Baltimore, controlling the Century, Parkway, Garden and New theatres in that city, and one of the most prominent creators of novel presentation effects in the motion picture theatre, has arrived at the conclusion that special acts in the photoplay theatre are superior to prologues, for a number of reasons, which he sets forth as follows:

"Special acts are preferable to prologues for a picture theatre program because they are treated as such by the newspaper critics and mentioned in the reviews; because they stand on their own merits and are approved or disapproved by the audience and because they do not tend to take the interest from the feature picture just before it is flashed on the screen.

"For some time now I have been experimenting with the audiences at the Century to see which they liked best and the wind blows strongly in favor of the special acts.

"For a number of weeks I put on prologues in conjunction with the feature pictures that were to be shown. It either resulted in the newspaper critics ridiculing the act or not saying anything about it at all, which was worse.

"Realizing that something was radically wrong, I then went about to find out what was the matter and discovered that as the prologue was given immediately before the feature picture, as a sort of introduction, it did not give the audience a chance to applaud or criticise the act. This in turn, I found has a great influence on the newspaper critic.

"When the critic watches the performance in a moving picture theatre, he instinctively absorbs the attitude of the audience whether it is favorable or otherwise and this in turn influences his criticism, I have found.

"Realizing therefore that the audience did not have time to applaud the prologues loudly or 'damn them by faint praise,' I conceived the idea that if the prologues were abandoned, and changed into special acts, separate from the feature, perhaps the audience would respond.

"I found my supposition to be absolutely correct. After the first special act was put on every newspaper critic in Baltimore recognized it and commented upon it in connection with the show and in the advance notices, I found that I received added publicity because as most of them were musical, they were entitled to a special notice either on the music page or in the movie section about the special music act.

"The audiences enjoyed them immensely. If they approved they were loud in their applause and asked for an encore, but of course, as all audiences are prone to be, if they were dissatisfied, they showed it.

"Putting a special act on in a moving picture theatre cannot be handled in the same manner as the acts in a vaudeville and moving picture theatre combined. It must have a distinct flavor — an idealistic semblance to it that lifts it out of the vaudeville class.

"If one does not watch this very important point about putting a special act in the photoplay theatre, the tendency will be to cheapen the house rather than give it distinction.

"Musical and dancing acts, or a combination of both, I have found, give the best results. There must be variety always and the more people one can get on the stage in the act, the bigger and better it will appear to the audiences.

"If one watches the fine points of staging and lighting and sees that there is nothing that can be construed as objectionable in the act, then one cannot go wrong in putting on the special acts in moving picture theatres in conjunction with the regular performances of films, and find they will be liked and applauded by the press and public alike."

PERHAPS it has been done before, but it sounds new to us. At any rate, it got results and should get results for other exhibitors.

When the Garrick theatre, Duluth, was due to play "Flaming Youth," W. H. Laurance, exploitation man for the house arranged a tie-up with Stone's book store, and then obtained reprints of the brightly colored trade paper insert on the picture, imprinting the local billing on them.

These made comparatively inexpensive heralds, and were much superior to a hastily assembled local set-up.

WHAT would seem to be a brand new idea in the way of creating advance interest in a new theatre is being used in Washington, D. C., in connection with Crandall's Tivoli theatre, now building. A series of two column newspaper advertisements is being run in the Washington Sunday papers, seven and eight inches in depth, setting forth the outstanding features of the new temple of the cinema art. Each bears the simple heading "Crandall's Tivoli" and a serial number. The first ad was as follows:

"Crandall's new Tivoli theatre, at Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, will be such a revelation to the National Capital in its every appointment that it is deemed expedient to set forth to the theatre-going public of Washington the high points of its superiority prior to the date when it will be thrown open to the public and formally dedicated.

"Crandall's Tivoli, to begin with, will be the largest playhouse in the city with a total seating capacity of 2,500. Every seat in the orchestra, mezzanine and balcony will command an absolutely clear view of the stage and screen.

"The stage, incidently, will be of such dimensions and so equipped as to accommodate the biggest attractions ever sent on tour — whether dramatic, concert, musical comedy, operatic or photodramatic.

"The rest rooms and lounges will be models of comfort and convenience and the promenades will be still further notable for the insight they will permit into the mysterious workings of the projection booth and other parts of the theatre from which the casual amusement-seeker customarily is barred.

"We will dwell at length from week to week, pending the completion and opening of the palatial new house at a comparatively early date, upon the various aspects of theatre conduct in which the Tivoli will far surpass what has heretofore been the Capital's fixed notion of preeminence in the purveyance of exceptional entertainment to the most discriminating audiences in America.

"By following these announcements you will be both interested and enlightened. Read every one. Harry M. Crandall."

The fourth ad deals with the stage appointments. Extracts from this follow:

"While these, of course, are matters of the utmost importance, sight has not been lost of the fact that at every performance the eyes of 2,500 spectators will be centered on the stage. To conform to the intention to make the Tivoli the most magnificent playhouse on the continent, the stage, therefore, must be the most beautiful in America. It will be precisely that, if time, thought, effort and money are capable of accomplishment.

AND OURS

"Stage draperies such as the Capital has never seen were contracted for last week. The proscenium draperies alone will represent a cost of approximately $15,000. The materials that will be used to lend the Tivoli's stage a degree of richness that has never before been approached will be cloth of gold, cloth of silver, metallic silks, embossed tapestries and gold brocades.

"In order to bring out the full beauty of these opulent stage embellishments it has been necessary to install a complete battery of sun, medium and baby spotlights which may be played upon the stage not from the projection booth but from apertures in the grand proscenium, invisible to the public. The same lighting devices can be employed to illuminate the orchestra pit and organ console."

REPRODUCED alongside of this is an advertisement on "The Shadows of Paris" which is a gem of typography such as is seldom seen in motion picture advertising.

Here is an advertisement with no illustration, which still dominated completely the page it was on, and which could not be overlooked. Even a reader casually glancing through the paper could not fail to get the bold face words — "Shadows of Paris" — Comes —Olympic — Tomorrow— Pola Negri. The whole message in a few words, with vivid copy filling in between for those who care to read the rest—and most readers would.

Unusual type ad on "Shadows of Paris" (Paramount) at the Olympic theatre, Pittsburgh.

The type face chosen is clean cut and appropriate, bold yet not too black. It is a face read at a glance, yet beautiful enough to give the advertisement distinction. The border, too, has been carefully chosen and is of the proper thickness to balance the type. This simple stunt of using a light rule and a heavy one together, known as Scotch rule, can be done in any print shop, yet is seldom seen in theatrical advertisements.

The complete copy reads: "Shadows of Paris" is a motion picture, the like of which you have never seen before. Fresh from its laurels in New York, this ravishing Paramount production comes to Pittsburgh to tell you a story — a story that provides one thrill after another. It comes to the Olympic heralded as the ultimate in photoplay achievement. Bewildering in its spectacles yet tender in the human tale it unfolds, it will be shown tomorrow and remain all week featuring a star that gives full reign to her tempestuous emotions — one who loves, fights and lives with the restraint of cavewomen. As invigorating as the lamented cocktail is Pola Negri. Then follows the short subject billing.

This was used by the Olympic theatre, Pittsburgh, where the management was assisted by Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount exploiter.

AN unusual bit of civic exploitation developed recently in Boston during the showing at the Park theatre of "Little Old New York." The engagement was drawing to a close, when Mayor Curley began receiving requests from Boston educators pointing out that the historical value of the picture was such that the run should be extended.

Mayor Curley then addressed a letter to William Randolph Hearst personally, requesting that the engagement be extended. This was arranged for, and the advertising prominently featured the fact that it was in compliance with demands from Boston educators and His Honor, the Mayor.

WHEN going after window displays on a tie-up basis, it is well to remember that there must be something in the idea to benefit the dealer as well as the theatre. A merchant's windows are one of his greatest advertising mediums, and there is no reason why he should be expected to turn these windows over to a local theatre unless he is going to profit by the arrangement.

A few year sago, any sort of photoplay window display, such as a few stills, would attract attention, and the dealer would receive some benefit from this notice. Nowadays, however, these displays have been used too extensively in most localities, and have lost their novelty. As a result, some little thought should be devoted to this matter, because a good window display is undoubtedly valuable.

An excellent two-edged stunt, with benefit to both parties, has been used successfully by Manager George Rotsky of the Palace theatre, Montreal. He describes it as follows:

"I supply more than one hundred phonograph dealers with a window card which carries the name of my current attraction and also lists the names of most selections played during the showing of the picture, as well as the overture, giving the record numbers and makers' names. Thus, the dealer is happy because he is getting something, which I get a card in many good windows where I could not get otherwise."

This stunt is suitable for any theatre using special music, and offers several angles of exploitation based on this music.

If the effort some managers expend in worrying about their opposition were put forth in planning aggressive campaigns, they wouldn't have any opposition.

IN this week's mail comes a batch of newspaper ads, submitted by the advertising manager of a leading Western theatre chain, and a letter in which he remarks:

"The main reason for sending them in is that they did business and maybe someone else can use the idea — that is, the idea of getting business from an exchange mat, for we all admit that that is the last thing suspected excepting in the offices of the companies.

"Some day, we will have selling layouts in press books, but not until they quit cluttering up their stuff and let a wee bit of white space go by without splattering presenters, producers, scenario writers and directors with printer's ink. This stuff does not concern the public to any great extent, especially in this neck of the woods."

Unfortunately, so long as contracts continue as they are, there probably can be no reform in this matter of excessive billing credits, although the exhibitor can, with a little ingenuity, do as the writer of the above letter does — which is to simplify the billing down to the bare essentials.

For instance, in the ad on "The Spanish Dancer" the billing is simply: Pola Negri in "The Spanish Dancer" with Antonio Moreno. These two names and no more. In the case of "Anna Christie," it reads: "Anna Christie," the Pulitzer prize play with Blanche Sweet.

However, members of the technical staff may feel about it, this sort of billing gives the facts that really interest the public, simplifies the ad and leaves room for white space and vital selling copy.

SOMETHING of a new departure for theatre circuits was put into effect the other day, when Loew's Ohio theatres sent Constance Kenyon, long identified with the Ohio theatre, Cleveland, to the west coast to represent them and gather special material concerning forthcoming pictures to play these houses.

"The average in quality of this season's pictures is far above that of several years past," says Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, in making the announcement concerning Miss Kenyon. "We feel that an absolutely new era has dawned in the production of pictures, and that next season's photoplays, the making of which has already been begun, will be of even higher character than those we are now receiving. For that reason we believe this is an opportune time to have someone representing us at the center of picture production, which of course is Los Angeles and Hollywood, and we feel that the work of Miss Kenyon will be of great benefit to ourselves and that the public will learn in advance everything about the new pictures."

Department Stores Aid on "Hoosier Schoolmaster"

A concrete, businesslike campaign was put over recently by manager William Wehle of the Isis theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich., on "The Hoosier Schoolmaster."

The personal appearance of Jane Thomas, the star of the production, proved a drawing card in itself while paving the way for unusual publicity and advertising.

By consenting to her appearance in the rest room of Herpolsheimer & Co., the biggest department store in Grand Rapids, Manager Wehle secured a fine block of space in the full page advertisements of the store in which the show was boosted and the appearance of Miss Thomas at both the theatre and the store was announced.

There is no more sure or more direct way of reaching the women of any city than through the department store advertisements and by making this tie-up the Isis brought the showing of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" forcefully to the attention of every woman in Grand Rapids. Additional publicity in the general news column of the daily papers was secured by having Miss Thomas meet Mayor Julius Tisch on the steps of the City Hall where they were photographed as Miss Thomas with an autographed copy of the book from which the picture was adapted.

The distributors of the Flint motor car cooperated by placing one of their cars at the star's disposal during her stay in that city, and advertising the fact in the newspapers.

The street ballyhoo consisted of large books of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" carried by men concealed inside the covers, and by men who paraded the street dressed in the quaint costume of the schoolmasters in the early days of the hoosier state.

The book stores co-operated with window displays of the book and stills from the production arranged in effectively simple and straight-forward style, giving the theatre's announcement prominence in the centre of the display.

"His Children's Children" Ideas

Striking Street Stunt Used to Boost Jacksonville Run; Local Films Made

WHEN "His Children's Children" played at the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, Manager Charles S. Morrison, with the help of Kenneth O. Renaud, Paramount exploiteer, put over a vigorous campaign.

One of the high spots, and the one that probably attracted more attention than any of the others, was the taking on the streets of motion pictures which were afterward shown at the theatre. The services of a local news reel cameraman were secured and the party set out in two cars. In one of them was a man dressed in devil's costume, taken along just to attract the attention of the crowds. On each car was a banner which read: "Are They Going to the Devil? Find the Answer in 'His Children's Children' at the Imperial, Starting Sunday."

At every stop a big crowd gathered and after the picture was taken the cameraman's assistant, in approved studio fashion, stepped in front of the camera with a blackboard on which was chalked, "Production — 'His Children's Children' — A Paramount Picture — Director, Sam Wood" and then some cryptic hieroglyphics which meant nothing but nevertheless aroused the curiosity of the onlookers. Then Morrison would step forward and announce that the movies would be shown at the Imperial and also that "His Children's Children" was soon coming.

"It is doubtful if any one," writes Morrison, "not having seen the making of these hometown movies, can imagine the enthusiasm, attention and comment aroused. It was a stunt well worth the time and effort. The cooperation of the Police department was a big asset for we blocked traffic continually, and the more traffic we stopped, the more people knew about 'His Children's Children.'"

Morrison also hooked on to a good ballyhoo in the shape of a flivver disguised as a motor boat, which is used locally to advertise a fleet of sight-seeing motor boats on the St. John's river. Between the masts was strung a banner which read: "'His Children's Children' Never Knew the Pleasure of a St. John's River Trip."

For two passes each, Morrison got the cooperation of five local laundries, all of which put into all of their packages for three days special heralds. A distribution of six thousand announcements was thereby obtained.

Special art work and cut-outs combined to make this display on "The Mail Man" (F. B. O.), done by Chris J. Behrens at the Family theatre, Davenport, Iowa.

Tie-ups for "Thy Name is Woman"

Malaney Puts Over Strong Campaign in Cleveland; Advance N. Y. Stunts

M. A. MALANEY, publicity manager for Loew's Ohio theaters, and C. C. Deardourff, in charge of Metro publicity in Cleveland, put their heads together and evolved a comprehensive campaign on "Thy Name Is Woman," which covered the downtown display windows pretty thoroughly.

They tied up with six downtown Standard drug stores for window displays on a popular perfume; with six downtown Marshall drug stores for window displays on powder puffs; with a prominent corner drug store at Euclid and East Ninth street, for a special display; with Cowell and Hubbard, leading jewelers, for a picture display in silver frames.

In addition to this, Malaney and Deardourff ran a "best dressed man" contest in the Press. They took advantage of a meeting of the Ohio Retail Clothier's Association, which endorsed Ramon Navarro, star of "Thy Name Is Woman" as the best dressed man in the movies. Following editions of the Press asked for popular names of other best dressed men in the movies. A cash prize was offered to the winner of the contest.

Along Broadway

The advance exploitation on the engagement of "Thy Name is Woman," at the Lyric theater, New York City, is well under way. While the entire advance campaign is not yet completed all the preliminary steps have been covered and several important tie-ups are already in effect.

Last week Broadway and the important thoroughfares in New York and Brooklyn were inundated with an open letter to the noted bob-haired woman bandit offering her a prize of $200 if she would attend the Lyric and send in a review on "Thy Name Is Woman." Twenty thousand of these letters have been distributed through stores, barber shops, etc.

Another tieup, unique even for Broadway, is with the various ticket selling agencies. Under the heading "Worth While Attractions Now Playing in New York," a large window display in each agency draws attention to the big hits on Broadway in this way: In large type "Thy Name Is Woman" and then in small type the name of a big attraction and then again in large type "Thy Name Is Woman" and then again in small type the name of another attraction and so on down the whole length of the one sheet.

A special colored window card has also been distributed with blank space at the bottom for price values of any merchandise displayed in the window.

Five thousand half sheet teaser snipes have been put up in important locations. Five thousand cards have also been posted. Another 5,000 pictorial window cards and about half that number of block cards have been planted.

Another unique feature is the sending of perfumed invitations to the first night audience.

Poster Cut-out Figures in "Penrod and Sam" Lobby

Utilizing the press book slogan that "Penrod and Sam" was the "Yell of the year," the American theater at Butte, Mont., put up an unusually effective theater front during the picture's run.

Two of the gang were represented by cut-outs underneath the fence railing while from above Ben Alexander spied down upon them. The effect was heightened by having the upper figure several inches in back of the lower cut-out.

Manager J. P. Harrison of the Hippodrome, Waco, Texas, created considerable talk locally with this front on "The White Rose" (United Artists)

Picturesque front construction at the Liberty theatre, Beaumont, Texas, for "In the Palace of the King" (Metro).

Starts Own Library to Aid "Way of a Man" Showing

Manager Berry of the Gem theater, Laverne, Okla., is utilizing the special photoplay addition of Emerson Hough's novel, "The Way of a Man," in a rather novel way for the exploitation of the picture adaptation of this story, which the Gem theater will present.

Mr. Berry has purchased ten copies of the Grosset and Dunlap photoplay edition of "The Way of a Man" and plans to select ten residents of Laverne to whom he will lend out the books for about three days. As soon as each one of the ten has finished reading the book and returns it to Mr. Berry, it will be passed on to another patron for his perusal. The Gem's manager expects he will have placed a copy of the book in the hands of practically every citizen in the town before his engagement of the picture opens.

Mr. Berry's idea of a "Rotary Library" is especially adaptable to the small town where the exhibitor enjoys a wide acquaintance in the community.

Striking Oriental Display Given "Thundergate"

A combination of Japanese lanterns, lattice work and Oriental color work formed an artistic entity for the front of the Liberty theatre, Seattle, Wash., during the showing of "Thundergate."

Manager Leroy V. Johnson conceived and executed this front which was planned along simple lines but made a tremendous impression because of its atmospheric touch, harmonious contact with the picture and striking hues. Lanterns were hung from under the marquee. The title was painted in Oriental heiroglyphics in the center panel of the three above the entrance. The other two were appropriately hand painted with copy of characters from the picture.

The work is in line with the new style of lobby decoration that has been installed at the Liberty under Manager Johnson's direction.

Picturesque Front Used on "The Fighting Blade"

Careful attention to detail added effectiveness to the lobby arranged by Manager Stille of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., on "The Fighting Blade." The novelties can be briefly summarized:—

A beaver board castle front with crossed swords and a roof where the joists were cut off in squares.

The lobby displays around the box office were distinguished by the arrangement of the stills, placed so as to overlap the edges of the shield.

Handsomely bordered insert displays at each side of the entrance resembling a mirrored reflection.

Comparing the many lavish displays or the street stunts that this theatre has seen, according to the selling possibilities of the attraction, the arrangement on "The Fighting Blade" comes as a distinct contrast and evidence of versatility in changing a campaign to conform to the picture's needs.

Flashing Lights in Lobby for "Flaming Youth"

Flashing, colorful lights blazoned before the Liberty theatre, Seattle, Wash., to emphasize the title and theme of "Flaming Youth." The attraction was exploited entirely by the lobby display, a display so different and startling as to make it the topic of conversation throughout Seattle. Included in this word-of-mouth advertising was the name of Leroy V. Johnson, manager of the house, who planned the display and was responsible for its execution.

Continuous motion was the keynote. Lights swarmed around the heads of the artistic designs and head cut-outs that featured the strip above the entrance. Nine different tints of lamps were used in this display. The flames, starting at the cut-out head, were a deep red softening to amber color at the other end. This was accomplished by the use of a flasher of five circuits. The shaded effect, plus the lettered signs gave the impression of real flames darting across the top of the theatre at intervals.

The title was worked out in straw colored lamps against a yellow background. The continuous burning style of lamp was used and the total, in the display board alone, was 560 lamps.

The remainder of the lamps used under the marquee were of the 25-watt variety.

Cut-outs, mostly from the six-sheets, were used on the corners, inside the lobby and above the marquee. The box office was enclosed and presented to the public gaze in oriental design done in three colors.

Above the marquee was a cut-out twelve feet high. At the base of this was a semi-cooking pot in back of which were mounted two 500 watt nitrogen lamps covered with very thick red gelatin. The top part of the cut-out was illuminated by a 1,000 watt amber blood lamp. The steam found its escape from the pot by a one inch pipe drilled and fitted with spray nozzles. It was easy to furnish the steam and the lights gave the effect of rising flames and smoke. A searchlight that made a complete circle once in every two minutes was mounted on the top of the theatre and proved a guiding star for all patrons on the street.

Cold Snap Makes Problem in "Hunchback" Campaign

Manager Field of the Garrick theater in St. Paul, ran "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" during one of the coldest spells that city has ever experienced. It was so cold that people walked through the streets only when they were obliged to and then they buried their faces in their coat collars and looked at nothing but the sidewalk in front of them.

This presented a serious problem for Field. He must attract the attention of passersby to the showing of "The Hunchback." All the signs and electric lights weren't of much use if the people wouldn't look up. Field had a huge bell installed under the marquis. His stenographer pushed the button every 30 seconds or so and just as often the passersby raised their heads from the interior of their coats and saw that "The Hunchback" was being shown at the Garrick and that it was the one picture they should not fail to see. The bell could be heard for blocks.

Identification Contest is "Fashion Row" Stunt

Len S. Brown, manager of the Astor theater, St. Paul, ran a popular contest in connection with his engagement of "Fashion Row."

Mr. Brown issues a theater program which carries interesting items about pictures coming to the Astor. It has a circulation of thousands weekly among his patrons, and has assumed the role of a family organ. In this program Mr. Brown printed a picture of Miss Murray in character and in an accompanying story incited his patrons to guess what star the picture represented. Those who guessed correctly were presented with free admissions to the Astor to see "Fashion Row."

Miss Murray plays in character so she was not so easy to recognize as might be imagined, and therefore Mr. Brown's stunt really required some thinking.

The management of the Rialto theatre, Macon, Ga., designed this pleasing display to exploit the showing of "Long Live the King" (Metro), in which cut-outs are used to excellent advantage.

Varied Ideas Boost "Black Oxen"

Real Article Produced for Ballyhoo; Gown Tie-up; Attractive Lobby Made

ONE of the most extensive campaigns yet put over by Manager Earle D. Wilson at Gordon's New Bedford Olympia theatre was used in that Massachusetts city on "Black Oxen," with cut-out heads of black oxen predominating.

A wagon with a big sign on either side, bearing a piano player and song plugger went through the streets, while a huge banner was hung on each side of the theatre and from the top at intervals a cornetist played.

In the entrance was a barrel, placed the week before, with the admonition "Do Not Look In," while at the bottom was a round sign "All Next Week 'Black Oxen'" Cardboards cut-outs were sprinkled about the entrance and lobby with orange and black streamers displayed, the colors being those used on the cover of the book. A shadow box, and flashing sign were also in operation the week before.

For the opening evening an invitation was extended to the editorial force of The Evening Standard to attend the picture in a body as guests of the house. The story had been run serially in the newspaper a short time before.

Pleasing Lobby Panels

Unusually attractive were the lobby panels used in Lowe's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, Calif., during the run of "Black Oxen."

Individual head portraits of the featured players made artistic wall decorations. They were handsomely mounted and this fact coupled with the discriminating color arrangement and the plain legible, hand lettering, made them a drawing card for anyone who passed through the outer entrance.

The marquee billing called it a "novel of youth restored" and the exploitation and advertising concentrated on this line.

The first of the "Black Oxen" gowns have made their appearance. In conjunction with the showing of the picture at the Capitol theatre, Sacramento, Calif., Manager M. B. Hustler arranged a window display with Reich and Tierre Department store.

Lumberman Brings Oxen

Getting a real lumber camp owner to drive his oxen into the city for exploitation purposes got a kick in Seattle because Seattleites were "wise" to what the movie men did. They saw through the man's make up at once they thought."

The fact that it was a genuine lumber man bringing in his team of black oxen as a street ballyhoo for "Black Oxen" at the Strand meant all the more publicity for the picture. The oxen were ushered up to the theatre, up to the First National exchange and around the main streets.

Managerial Endorsement Is "Within the Law" Stunt

The managerial announcement has been done before and, conservatively used, has been made an effective box office adjunct. On "Within the Law" Manager W. Griffith Mitchell of the Majestic theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., followed the press sheet suggestion and made the managerial announcement entirely in lower case type. Not a single capital was used in the bold-faced headlines and bank of the three by fourteen newspaper ad.

The announcement differed from previous managerial famfares in that it did not declare "Within the Law" was the greatest picture ever made. It did say that it was a striking example of the versatility of stories being selected for Miss Talmadge and officially asked the theatre's patrons to give their opinions on this kind of story for her.

E. M. BERG'S TROPICAL LOBBY DISPLAY ON "HUNTING BIG GAME"
When "Scaramouche" (Metro), played at the New Garrick theatre, Duluth, Harold A. Grinden, manager of the Glass Block Store's Book Shop, arranged this display

Walking book ballyhoo on "Black Oxen" (First Nat'l) at the Orpheum, Kenosha, of which Edward Dayton is manager and exploiteer.

"Long Live the King" Made Subject of Contest

Front page publicity before and during the engagement marked the run of "Long Live the King" at the Grand theatre in Columbus, Georgia.

C. D. Haug, one of Metro's exploitation men went down there and put a Jackie Coogan Similarity Contest over for the Grand theatre. He got the Columbus Ledger to go in with the theatre on the stunt and, working it from all angles, he got top notch results.

Several hundred boys and girls, all dressed up like Jackie, paraded down the main Columbus streets on the morning of the opening. Thousands of spectators lined the streets and cheered the youngsters. In addition to prizes of money in gold which were given to the winners, all the kiddies who appeared in costume, were taken to the Grand to see "Long Live the King."

The Ledger played the stunt up with big stories and front page displays. Haug had arranged to run the stunt under the Ledger auspices.

Miniature Lobby Stage for "Potash and Perlmutter"

In the lobby dressing of "Potash and Perlmitter" at the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, Pa., a miniature stage was constructed in the center showing Potash and Perlmutter in telephone booths at each end. In the center a cutout and centerpiece of models from the production were used. Above were two streamers of ribbons, representing telephone wires that connected the conversation of the two partners.

Their "line" consisted of witty sayings, notably the subtitles from the picture.

Of equal interest was the technical construction of the set. The back drop was made of set rainbow silk. The frame was constructed of compo board and blue crepe paper with tinted electric lights. The front of the set was covered with mulberry velour with a blue moline curtain in front of the figure.

Costume Designing Contest on "The French Doll"

An effective contest was put over in Cinnnati for the Walnut theatre for its engement of "The French Doll," by Albert . Kaufman, Metro exploitation representave there. It calls for newspaper cooperaon in a costume designing contest in which ie theatre management undertakes to give way small prizes or other inducements under ie auspices of the local paper. It went ver big in Cincinnati.

Because Mae Murray is noted for her wish gowns, because she designs most of iem herself and because she is always on ie lookout for new and startling ideas, a ontest of this nature was timely and interesting.

Every day the Cincinnati Times-Star apeared with a big leading story outlining the ontest and arousing many people to active articipation. The name of the picture and ie theatre and play date were prominently layed up at all times.

The judges, among whom were prominent eople of Cincinnati selected the best of the esigns submitted and these were later dislayed in the lobby of the Walnut theatre. 'he final selection was made on the basis of ie greatest approval by the Walnut theatre atronage. Prizes of $25, $15, and $10, in old were given away and there were addiional consolation prizes. Several hundred ontestants participated. There was the addional inducements that Miss Murray, to 'hom the winning designs were sent on, ight select them for her personal use, 'hereat there would be additional remuneraion.

Safety Week Put Over for "The Drivin' Fool"

"Safety Week" campaigns for the exploitaion of a motion picture are not new to most laces but Canon City, Colo., was one the ew cities which overlooked it, until T. Bidwell McCormick became publicity director for he Jones theatre which played "The Drivin' 'ool."

After getting the mayor and the newspaper o sponsor a "safety day" which coincided 'ith the opening day of the picture, McCornick arranged with the Chief of Police and the traffic officers for a demonstration of the proper as well as the improper ways to drive a car and how to dodge one. The demonstration was held on the corner in front of the theatre in the afternoon just prior to the matinee.

As the advance publicity campaign progressed, the day began to take on all the earmarks of a real municipal event; and the manager of the Jones theatre was congratulated on all sides "for showing such an appropriate picture."

Besides the traffic rules demonstration, which was witnessed by several thousand persons, a "Do You Know the Traffic Rules?" Contest was conducted by the Daily Record, which offered a cash prize and a score of tickets to see "The Drivin' Fool" for the best answers to traffic questions prepared by the Chief of Police.

A "Slow Race" was held on a downtown street in which a dozen cars of various makes took part, while a comedy cop directed (or misdirected) the traffic.

Two weeks prior to the showing of the picture, windshield stickers reading, "Half the Road is Yours, Don't be a Drivin' Fool," were distributed to motorists, and during the demonstration on "Safety Day" an auto carrying a banner "Don't be a Drivin' Fool, but see one at Jone's theatre" mingled with the traffic.

Classified Ad Stunt Used on "Our Hospitality"

When "Our Hospitality" showed at the Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., C. O. Haug, Metro exploiteer, used the classified ad stunt to boost the showing.

On the surface it didn't appear to be more than a "Free Tickets to the Movies" stunt, with the Augusta Herald acting as host to its subscribers, but when for ten days before the showing of the picture the whole population of Augusta pored over the classified advertising columns of the Herald, to see each evening what five lucky subscribers had their names printed, entitling them to two free t all of Augusta knew by the time the picture opened that "Our Hospitality" was playing at the Rialto.

The paper scattered five names from thei subscribers' list over the classified page of each issue. That made it sure that their classified advertisers would benefit, as all the ads on the page necessarily had to be looked over to find the five lucky ticket-holders.

And in every issue for ten days the Herald carried on the front page a boxed notice, mentioning the picture.

The stunt cost the Rialto nothing but free tickets to the Keaton showing, and the publicity obtained for "Our Hospitality" paid for the passes over and over, in a whirlwind week for the theatre.

Greatest Thrill Contest on "in Search of a Thrill"

In the campaign put over recently by the management of the Criterion theatre in Oklahoma City for "In Search of a Thrill," one of the exploitation stunts, suggested in the press book, was a contest in which the theatre invited its patrons to send in reports of the greatest thrill in their lives. The winner of the most thrilling thrill was given some prize.

The Criterion management took this stunt to the papers and both played it up big. Forty dollars in prizes were given away, five dollars each day to the first winner and five dollars in tickets to the theatre to the second. The stunt lasted four days and attracted bigger business to the Criterion than at any time during the year. It caused general comment throughout the city and hundreds of people participated in the contest.

Two of the unusual co-operative window displays obtained in Los Angeles for the showing of "Flaming Youth" (First Nat'l) at Loew's State theatre.

Large Electric Sign Wins Space for "Scaramouche"

The electric sign in front of the Park theater in Boston with the word "Scaramouche" flaring for many streets beyond in all the glory of its 1,500 lamps was given a signal recognition by the Edison Light Co. of Boston and by the Boston newspapers last week.

The sign was erected especially for the "Scaramouche" engagement. It has attracted unusual comment through its remarkable brilliancy and attractiveness. In view of this the Edison Light Co., which furnishes the electric power of Boston, took advertising space in all the Boston papers, in which the sign was reproduced and the added note that the expense was small but the results big. The word "Scaramouche" stood out dominating the ad. It was great advertising for the production.

Novelty Vocal Prologue to "Name the Man" Showing

A novelty vocal prologue arranged and staged by Henri C. LeBel, manager of presentation was one of the chief methods of exploitation used on "Name The Man" when that picture played John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre in Seattle.

"A Kiss in the Dark" was the number used by Mr. LeBel in the act, and it was believed to be quite appropriate, judging from the enthusiasm with which the offering was received. It was put on in the following manner:

At the end of the overture, all the house lights were extinguished and two gardens, one at each side of the stage, were lighted very dimly. In one garden sat a man attired as "the Deemster" with white wig and black gown, behind a large judge's stand. In the other garden sat a young lady, dressed and kneeling in the same way as the girl on the 24-sheets and other advertising matter on the picture.

Manager Howard Waugh of Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, arranged this marquee cut-out on "Big Brother" (Paramount).

After the orchestra played the refrain over once, the lights on the man were flashed on full and he sang through one chorus of the song. As he finished, a huge red hand, with finger pointing at the girl, was turned on at the girl's side of the stage, and as she sang the second chorus of the song the lights in her garden were gradually turned on. With both gardens fully lighted, and the huge hand pointing at the girl, just as portrayed on the 24-sheets, the two sang a third chorus together, during which rendition the lights were gradually dimmed again. As the end of the song was reached, the lights were practically extinguished, and the curtain was immediately raised for the screening of the picture. The same musical number was used all during the picture as the romance theme.

Coogan Similarity Contest on "Long Live the King"

The latest Coogan contest to be reported on "Long Live the King" is from Waco, Texas, where the Hippodrome theater put the idea over in an unusually successful way. It was so arranged that a representative of every ward school in the city was entered in the contest, thus arousing even greater interest and getting a big draw from every section of the city. This way of putting the contest on awakened school loyalty, there was much rivalry and the Hippodrome got powerful exploitation along with several merchants who offered some of the prizes.

Not only boys but a number of girls entered the contest in Waco. The first prize was $25, awarded by the theater. Other prizes were presented by furniture dealers, florists, printers, jewelers and seed companies. The applause of the audience determined the winners, the contest being conducted in such a satisfactory manner that everyone was thoroughly satisfied even the losers.

Cut-Up Puzzle Face in Ad on "Children of Dust"

A cut-up puzzle, conducted by the Ottawa Citizen of Ontario, Canada, provided the exploitation ammunition for "Children of Dust" at the Imperial theatre.

Pauline Garon played the lead and Pauline's face was cut into little bits of pieces, each piece being a part of one of the ads that made up the page. The Citizen readers were told that the total represented one of their favorite screen actresses and they were asked to identify her and tell the name of the picture and theatre at which she would appear. An extra award was promised readers who made the neatest arrangement of the completed cut-out puzzle.

Eight advertisers took space on the page, so Pauline's face was cut into eight parts. The Citizen thought so well of the idea that it took part of the advertising space itself.

Effectively arranged book window tying up with "Scaramouche" (Metro), put over by Manager Dan Burgum of the Rialto theatre, Des Moines.

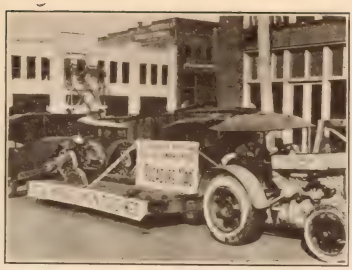
C. B. McDonald, manager of Moss's Broadway theatre, New York City, capitalized on the mysterious John T. King of the William A. Anderson trial in exploiting the showing of "Under the Red Robe."

The newspaper advertising for the Broadway during the week of the showing of this film contained the following: "The mysterious John T. King would give another $25,000 to see the $1,500,000 Cosmopolitan sensation, 'Under the Red Robe.'"

This idea was carried out in the street ballyhoo stunt. A small man, dressed in long coat and top hat, carrying a satchel from which protruded imitation twenty-five thousand dollar bills, was sent up and down the streets in the White Light section, distributing the bills to passers-by. On the back of the man was pinned a cardboard sign reading the same as the newspaper advertisement.



On the back of the imitation twenty-five thousand dollar bill was the following: "I'm the mysterious John T. King. Here's $25,000. Go and see Cosmopolitan's $1,500,000 Picture sensation 'Under the Red Robe' at B. S. Moss' Broadway theatre, Broadway at 41st Street all this week."

Crowds gathered about the man whenever he made his appearance on the street distributing his imitation bills.

Manager McDonald used a large painted sign in front of his theatre under the marquee, containing a portrait of Robert B. Mantell as Richelieu and of his attendant spirit, the "gray Cardinal." Frames of stills, paintings and posters were also used in the lobby.

Fashion Stunts Feature of "Fashion Row" Campaign

A strong exploitation campaign was put over by Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, for the showing of "Fashion Row," which was enhanced by the personal appearance of Miss Murray who gave out souvenirs and made a speech at each of her appearances on Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

This smashed up automobile was towed about the streets of Asheville, N. C., when "Pleasure Mad" was shown at the Imperial theatre.

Many tie-ups were obtained with Seventh Street merchants, the shopping district of the city, and these were given further publicity by means of a double truck in the Los Angeles Herald advertising various shops with a big type head across the pages reading, "Shop on Fashion Row." In the center of the page was a large photograph of Miss Murray with a line or two about the picture. The stores all carried "Fashion Row" signs in their windows while cards that resembled the regular street signs were attached to the lamp posts.

Three thousand little bottles of perfume were used. These were wrapped in cotton and tinsel to represent snowballs and were thrown out to the audiences at the State by Miss Murray and her husband—director Robert Leonard.

At the time of the showing of Mae Murray in "Fashion Row" at the State, a special song written and published in Los Angeles and titled "Fashion Row" was released. The song was immediately picked up by the orchestras about town after being introduced by a quartette at the theatre. This timely tie-up also greatly added to the general interest.

"Yaqui" Coogan Ballyhoos "Daddy" in Laredo

Only on the Mexican border could a theatre manager have used the exploitation on "Daddy" that Manager Epstein of the Royal theatre utilized.

A chocolate colored bootblack appeared simultaneously with the picture and announced that he was not a Mexican but a descendant of the original Yaqui Indians. The alliterative connection between the star and the tribal name meant something to Manager Epstein.

He immediately hired the youngster, dressed him in overalls and a cap and put "Yaqui" Coogan out on the streets as a ballyhoo for Jackie.

The idea got over with the majority of patrons, handed them a laugh and sold them on the idea of the coming attraction at the Royal.

Utilizes Discussion About Picture in Campaign

The censors and twenty invited guests were invited to a screening of "Flaming Youth" in advance of its showing at the Isis theatre, Houston, Texas.

"Finest moral picture imaginable for young girls," said Mrs. T. H. Eggert, censor.

Dr. J. W. Slaughter, head of the Houston Foundation, expressed a decidedly different opinion.

The Houston press made a front page story of it.

Without attempting to profit by the professor's intimation of salaciousness the manager of the theatre made a straight-forward appeal to the theatre-going public, stating that they were showing the picture because they believed it was a worthy photoplay contribution and because they thought it did contain a splendid moral. The verdict was left to the public.

Short Subjects and Serials

"Birds Of Passage" Is New Pathe Novelty

Pathe releases April 6, "Birds of Passage," heralded as a three-reel novelty portraying the annual migration of birds from northern climes to the banks of the Nile, by the Swedish ornithologist, Dr. Bengt Berg.

It is described by Pathe as covering every phase of the birds' flight from the rigours of the cold North to the warmth of the tropics. The actual camera work on this subject extended over a period of years as Dr. Bengt pursued the various routes followed by the bird swarms from Northern Europe to upper Egypt.

In addition to the scenes showing the migratory birds in passage, there are said to be interesting sidelights such as an exciting battle between two huge crocodiles and the protective role played by the crocodile bird whose principal task is to stand guard over the great sleeping dragons of the Nile and give them a warning signal as soon as there is any evidence of danger.

Archie Mayo To Direct Christie Comedies

Archie Mayo, for several years associated with many of the leading organizations as comedy director and writer, has been secured by the Christie Film Company, Inc., to direct two-reel comedies.

Mr. Mayo's first picture will be "Reno or Bust" starring Bobby Vernon, with Duane Thompson in support.

Lige Conley and cast in scenes from current Educational Mermaid Comedy, "Wide Open."

First of the Century Comedies for March Release by Universal is "Sons-In-Law," co-starring Jack Earle and Harry McCoy

Four Standard Subjects For Selznick

HANK MANN is the featured comedian in "One Day in Hollywood," the latest release in the Hollywood Series of Standard Cinema Corporation through Selznick exchanges.

L. J. Darmour of Standard says that there will be a different comedian for each of the series and that each one will be a well known funmaker.

A Jimmy Aubrey comedy has just been completed by the same producer, which will also be released through Selznick It is "The Mechanic" and Joe Rock directed. The Standard has also completed the Bruce Barton one-reel editorial, "The Just-a-Little-Late-Club" and the latest Heeza Liar cartoon, "The Sky Pilot."

Screen Snapshots No. 13 has Many Changes

According to plans of C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation only seven subjects will be shown in each issue of their one reel "Screen Snapshots" hereafter beginning with the current release, No. 13.

Fewer but better scenes is the goal desired and the company officials announce that a greater effort is being made to introduce as much diversity as possible and short stories are to be made of most topics by giving them continuity and social and special titles.

The current issue shows Clyde Cook demonstrating a new way to play golf; and other stars in the current release are John Barrymore and Irene Rich at a studio reception; Raymond Hitchcock, George Beban, Charles Hutchison and others at a beach party; Marilyn Miller and Jack Pickford in a scene of married life; Al Jolson, Mildred Harris, William Brady, Mack Sennett, Rupert Hughes and others.

"A New England Farm" is Fox Educational

On March 30 Fox Film Corporation will release another of its one reel Educationals.

"A New England Farm" is the title and the views were taken on a typical farm a few miles from Burlington, Vt. It portrays the entire day's schedule from the early morning chores to the evening gathering of the family.

Fox officials aim to make these Educationa'ls entertaining as well as highly interesting. According to this reel the average value of a hundred acre farm is $7,500 and the average annual earning of the farmer is $1,800.

Witwer Slang Classics for Grand-Asher

Twelve two reelers adapted from H. C. Witwer's "Classies In Slang" now appearing in Hearst Sunday papers and syndicates will be produced by Grand-Asher with Eddie Gribbon as the star.

Mr. Grand declared that these subjects would be typically Witwer in titling, action and style and that the series would start very shortly after the director and balance of cast are secured.

New Polar Bear Cub For Universal Serial

UNIVERSAL'S Zoo now contains a polar bear cub said to have been captured by a whaler in upper Alaska and purchased by Superintendent Charles B. Murphy.

His first picture appearance will be in support of William Duncan and Edith Johnson in "The Free Trader," a serial story now in production.

Pluto, as he is called, will be the pet of Esther Ralston, of the fur traders.

"Zeb vs. Paprika" Heads Pathe March 16 Bill

Stan Laurel's comedy, "Zeb vs. Paprika," and the fourth of the "Indian Frontier Series," "The Mandan's Oath," occupy a prominent place on Pathe's program of releases for March 16th.

"Zeb vs. Paprika" is a two-reel take-off on the classic racing event between Zev and Papyrus, in which Laurel plays the role of "Dippy" Donawho. James Finlayson, Ena Gregory, and George Rowe are in support.

"The Mandan's Oath" embodies a story of vengeance, in which Indian cunning is pitted against the White Man's courage. In addition to the full-blooded Indian cast, Hedda Nova, Jack Mower, Al Hallett, and William Bertram have prominent roles.

"Love's Reward" is a story of love and villainy enacted by Hal Roach's aggregation of animal players.

"Why Mice Leave Home" is a fantasy in which Farmer Al Falfa and Milton Cat get rid of an army of mischievous mice by sending them skyrocketing to the moon.

The ninth chapter of "The Way Of A Man," Pathe Review No. 11, Topics Of The Day No. 11 and Pathe News issues Nos. 22 and 23 complete the week's program.

First Two Reel Western By Ernest Laemmle

Pete Morrison and Elinor Field are the featured players in the first two-reel Western completed by Ernest Laemmle at Universal City.

The temporary title is "Stampeding the Truth" from the story by William Wing. Jack Dougherty, who has just returned from his honeymoon with Barbara La Marr, is featured in the second two-reel Western being produced by Young Laemmle.

Charles Chase's newest one reel comedy for Pathe is "Love's Detour."

Hal Roach's current two-reel "Our Gang" comedy for Pathe distribution shows the kids as Pirates and is ferociously entitled "The Buccaneers."

Army-Navy Manoeuvres in Pictures

Fox News Issue Shows "Attack" of Enemy Fleet and "Blue" Division's Defense

Fox News cameramen made a very special effort to comprehensively cover all phases of the recent joint manoeuvers of the U. S. Army and the combined Atlantic and Pacific fleets and rushed the result very promptly to the screens.

The Fox News picture shows the "attack" by the "Black" or enemy fleet, the landing of attacking troops behind a smoke screen, the concentration of the Blue or defending fleet on the Pacific side of the Canal, the trip eastward through the Canal by the Blue Fleet and the firing on the Canal defenses by the "enemy" fleet from the Atlantic side.

It was on the result of these manoeuvers that the joint board of Army and Navy umpires decided that the defenses of the Canal were inadequate, and their report will be the basis of an effort to gain in congress an appropriation of $15,000,000 or more to strengthen the Canal defenses, particularly with regard to long range guns.

One of the Fox News cameramen, at the close of the war game, filmed the blasting of a sharp corner of the canal at La Pita Point and then taking a canal boat back to Colon, is said to have noticed portions of earth on one of the banks rolling down to the water and set up his camera and began cranking.

When the scene was over he despatched his negative to New York and Fox News was able to present a Panama Canal slide.

Pathe Serial Sales Head Returns from Tour

When Edgar O. Brooks, Serial Sales Manager for Pathe, returned last week from a tour of exchanges and exhibitors in Middle West centers he declared coming serials based on some well known author's novel will excite greater interest.

He pointed to coming Pathe Serials as adapted from widely read books such as "Leatherstocking" by James Fenimore Cooper and "The Fortieth Door," from Mary Hastings Bradley's novel.

Semon Finishes Another Vitagraph Comedy

"Trouble Brewing" is the fourth Vitagraph completed by Larry Semon this season and is now being printed.

Special Lobby Card For New "Plastigrams"

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, Inc., has prepared a special lobby card which it calculates will be a novel and effective exploitation stunt for use with the Ives-Leventhal Plastigrams, the "Third Dimension Movie," released the latter part of March.

The card is described by Educational as being 11x14 inches, containing an illustration said to be printed in a manner closely approaching the printing process used in making the motion picture.

Two images differing only in the optical angle in which they have been photographed, are superimposed in red and blue ink. A pair of red and blue glasses accompanies the card, and by viewing the card through the special glasses, a startling stereoptical effect is said to be realized.

It is intended for use in a lobby frame, with the glasses suspended near it for use of patrons or visitors to the lobby.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Zeb vs. Paprika"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WE have a travesty on the international horse race of last season and the comedian, Stan Laurel, appears in the role of "Dippy Donawho," the foreign jockey.

There is plenty of action in this one and James Finlayson, Ena Gregory and George Rowe appear in the comedian's support.

Laurel is shown in training for the big event under forced training rations to reduce his weight but seems to gain more pounds every moment. He almost fails to get into the race track for the race because the gate keepers insist on collecting his paid admission ticket.

After one of the wierdest horse races on record where both drivers get thrown many times Paprika is finally declared winner. However, it is found that while Paprika's jockey rode in the winning horse he had overtaken the American horse by mistake after a fall and remount and therefore America won.

The closing scene shows the jockey rowing his employer back to Europe. This one should be good for a great many hearty laughs.—TOMHAM.

"The Oriental Game"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

PAL, the dog is featured in this one with Harry Sweet. Harry has a rival for the hand of a fair damsel. The girl is disappointed because neither of her suitors brings candy. Harry Radios Pal to bring along a box of the sweets. The rival sees Pal with the package and lures it away from him. Pal reciprocates by substituting a fake package for the real one, much to the chagrin of the rival. The latter telephones to a band of roughnecks to come over to the girl's house and "Get" Harry. They try it with dynamite, but are thwarted by Pal. But for the well trained canine the picture would have little to recommend it.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Why Mice Leave Home"
(Pathe—One Reel)

WHEN the farmer and the cat are pestered to death by an army of mice they finally produce a trap that sends every mouse to the moon by skyrocket.

In this Aesop Film Fable the mice find that the moon is really made out of green cheese and proceed to eat their temporary home with great relish.

They consequently fall to the earth again from their masticated sphere and continue to bother the farmer and his cat forever after. This is a good one and up to the cartoonist's regular standard.— TOMHAM.

"The Mandan's Oath"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

SCHEDULED as fourth in the series of Indian Frontier Tales this one holds its own with the former three in point of action and merit.

In addition to the many full-blooded Indians in the cast we see Hedda Nova, Jack Mower, Al Hallett and William Pertram. Beautiful scenery features every picture in this series.

An old Indian Chief tells what he declares is a true story and the film is a description of it. When in 1838 a smallpox epidemic almost exterminated the Mandan Tribe many Indians blamed the whites and hated them thoroughly. One takes false oath and the apparent judgment of the Great Spirit augmented by a demented Scotch Bagpiper, brought about the downfall of the falsifier.—TOMHAM.

"Big Boy Blue"
(Universal—Two Reels)

KID ROBERTSON in this number 6 of the Leather Pushers series saves the life of the daughter of an aristocratic college president in a runaway and promptly falls desperately in love with her. He winds up his training in a hammock with her, though he is to defend his lightweight championship title against Wildcat George that night. The irate father refuses to tolerate the pugilist. He goes to the fight on a ticket inadvertently dropped by the Kid and becomes wildly enthused over the skill of the latter. The result is that he agrees to accept him as a future son-in-law. This is among the best of this fighting series shown to date.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Sculptor's Paradise"
(Fox—One Reel)

VIEWS of the marble mountains at Carrara, Italy are shown in this Fox-Educational reel, and the process of cutting the marble is described in detail. A sort of cutters aristocracy has been established due to the fact that most of the artisans are descendants of people who have been engaged in this work for centuries back. Both the old and the new methods of cutting the marble are used, that of the hammer and chisel method, and the modern one of dynamiting it. Thousands of tons of marble cut into blocks are shown awaiting shipment to all parts of the world. Views of several of the well-known landmarks of Europe which are constructed of this marble are shown such as,—The Ducal Palace at Venice—The Peace Palace at the Hague, etc., which are beautiful examples of the marble cutters art.

An instructive and entertaining reel which ought to interest the spectator.—HAROLD FLAVIN

"Reno or Bust"
(Educational—Two Reels)

BOBBY VERNON elopes with Duane Thompson and marries her against the wishes of her mother, who has selected the rival for her. The girl is bustled off to Reno for a divorce and is followed by Bobby, whose arrest is ordered on arrival. This starts a merry chase, in which Bobby eludes his pursuers, lures them all into a closed police patrol wagon, drives them out on the desert where he threatens to leave them as prey for wild animals unless all agree to another marriage ceremony on the spot. There is more real comedy in this one than in any picture Bobby Vernon has made for a long, long time. It is a laugh from start to finish.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Love's Reward"
(Pathe—One Reel)

HERE'S where the clever monkeys, Dippy Doo Dads, put on a regular old-time melodrama and get laughs galore.

The irate proprietor of the hotel discharges his hotel clerk after the "Hawkshaw" of the inn tells him the young upstart is flirting with his daughter.

But when the young fellow returns and scales a water pipe to elope with the daughter he is the ready-made hero at hand to save the landlord from being blown up with dynamite by two villains who had robbed the hotel safe.

And he is then suitably rewarded with the hand, or is it paw, of the "daughter."—TOMHAM.

"Should Poker Players Marry?"
(Universal—One Reel)

NERVY NED'S wife returns unexpectedly the morning following a long poker session and discovers all the evidence of the happenings of the night before. She vows that Ned's poker playing days are over and endeavors to keep him at home by strewing tacks on the floor and tying a string to him while he sleeps. Midnight sounds the call to the apartment and the game several floors above. Ned discovers the tacks but not the string. Wifey wakens and follows the string. Despite Ned's spirit of bravado she breaks up the game and messes up Ned. Then hastening to the street she calls upon a policeman to arrest her husband for threatening her. As they proceed to make the arrest, the badly mutilated form of the husband is borne out on a stretcher as the cop beats a retreat. There are some fairly humorous situations that should go well in the neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Keep Healthy"
(Universal—One Reel)

SLIM SUMMERVILLE and Bobby Dunn, gardener and janitor in a sanatorium, make a botch of their respective jobs and are detailed to go out and bring business to the institution. They conceive the idea of a doctor and patient and take advantage of small crowds to effect a miraculous cure. The stunt works until a real patient undergoes a test. There are some humorous situations, but for the most part the comedy is forced and crude.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Under Orders"
(Educational—Two Reels)

CLYDE COOK has a splendid comedy vehicle in this one, which was funny enough to keep a lot of hard boiled reviewers laughing throughout. A henpecked husband who is compelled to do all of the household chores, he tires of his job and enlists in the Army, where he goes through some extremely funny evolutions. The story is a good one and one comedy situation follows closely upon another. It is sure to be liked where the short subject is appreciated.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathe Review
(One Reel)

DIVERSIFIED subjects interest and entertain in the current offering and it is about on a par with the preceding releases.

This one presents "Burrow Dwellers," interesting glimpses of the woodchuck and the gopher; "Working In Glass," showing the making of an art glass window; "The Lost Rider", depicting the wanderings of a phantom rider; and a Pathecolor presentation, titled "The Women of Portugal."—TOMHAM.

Pathe Review No. 11

THIS one is entertaining throughout and one of the leading features is the raking of flowers by a dredge boat and showing how Florida is ridding her rivers of the water hyacinth pest. It also includes "In Far-Off Lands," a pictorial study of the river people of the Hwang-Po, China; "Natural History Series," presenting a camera visit to a hornet's nest; "The Grottoes of Royan," a Pathe color presentation with views of the Bay of Biscay, France.—TOMHAM.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Phantom Horseman

(Universal—4399 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS western bears all the earmarks of being written hurriedly — and just as hurriedly produced. The idea lacks any inspiration and the manner in which it is developed does not credit an audience with much intelligence. It's all about a mysterious night rider who preys upon the community, committing his crimes under heavy disguise. When the hero is elected sheriff the plot is given away through the antagonism he inspires from the camp Croesus.

The plot gets nowhere. While it is being unfolded there is a plentiful supply of gaps. The idea being slight the director has tried to cover up its shortcomings — but they are only emphasized. You will appreciate it is ancient of incident when the miner intends to foreclose the mortgage on the heroine's home unless she consents to marry him. Some day a western will be shown which features the villain married and unable to exercise such a demand. It is a picture padded to keep it moving — but the action is valueless.

There are two climaxes — one presenting the night rider robbing and murdering his victim, the other presenting his trial in court. It is assumed from the start that the newly-elected sheriff (the hero) and the heroine know one another — yet the girl does not know where he lives — and comes upon his cabin purely by accident. Another gap shows the camp as a community of wooden shacks and log stores and huts — yet it has a bank that would do credit to a good-sized town. The heroine's brother is discovered as the mysterious rider and is convicted in short order — much of the action being indicated through the captions. So the sheriff performs the familiar sacrifice and confesses to the other's guilt. His motive is out of place here — and the action which involves him carries no weight in view of the brother's ultimate suicide and written confession. He was prompted to become a marauder because of his gambling obligations to the villain.

Such a story should have been treated with all the customary hokum or else been dressed up with realities. The love interest is negligent. The plot should have been put over in regular old "shoot-'em-up" style.

THEME. Western melodrama based upon determination of sheriff to capture mysterious night rider. Learns that outlaw is sweetheart's brother and assumes his guilt. Sacrifice is in vain when culprit confesses.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The backgrounds and atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Has hokum plot to begin with—and giving the director the benefit of the doubt, he has been unable to make anything out of it. The action is convenient and filled with gaps. Has not introduced any saving situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES.—Ballyhoo this one with a rider on horseback garber like character in picture. Play up Hoxie if he is popular in your town.

DRAWING POWER. For daily change houses. Should be supported by strong bill.

SUMMARY. A mediocre western which has very little story background. Is filled with coincidence—and several gaps. Situations arrived at too conveniently. Old-fashioned in every particular—the appeal resting in the exteriors and star's horsemanship.

THE CAST

Bob Winton	Jack Hoxie
Dorothy Mason	Lillian Rich
Jefferson Williams	Wade Botsler
Deputy Sheriff	Billy McCall
Benny	Ben Corbett
Judge	George A. Williams
Maxwell's Mother	Ruby Lafayette

By Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Robert North Bradbury.

SYNOPSIS. Hero, elected sheriff, is determined to rid camp of mysterious outlaw. Loan shark is antagonistic toward him—and former threatens to foreclose mortgage on home of heroine unless she marries him. She refuses. The outlaw commits murder and is caught. He is the girl's brother. The sheriff attempts to sacrifice himself for the sake of the girl, but the culprit kills himself, leaving a written confession.

Montmartre

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IT is hard to believe that the Lubitsch of "The Marriage Circle," is the Lubitsch of "Montmartre." But to his credit be it said that he had something to work with on the former production, while he had less than nothing at hand in "Montmartre," which is a foreign-made picture undoubtedly of ancient vintage and which is being dragged into the light of day at a time when its release will do nothing but harm to all concerned in its handling. It is unfortunate that such a mediocre production is released after Pola Negri's fine work in "Shadows of Paris."

The story of "Montmartre," is laid in the Paris Latin Quarter of 60 years ago and the picture looks as though it might have been made at the same time. Even Mlle. Negri's beauty and talent have failed to aid it one iota. The settings are bizarre and stage-like. The supporting cast is so bad it is funny and we don't blame anyone for not crediting any of the acting. We will wager that the alleged villain in this picture is the most excruciatingly amusing fellow we've ever seen and his personal adornment, even if it was the style over a half century ago, should suggest something new in clown clothes for our own film funsters.

The feature is in seven reels. It could have been done in three. The story is anything but original and fails to hold the interest at any point. If there was a misleading title, this feature has it. "Montmartre" suggests gayety, abandonment, the joy of life. You find nothing but sad stuff here, after you have been given a glimpse of an alleged Paris cafe of yesteryear. Even the costumes are drab and dead. The characters seem to be on string-like mannikins — being let into the scene, pulled about and dragged off. The continuity is "conspicuous for its absence."

THEME. A dramatic romance laid in the Paris Latin Quarter of 60 years ago dealing with the love of a grisette for a young composer and the efforts of the villain to keep the two apart—even when they are married.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Some of Pola Negri's emotional moments. The scene in which the younger composer goes to conduct the big orchestra on his "day of triumph," and leaves his young wife behind. The scenes in the Paris cafe.

DIRECTION. Having nothing to work with, the director has produced nothing. The direction in this picture is so bad that it is hard to understand that Lubitsch was at the small end of the megaphone. We'll give the noted director the benefit of the doubt.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Your only opportunity on exploitation here is to play up the name of Pola Negri. The less you say about the picture the better.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for small theatres and some neighborhood houses, but look at it before you book it so that you may be sure if your patrons, whom you know better than anyone else, will stand for it.

SUMMARY. This is one of the worst of the Pola Negri pictures made abroad. There is nothing whatever in this one to justify its release on this side of the big pond, because it is so poorly done and so different from American-made productions that your patrons can't help but notice the difference. The acting, outside that of the star, is so poor it looks like burlesque instead of drama.

THE CAST

Yvette, a dancing girl	Pola Negri

Adapted from the play, "The Flame," by John Mueller. Edited and titled by Hector Turnbull.

SYNOPSIS. Yvette, up against it financially and being hounded by her boarding house mistress for payment, goes forth to seek the necessary hundred pounds. She is on the point of collecting it from Papa Lemonier, when a "sheik," who has followed her takes exception to the proceeding and starts a fight. Yvette flees. In fleeing she bumps into Andre Leduc, a young composer. It is a case of love at first sight. The rest of the action deals with the courtship, marriage and domestic life of the couple with Raoul Fournier, the villain, doing his best to cause trouble by exposing Yvette as being quite below Andre's station in life.

Fool's Highway

(Universal—8 Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a romance of the Bowery as this erstwhile colorful street of New York flourished thirty years ago. Carrying an atmosphere redolent of a bygone day when the boys rode bicycles built for two — when the gangster feuds were settled by brawny fists instead of guns — when the East Side politician held sway in the back room of the corner saloon — when the L trains were driven by steam power — when the district was chiefly populated by Irish and Germans — with a sprinkling of Hebrews — when beer could be had from a large schooner for five cents — it weaves a fine sentiment — and still is realistic enough to pass as a story out of life. It is even said that it is a chapter from the adventures of the author, Owen Kildare.

While its theme is established on romance it contains a rich supply of relevant incident — such as characterized the Bowery neighborhood of the distant past. The belle of the Bowery has two beaux — one a swaggering bully who settles his arguments with his fists — whose power over the girl is inspired through her fear of him — the other a Jewish tailor's apprentice who is meek and humble, but whose heart is generous.

The story could dispense with a couple of reels in pointing its climax, as too much expression is given to the romantic element — and not enough to the color of the Bowery. We see the transformation of the bully under the influence of the girl's affection. And when he is given a brutal punishment by a group of the politician's hirelings (he is supposed to have doubled-crossed the political boss) his character emerges and he suffers humility.

The backgrounds are truly atmospheric of the famous street — and the incident is always picturesque. The fights are colorful — and so are the characters — and it is a picture which builds evenly and progressively to its conclusion — and sending out on the way plenty of sentiment, love interest, melodramatic punches, pathos — and heart appeal. It carries personality in its story and characterization. Pat O'Malley, as the fighting Irishman, is just what he represents himself to be here — and gives a vigorous, picturesque performance. Mary Philbin, as his Mamie Rose, lends a wistful, fragrant appeal, while William Collier, Jr., and Max Davidson as the Jewish characters are thoroughly in character. These players and their associates, in their old-fashioned attire, might have stepped out of ancient tin-types. A compelling little story this — one which records accurately and vividly the glorious days of the Bowery of '92.

THEME. Romance with melodramatic trimmings of Bowery characters of thirty years ago with Irish bully winning sweetheart from Hebrew rival. She makes him over to respect his associates without resorting to fistic display.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The colorful work of Pat O'Malley. The appealing charm of Mary Philbin. The well-rounded cast. The titles. The incident. The background and atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Takes simple romance and holds interest by balancing love element with picturesque incident. Gives it genuine atmospheric background—and extracts the utmost from story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The songs typical of the period, such as "Sidewalks of New York," etc. Dress ushers in costumes of early nineties. Put on atmospheric prologue. Play up author. Play up the Bowery.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any community.

SUMMARY. An absorbing romance of the Bowery in its heyday—treated with sufficient sentiment, heart interest and melodrama. Rich in atmosphere and neatly acted.

THE CAST

Mamie Rose	Mary Philbin
Mike Kildare	Pat O'Malley
The Boss	Lincoln Plummer
Jackie Doodle	Edwin J. Brady
Old Levi	Max Davidson
Max	William Collier, Jr.
Mrs. Flannigan	Kate Price
Mamie's Father	Charles Murray
Ole Larsen	Sherry Tansey
Chuck Connors	Steve Murphy

By Owen Kildare. Directed by Irving Cummings.

SYNOPSIS. Swaggering Irish youth of Bowery becomes leader of district through his ability with his fists. Loves Irish girl who respects and fears him. She is also attracted to humble Jewish boy who is meek and gentle. The Irishman eliminates his rival, but loses his sweetheart's love until he realizes that brute strength is of no avail. He takes severe punishment and reforms.

Poisoned Paradise

(Preferred—6800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ALL the necessary elements which make up the composition of entertaining drama are indicated in this melodramatic romance, the background of which is that playground of the world—Monte Carlo. Those responsible for transferring Robert W. Service's novel to the screen have done a good job. They have covered up its obviousness with interesting incident and a deal of suspense—and have established the romance without embroidering it with mawkish sentiment. Surely any tale of Monte Carlo with its suggestion of tragedy as a gambler realizes that he cannot break the bank is certain to contain a sentimental flourish. This note is merely indicated here.

What is emphasized is the establishing of the romance—and the suspense as a gang of crooks endeavor to steal a mathematician's system of winning at the roulette table. Gasnier has provided an atmospheric background—and starts the story by planting the characters as victims of destiny. It is easy to see the romantic finish, but the interlude is filled with some melodramatic incident which furnishes some suspense.

The director has shown discretion in the composition of his scenes —and establishes all the elements. The only criticism is he retards his action by concentrating too long on the individual sequences. The picture is neatly played by Clara Bow whose vibrant personality is adaptable to the role of the little Parisienne. Kenneth Harlan is a likely hero—and Raymond Griffith, who seems to direct himself, lends color to the gay bounder. The story is well constructed—and picturized with considerable human touches.

THEME. Romantic melodrama with a Monte Carlo background, revolving around youth and girl who fall in love. He is victimized by crooks, but is saved by timely rescue.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmospheric backgrounds. The interiors. The fine acting by Clara Bow, Kenneth Harlan, Carmel Myers and Josef Swickard. The intimate scenes in the hotel. The incident in the Casino. The climax.

DIRECTION. Takes conventional story and makes it highly interesting through dovetailing it with incident and variety of elements. Has well constructed script and points it toward suspensive climax. Only fault is holding scenes too long. Gives it atmospheric backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title which is certain to arouse curiosity. Mention as likely tale of Monte Carlo — one containing all the drama which is usually identified with the world's playground. Mention cast — and play up Clara Bow.

DRAWING POWER. Good for downtown houses. Should interest all types of audiences.

SUMMARY. An interesting picture has been made from conventional plot — which is due to a well-prepared script — and direction which employs all the dramatic elements. Drags here and there, but the action is always satisfying. Neatly played and staged.

THE CAST

Hugh Kildair, Gilbert Kildair	Kenneth Harlan
Margot Le Blanc	Clara Bow
Mrs. G. Kildair	Barbara Tennant
Krantz	Andre de Beranger
Hugh Kildair (as child)	Frankie Lee
Margot Le Blanc (as child)	Peaches Jackson
Mrs. Belmire	Carmel Myers
Martel	Raymond Griffith
Professor Durand	Joseph Swickard
Madame Tranquille	Evelyn Selbie
Dr. Bergius	Michael Varconi

By Robert W. Service. Adapted by Waldemar Young. Directed by Louis Gasnier.

SYNOPSIS. Girl from Paris underworld meets English youth in Monte Carlo. He has become successful in disposing of his paintings, while she is on verge of starvation. He saves her from arrest, buys her food and offers her job as his housekeeper. She shows her gratitude by taking it. They fall in love—and the youth is also successful in gambling at Casino. He is victimized by crooks eager to learn "system" of breaking the bank—a "system" evolved by professor. He is eventually rescued. Love triumphs.

The Fighting Coward

(Paramount—Seven Reels)
(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CHALK up another hit for James Cruze. Here's a picture that answers the continual demand for "something different." Taking his company right down into the heart of Dixie, Natchez, Mississippi, to be specific, Mr. Cruze has taken Booth Tarkington's story of ante-bellum days along the famous waterway and developed it into one of the most delightful pictures we've seen in several months — a picture which is at once a drama, a comedy, a satire and a romance.

"The Fighting Coward" pokes fun at the code of honor as it was understood by certain Southern "gentlemen," of a half century ago, when, if we are to believe the events here pictured, life was the cheapest thing below the Mason-Dixon line and when these famous figh-tahs and kil-lahs thought nothing of ordering ham and eggs after bumping off a few humans.

The picture is doubly interesting on account of its quaint background of old southern mansions and side-wheel steamboats, of life on levee, plantation and aboard the quaint river craft. It is quite a treat after all the society stuff and parlor backgrounds.

The cast is all-star in the true sense of the word and the picture "makes" Cullen Landis, who is a knockout as the poetry-reading, butterfly-chasing youth who becomes the "notorious Colonel Blake," and the "terror of the country." His fight with Captain Blackie after he has decided to "stop being afraid," will drag the audience to the end of the seats and on the other hand the situation when the colonel drives his former humiliator home naked except for a "wench's gown," will fill the house with laughter. Ernest Torrence as a river-boat "beau brummel," a role somewhat similar to his character in "The Covered Wagon," adds another cameo to his gallery. Mary Astor is charming as a southern belle and Phyllis Haver shows improvement over some recent endeavors as a regular actress. Noah Beery as Captain Blackie furnishes a lot of fun.

THEME. A comedy drama of pre-Civil war days along the Mississippi setting forth the metamorphosis of a peaceful youth into a famous "kil-lah."

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The shooting by Major Patterson of his enemy as he tries to sneak aboard boat. The scenes between Noah Beery and Torrence in the gambling house. The fight between Landis and Beery. The scenes on the boat when Tom meets his ancient foe and makes him surrender everything, even his clothes. The acting of the entire cast. The delightful southern backgrounds.

DIRECTION. James Cruze has packed all the elements in this picture and he has succeeded in holding the interest of the spectator every second. He has developed some delightful comedy as well as thrilling drama.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the cast. Tell about the southern scenery, the delightfully droll comedy and the thrills. Tie up on the Booth Tarkington story, "Magnolia," on which the picture is based. Use James Cruze's name big.

DRAWING POWER.—Suitable for any house at any time.

SUMMARY. One of the most entertaining pictures of the season to date. Finely acted, admirably directed and "shot" in the exact locale of the story at Natchez. this one should have a wide appeal. It is filled with fun, thrills and romance.

THE CAST

General Rumford ..... Bruce Covington
Mrs. Rumford ..... Helen Dunbar
Tom Rumford ..... Cullen Landis
Lucy ..... Mary Astor
Elvira ..... Phyllis Haver
Major Patterson ..... G. Raymond Nye
Joe Patterson ..... Richard R. Neill
General Orlando Jackson ..... Ernest Torrence
Captain Blackie ..... Noah Beery
Mexico ..... Carmen Phillips

By Booth Tarkington. Directed by James Cruze. Scenario by Walter Woods.

SYNOPSIS. Tom Rumford is driven from his father's home because the latter won't have anything cowardly in it. He goes to a neighboring city and there in a gambling house meets General Orlando Jackson who teaches him how to be a notorious Kil-lah. Using his knowledge as well as skill, he takes to the river boats with the "general" and soon wins a reputation as a fighter. He returns home and "cleans up" all those who participated in his early humiliation and wins his old sweetheart.

Thy Name Is Woman

(Mayer-Metro—9087 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S quite possible that a few of our contemporaries on the New York morning dailies in hurling their brickbats at this picture because of its orthodox triangle were victims of sub-conscious suggestion through being familiar with the failure of the original play — a play carrying but three characters. Ordinarily such a simple triangle would have been grossly maltreated — and those who criticize it do not credit the painstaking work which must have occupied Fred Niblo and Bess Meredyth, the adaptor, in fashioning an absorbing, straightforward, moving story.

The way it is treated here (we did not see the original) it bears a similarity to any tale of Latin love and vengeance which has furnished ideas for Neapolitan and Castilian tragedies and operas. Niblo knew what he was up against. And he has constructed a picture which never varies from its theme, nor does he trespass in the domains of hokum. He has added four more characters, though one could be eliminated insofar as sustaining the dramatic note is concerned. What we admire about the director's work is his ability to keep our interest considering the slight structure of his plot. He presents his triangle early — showing a soldier promised a sergeant's stripes if he will make love to a smuggler's wife and, by winning her affection and confidence prevail upon her to deliver her husband's contraband. Yet through the concluding reels our attention is focused upon this play of youth and age for a woman's love.

It's very easy to tear down this simple plot structure and ask why isn't this done — or why didn't they do such and such a thing. What we sensed was some impending tragedy — and it came when the husband stabbed his wife. What he owned he kept. He did what Neapolitans and Castilians have ever done in song and story — and most likely in real life. It is direct, progressive action — with not a scene, not a detail wasted. Such a story needed players capable of expressing the utmost in emotion. And William V. Mong, Barbara La Marr and Ramon Navarro held us in suspense — because there was imagination and feeling in their work.

Niblo makes the story life-like except for a movie ending. His backgrounds and atmosphere are richly suggestive. It carries striking scenes. The director deserves praise for his expressive dramatic value. Suspense is indicated all the way. It moves straight to its climax — and is much more sincere in its expression of Latin vengeance than the "pot-boilers" posing as true replicas of American triangles. The only points we criticize are the definitions of woman's qualities engraved on sub-title slabs — and the movie ending. And these are insignificient faults.

THEME. Tragic drama revolving around eternal triangle, with young soldier winning love of aged smuggler's wife. The husband kills her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The unusually fine detail—The progressive action. The suspense. The magnificent backgrounds. The rich atmosphere. The outstanding performances by leading players.

DIRECTION. Takes simple triangle and holds interest through concentrating upon conflict. Carries suspense all the way. Is compact and straightforward in action. Sticks to theme and gets utmost from it.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put on atmospheric prologue—dancing numbers, etc. Play up Niblo and cast.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house.

SUMMARY. A compact, dynamic drama of the triangle —which concentrates upon theme. Carries vital suspense— and is finely acted. Not a scene wasted. Every detail— every incident carries a meaning.

Dolores ..... Edith Roberts

By Benjamin Glazer and Karl Schonherr. Scenario by Bess Meredyth. Directed by Fred Niblo

SYNOPSIS. Young soldier is promised a sergeant's stripes if he will make love to smuggler's wife — thus winning her affection so that she will disclose her husband's illicit booty. He is torn between love and duty — and realizes that he will be dishonored if he fails to fulfil his mission. He decides to escape with the wife —but her husband kills her. The soldier is saved from court-martial by the aid of commandante's daughter.

Icebound

(Paramount—6471 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NO director has a better gift of expressing small-town life and character than William de Mille. Give him a play of small-town reactions toward the larger things of life and he will make it ring with a genuine human note. He demonstrated his talent for getting down to the core of simple virtues and vices with "Miss Lulu Bett," and with the Pulitzer prize play by Owen Davis. He presents a picture which is intelligently handled — one marked for its restraint and simplicity.

Unlike his brother he does not cater to trimmings and trappings. Rather does he cater to the fundamentals which compose good, sound drama. His pictures may not be the best box-office bets, but they are invariably substantial and truthful. If we were to select a director capable of expressing the human note as it is revealed in the small communities, William de Mille would be our choice. He does not trespass outside his element. He merely takes the simple facts and gives them a semblance of reality.

"Icebound" is a study of revolt — a study of a discontented youth lately returned from the trenches. There is a frigid atmosphere back home which refuses to thaw. He cannot reconcile himself to it. Meanwhile his aged mother is the center of a family quarrel. The director presents us a situation which is unduly realistic — one touched with a grim humor — one skillfully handled. A few of her children are grouped in the very atmospheric parlor waiting for her to die in order to benefit by the will. But she leaves her estate to a kindly orphan with the condition that she must marry the favorite child — the indolent hero. When the boy becomes involved in a scrap he is placed on probation to work for the heroine or suffer a prison confinement.

It's a sombre drama but it is lightened here and there with flashes of humor. The director has not tried to make melodrama from it. He treats it sympathetically — and sticks to his theme. The smug hypocrisy of the icebound community is well expressed. It is a compact little study — which after the death of the aged mother resolves itself into a romantic conflict. The drabness of the atmosphere becomes radiant with color — when the central figures find themselves in love. The best performance is offered by Alice Chapin as the New England mother. Richard Dix and Lois Wilson in the heaviest roles are adequate.

THEME. Drama of revolt in New England town—with hero discontented over lack of warmth in his home and community. Has conflict with relatives—and is forced to work for girl or suffer prison confinement. Romance triumphs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The painstaking detail—accurate to small town homes. The performances of leading players. The grim humor in scene when grasping relatives await death of mother. The true-to-life incident.

DIRECTION. Builds it sympathetically and in straightforward manner. Uses restraint and sticks to theme. Carries out characteristics of smug complacency in small town. Injects human note—which is sustained to end.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Exploit as winning prize play of last season. Play up author, director, and leading players. Exploit theme. Bill as picture of real life.

DRAWING POWER. For intelligent audiences.

SUMMARY. A fine exposition of small town smugness—and the rebellion by youth of imagination. Is neatly sketched as to character—and rich in detail.

By Owen Davis. Adapted by Clara Beranger. Directed by William de Mille.

SYNOPSIS. A charitable figure in smug New England home is left a small fortune with the provision that she marry her benefactress' son and reform him. When a streak of wildness manifests itself and causes him to run afoul of the law, he is placed on probation and compelled to work for girl. He reluctantly obeys her. Eventually they realize they love one another—and the probation is lifted.

The Wolf Man

(Fox—5145 Feet)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

DUAL personalities have afforded many interesting stories on both stage and screen. John Gilbert offers one of these double roles in this Fox picture. The story in its entirety is just about as new as this dual personality theme. It is one of those wild and woolly hair raising tales of the ten, twenty and thirty cent melodramatic variety, rather poorly constructed, but nevertheless having some exceedingly tense situations which might hold an audience enthralled if said audience did not stop to think what it was all about.

An inoffensive monocle seems to be responsible for the crowding into five reels of more melodrama than is usually seen in an episodic picture of many chapters. John Gilbert has only to adjust that monocle to transform himself from a gentleman to a beast. The monocle and the transformation invariably come following a tilt with John Barleycorn. Murder or a trifle less follow in the wake of the monocle.

Norma Shearer bears the brunt of the beast side of John Gilbert. It takes some little time to inject her into the picture, but when she does finally make her appearance she certainly becomes involved in more harrowing situations than would ordinarily fall to the lot of a score of adventuresome girls in a lifetime. But Norma, an English girl of the highest culture, brings it all on herself by wandering from the palatial private car of her aristocratic father into a lumber camp saloon where a wild orgy is in progress.

Had John Gilbert not a moment previously adjusted his monocle all might have been well with Norma at that, but then there would have been no occasion for the hand to hand fight with the half-breed, the abduction of Miss Shearer nor the wild ride down those tempestuous rapids, which offered the big thrill of the picture.

It certainly is rapid-fire stuff after the hero's brother makes him think he has murdered the brother of his sweetheart and advises him to shake the dust of England from his feet.

THEME. Melodrama of the ten, twenty thirty variety in which a dual personality prompts the beast side of the man to abduct the girl, but finally to conquor his poorer side and win the love of the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fights between Gerald Stanley and the half-breed, the thrilling race down the rapids and the other tensely dramatic situations.

DIRECTION. Hardly establishes the poorer side of Gerald Stanley in the early scenes as the demon he proves in later developments. Has a somewhat impossible story with which to work. Gets full value out of most of his characters and dramatic situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the thrills with which the picture abounds. The chase down the rapids affords a good angle as does the fight between Gilbert and the half-breed. The title is good for a number of exploitation stunts.

DRAWING POWER. Should go well in program houses.

SUMMARY. A picture replete with exciting incidents which are linked together in a somewhat flimsy story, but nevertheless should hold the interest of a not too critical audience.

Director, Edmund Mortimer. Story and Scenario by Frederick and Fanny Hatton

SYNOPSIS. Gerald Stanley of dual personality is persuaded by his brother that he has committed a murder. He leaves England and a year later is established in Quebec as foreman of a lumber camp. Daughter of English magnate leaves private car and wanders into saloon where lumbermen's orgy is in progress. Is abducted by Stanley and escapes violence with him by wild dash down rapids. Action of water transforms Stanley from beast to gentleman and he wins the love of the girl.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Wild Oranges"—Goldwyn, Capitol, New York

Robert E. Sherwood, New York Herald:—"It is deserving of rank as one of the silent drama's finest achievements. 'Wild Oranges' is Mr. Vidor's first serious bid for greatness * * * 'Wild Oranges' represents the movie at its highest point of development."

Quinn Martin, World:—'A picturepiay which will be generally liked almost everywhere. King Vidor has looked on at the work of Griffith and Lubitsch and profited by the simplicity of their methods."

Louella Parsons, American:—"'Wild Oranges,' from the standpoint of direction and photography, is deserving of the most superlative language. With the possible exception of 'One Exciting Night,' I have never seen suggestion conveyed with more subtlety than Mr. Vidor gives us in 'Wild Oranges.' As an example of what can be done on the screen we believe everyone should see it."

Aileen St. John Brenon, Telegraph:—"King Vidor is a young director who has made remarkable strides in a comparatively few years, and in 'Wild Oranges' he has done some remarkably fine work."

Don Allen, Evening World:—"Here, we think, is a real screen entertainment. King Vidor has taken a story with five vital characters and has brought forth a film of intense interest and charm."

F. W. Mordaunt Hall, Times:—"King Vidor, the director, has obtained some really excellent effects, an entertaining and thrilling picture.

"America"—Forty-Fourth St.; New York

Quinn Martin, World:—"The most stirring thing of its kind ever made is 'America,' at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. Will set a new standard of achievement in the picture play fully as high and commanding as Mr. Griffith's 'Birth of a Nation' set in its day. Griffith passes definitely into the ranks of the immortals."

Don Allen, World:—"'See America First' is the best slogan in pictures today. D. W. Griffith's picture brings every bit of patriotism to the boiling point. We cannot recall once since 'The Birth of a Nation' when we so much desired to express our enthusiasm."

Daily News:—"Griffith's touch still magic, 'America' proves. No one can outdo him. The ride of Paul Revere is heart-shaking."

Robert Sherwood, Herald:—"Never such applause. Paul Revere's ride is perhaps the most thrilling episode the movies ever achieved. For spectacular dash, coupled with tremendous historic significance, it has no equal."

Times:—"Something to be remembered, something greater than even Griffith has ever done himself. A picture that will stir the patriotic heart."

Louella Parsons, American:—"'America' is the best thing Mr. Griffith has made since 'Way Down East.'"

Telegraph:—"A masterpiece of exquisite photography, flawless direction and blood-stirring, appealing force."

Harriette Underhill, Tribune:—"'America' is the greatest story that has ever been put on the screen. The greatest screen thrill of our experience. This is a great picture. Do not miss 'America.'"

Sun and Globe:—"The most thrilling and satisfying motion picture entertainment in the city. Produced with the sweep and fine indignation that spurred our forefathers to signing the Declaration of Independence. The most exciting true story in the world—'America' is decidedly something to see."

Journal:—"A living, breathing document of sacrifice and idealism. Intensely vivid, historically accurate and fascinating."

Telegram and Mail:—"Not since 'The Birth of a Nation' has Griffith done anything more noteworthy. Not only educational, but inspirational and a revelation. You film fanatics who rant about wonderful pictures you have seen, see 'America' next. Then you'll have a real good reel to talk about—something to brag about."

Post:—"Another splendid motion picture. Audience burst into applause. Never such a perfect spectacle as ride of Paul Revere."

Courtship of Myles Standish—Asst. Ex., Stanley, Philadelphia

Evening Bulletin:—"Much of the value of the film lies in its faithful reproduction of detail.

Record:—"Here is a production that is not for today alone, but is worthy of preservation for future generations."

Public Ledger:—"The Courtship of Myles Standish is entertaining chiefly because of some superb storm scenes at sea."

North American:—"The Courtship of Myles Standish" might well be termed an historical picture dealing with the very beginning of American history. The events are vividly pictured from the time the travelers started until they became a flourishing colony in America."

"The Yankee Consul"—Asst. Ex. Capitol, Detroit

Free Press:—"As a stage comedy it made thousands laugh. In its screen form it promises to send millions into paroxysms of delight and to cause a shiver, too, over the thrills with which it abounds. As the plot thickens the audience is kept in a roar of merriment. 'The Yankee Consul' is one continuous laugh from first to last. MacLean is the same harsassed young man we saw in 'The Hottentot' and 'Going Up.'"

News:—"The laughs in this comedy are many and hearty."

"Going Up"—Asst. Ex. Chicago, Chicago

Post:—"The audience didn't laugh at this picture—they simply screamed—and there were times when everyone was almost in hysterics. And intermingled in the laughter were staccato screams of horror as a blimp and two planes played tag with each other and every few minutes it looked as if all three were trying to occupy the same space at the same time."

Journal:—"Douglas MacLean strives for laughs and is good enough to get them. The sport in 'Going Up' has the double advantage of interest and suspense."

"David Copperfield"—Asst. Ex. Tremont Temple, Boston

Globe:—"It is one of the best pictures ever shown here. The story has been followed carefully and the film characterizations have been brought out as vividly as if they too had been supervised by the master hand of Dickens himself. No one could ask for a more interesting story more simply told."

The Evening Transcript:—"Great praise must be given this picture. Best of the cast, in the eyes of one spectator, is Micawber, as done to the life by Frederik Jensen, but all of the characterizations are satisfactory portraits. There is the genuine atmosphere of Dickens's England in the picture, and a good deal of the pathos and humor of the original story."

"Woman to Woman"—Selznick Metropolitan, Los Angeles

Express:—"Each succeeding role finds Miss Compson advancing in histrionic measure."

Examiner:—"The play will gladden the hearts of Miss Compson's admirers in the opulent vision it gives of her. She entrances the eye and looks more and more delightful as the play progresses. 'Women to Woman' has a more definite appeal for the theatregoer than this, however, in that it offers Miss Compson opportunity for excellent dramatic work. The story is likewise novel."

Times:—"It is more than a mere movie, sufficiently more in fact to hold a captivating appeal for those who are weary of the formula production and the all-too-happy ending."

"Defying Destiny"—Selznick Broadway, Los Angeles

Evening Herald:—"It is a good picture, to say the least, with an unusually good cast. For real acting ability, nobody would deny Irene Rich that honor. Then comes Monte Blue, Russell Simpson and Tully Marshall. Quite a line-up of talent and another reason why the world premiere of 'Defying Destiny' is attracting attention."

Record:—"This delightful drama of American life gives each person in the cast an excellent opportunity for vigorous and interesting work."

"The Virginian"—Preferred, Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore.

Oregonian:—"The stamp of restraint is in every foot of 'The Virginian—that kind of restraint which makes so many great pictures and the lack of which ruins so many others. 'The Virginian' is a swiftly moving production and one that will be interesting to the average American; likewise it is an immense advance over the ordinary slap-dash movie with western tendencies."

"The Virginian"—Preferred Apollo, Indianapolis

Star:—"Gorgeous open spaces and vigorous men's men are important features of the excellent production that Preferred Pictures has given to Owen Wister's novel, 'The Virginian.' Kenneth Harlan gives a fine, sturdy performance in the title role and Florence Vidor is charming as the school teacher."

"Maytime"—Preferred, Metropolitan, Baltimore

Sun:—"If you liked 'Maytime' on the stage, you'll like it on the screen. They've made of it a pretty fine picture. The cast is uniformly good."

"A Woman of Paris"—United Artists, Orpheum, Chicago

Rob Reel, American:—"Movie fans everywhere are paying Charles Chaplin the superb compliment of attending performances of a picture because Charles Chaplin directed it and saw it through production; because they want to see what this comical genius has done in a serious vein. And they find much which appeals to them. They find boldness and considerable daring, not only in the subject matter, but in the treatment of it. Even in the matter of 'something sweet at the end' Chaplin has given a novel twist.'"

Virginia Dale, Journal:—"Charles the Great, established in one line, has blossomed out in another. He blossoms out as a producer of serious drama. He took Edna Purviance, who has worked with him tete-a-tete with his custard pies, and made 'A Woman of Paris,' a great dramatic photoplay."

Mae Tinee, Tribune:—"The production is just about perfect. The big moments all hang on little everyday occurrences and misunderstandings, as so often in real life big moments do."

Ashton Stevens, Examiner:—"'A Woman of Paris' is my idea of a civilized picture show. It is full of human nature: it is worldly and wise and unvulgar, telling a plausible story of a Parisian 'gold digger, without cheating and without offense."

Post:—"A Charles Chaplin picture without Charlie in it, and yet an exceptionally good picture."

"Daughters of Today"—Selznick, Strand, New York

"Daughters of Today" the Rollin S. Sturgeon production released by the Selznick Distributing Corporation, received the commendation of the newspaper critics as an entertaining and well-acted picture, when it was given its Broadway premier at the Mark Strand Theatre last week.

Journal:—"'Daughters of Today' is irresponsibly and consistently entertaining."

Herald:—"This film with a moral looks like a box-office attraction."

The Sun and Globe:—"It is possible to recommend 'Daughters of Today' as good entertainment. Like jazz music, it moves and it has pulse beats."

Studio Briefs

Active At United

With the simultaneous starting of Maurice Tourneur's "The White Moth," and three First National producing units and the production of four pictures already under way with additional companies soon to start, the United Studios in Hollywood faces one of its busiest seasons. Among the stars now working on this "lot" are Conway Tearle, Barbara La Marr, Colleen Moore, Lewis Stone, Alma Rubens, Irene Rich, Sylvia Breamer, Milton Sills, Enid Bennett, Lloyd Hughes, Corinne Griffith, Ford Sterling and others.

Filming of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," Universal feature based on the racing story of the same name by Gerald Beaumont and directed by Irving Cummings, is completed. Creighton Hale and George Cooper have the principal roles.

"The Iron Man," Universal chapterplay, starring Albertini, Italian screen celebrity, and directed by Jay Marchant, has been completed.

Universal has engaged Rupert Julian, who directed "Merry-Go-Round," to direct "We Are French," or "The Bugler of Algiers," which was one of the war-time pictures directed by him, and now planned for production on a much greater scale.

The last two episodes of "The Riddle Rider," Universal chapterplay starring William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick, are being edited and titled.

Work has begun on "The Christmas Handicap," one of the "Fast Steppers" series Universal is making, starring Billy Sullivan from Gerald Beaumont's racing stories.

New Andy Gump Series

A new series of Andy Gump comedies based on the newspaper cartoons of Sidney Smith will start soon at Universal City. Joe Murphy will impersonate Andy Gump, Fay Tincher will be seen as "Min" and Jackie Morgan as "Little Chester." Samuel Van Ronkel is the producer.

Screening of exterior scenes of "Ridgway of Montana," Universal Western feature starring Jack Hoxie, is completed.

Editing and titling of the first picture directed by Ernst Laemmle, a two-reel Western, starring Pete Morrison, is under way.

Preparation of "Butterfly," Universal-Jewel production from the novel of the same name by Kathleen Norris, is well under way. Virginia Valli will be the star, and Clarence L. Brown will direct.

James W. Horne, who directed "The Hottentot," has been engaged by Universal to direct "The Missourian," in which Reginald Denny will be starred. "The Reckless Age," starring Denny, has been completed and originally was called "Love Insurance."

Screening of "The Inheritors," Universal-Jewel, made from the magazine story written by I. A. R. Wylie, and directed by King Baggot, is finished, and Mary Philbin, is taking a vacation.

Scene from "Christopher Columbus," a Hysterical History Comedy produced at the Hollywood Studios.

Hoot Gibson has finished "Forty-Horse Hawkins," Universal Gibson production directed by Edward Sedgwick, and the five reels of burlesque and comedy of olden days is in the hands of the editorial department. It is probable that the next Gibson - Sedgwick production will be "Love's Lariat," a melodrama and comedy story of Western life.

Two new chapterplays are in preparation at Universal City, one to feature Eileen Sedgwick and Jack Daugherty and the other Margaret Morris and William Desmond.

Gale Henry Joins Metro

Gale Henry has been engaged by Metro to appear in support of Viola Dana in "Along Came Ruth," which Edward Cline is directing. Winifred Dunn has started on the adaptation and Edward Cline was loaned to Metro by Principal Pictures for this production.

Mae Murray has completed her work in "Mademoiselle Midnight," her newest production for Metro release.

King Vidor's next and third production for Goldwyn will be "Mary the III," from the stage play by Rachel Crothers. Carey Wilson is writing the scenario.

On the Goldwyn lot Marshall Neilan has started "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," with Blanche Sweet and Conrad Nagel in the leading roles. Victor Seastrom is also about to start on another picture.

Kenneth MacLean has been made cameraman of the Jack White Juvenile Company featuring Johnnie Fox, Jr. MacLean's most recent work was as cinematographer on the forthcoming Douglas Fairbanks' production, "The Thief of Bagdad." Peggy Cartwright, aged ten, has another "leading lady" role opposite Johnnie Fox, Jr.

Charles Hockberg, senior member of Jules White's editorial staff at the Jack White's Studio, has been appointed editor for the Lloyd Hamilton production directed by Lloyd Bacon.

Rex Ingram Due Back

Rex Ingram and his entire company who have been in Europe for the past four months filming "The Arab," Mr. Ingram's newest for Metro, sailed for the United States on March 5.

Kate Lester completed her fifth year in the Goldwyn Stock Company. When the company moved its studios from Fort Lee, N. J., to Culver City, Calif., she went along.

Samuel Bischoff, General Manager of the Grand-Asher Company, is making a flying trip to New York and Boston on important matters connected with the organization.

Laurette Taylor will return to the Metro Studios in Hollywood from New York about the middle of March to start work on "A Night in Rome," another play written by her author-husband, J. Hartley Manners, and which will be her third production for Metro.

Douglas McLean has signed Lillian Rich as his leading lady and commenced production at the F. B. O. studio under Jess Robbins' direction of "Never Say Die," William Collier's recent stage play. Miss Rich was a Wampas Baby Star of 1924 and until two years ago was a London dancer, having last played the ingenue lead in Sir Harry Lauder's "Three Cheers." Since coming to America she has played opposite Herbert Rawlinson, Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey and Frank Mayo, and was the featured player in Stronghearts recent release.

Herbert Brenon's fifth production for Paramount, "The Breaking Point," which is now in the hands of the negative cutters, was finished at the West Coast Studio just one year after the completion of his first, "The Rustle of Silk."

Montagne Joins Fox

Edward Montagne has been engaged by Fox Films to adapt for the screen "The Last of the Duanes," by Zane Grey. Mr. Montagne is said to be the author of over 300 screen productions and to have adapted over 200 plays and books. A few of his recent releases are, "The Common Law," "Rupert of Hentzau," "A Man's Home," "The Swamp Angel" and "The Storm Daughter."

Rowland V. Lee, whose latest Fox picture is "Gentle Julia," has returned to Hollywood from a three months' vacation in Europe and has three more pictures to do on his present contract with this organization.

Tom Buckingham has completed Lincoln J. Carter's "The Arizona Express" for Fox. Robert N. Lee wrote the continuity.

Donald Lee, younger brother of Rowland V. and Robert N. Lee, is a new Fox scenarist. He wrote the original story for Tom Mix's latest, entitled "Mixed Manners."

Al Ray has started production of the twenty-third Cameo comedy of the current series, with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance in leading roles.

High pressure production of the Jack White comedy two-reelers has necessitated the formation of an additional company which will make one or more Mermaid comedies featuring Lee Moran, with Peg O'Neill as leading lady. Robert Kerr is the director.

Baby Peggy's first big production for Principal Pictures Corporation, "Captain January," is completed and the production is now in the hands of the cutters.

Stockdale Recovering

Carl Stockdale is recovering from a fractured leg sustained while filming "Swords and Plowshares," Emory Johnson's next production for F. B. O.

Emory Johnson has completed his fifth F. B. O. production, tentatively called "Swords and Plowshares."

Richard Talmadge and the company making "Stepping Lively," are going to San Diego to shoot scenes in and about the marine barracks.

"In Fast Company," starring Richard Talmadge for Truart Film Corporation release, has just been completed and is being edited by Al Cohn at the F. B. O. Studios.

"Miami" Is Completed

Final scenes of "Miami," the Alan Crosland Production starring Betty Compson, for release through the Hodkinson Corporation, will be made this week, according to reports from the company now in Florida and the entire unit will return to New York, where, after a conference, Miss Compson will leave for Los Angeles to appear in the James Cruze picture before making her next production for the Hodkinson Corporation.

Bertram Millhauser has completed an original story for F. B. O. which is shortly to be put into production at the West Coast Studios of that organization. Millhauser's story entitled "Fools in the Dark" is now in course of adaptation.

Jane Jenning has left for Chicago to appear in a new picture after making personal appearances in "Emblems of Love," in which she is starred.

Harry Carey has returned to the F. B. O. lot as a Hunt Stromberg star. Carey recently completed a series of six westerns for F. B. O.

: : Picture Paragraphs : :

DOES the public want clean motion pictures? And is it possible for an organization to derive satisfactory financial return from pictures that are not founded on sex problems?

Both of these questions have been answered with a "Yes" by Leon Rice, president of the Mission Film Corporation, whose main intent in producing was with the avowed purpose of bringing forth "pictures with a mission" which he felt certain would result in adequate financial return.

The motion picture version of John Greenleaf Whittier's poem "The Barefoot Boy," distributed by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation with decided success, has prompted that concern to go back to the Mission Film Corporation for another production of the wholesome type.

"Flattery" has been the result of their negotiations and C. B. C. will soon be ready to put the picture on the market. H. H. Van Loan, noted screen author, was commissioned to write the story that would meet with the strict requirements laid down by the producers.

THE Advertising Department of Truart Films has issued an attractive and helpful press book in connection with the release of "On Time," Richard Talmadge's second production of the series being made by Carlos Productions.

The spirit of speed and pep and stunts pervades the entire book, both as regards the illustrated accessories and the other artwork with which it is decorated. It comprises a four-page, two-color cover, with sixteen inside pages.

The front cover of the book carries the idea of the type of story pictorially in striking design and the other cover pages are devoted to illustrations of the lobby display and posters and a photographic layout of the cast of players which includes such names as Billie Dove, Tom Wilson, Stuart Holmes, Charles Clary, George Siegman, Frankie Mann, Douglas Gerrard and Fred Kirby.

Striking hand drawn ad on "The Blizzard" (Fox) run in Detroit newspapers during the showing at the Fox Washington theatre.

AN unusually fine example of the use of line cuts in newspaper advertising layouts is contained in the press book issued by Associated Exhibitors for the latest Douglas MacLean production, "The Yankee Consul." The illustrations are all cartooned and are certain to dominate any page upon which they appear. Practicing what it preaches, or rather using what it urges, Associated utilized the press book ads in its display material used in the New York papers during the engagement at the Central theatre.

Another point of excellence that bespeaks a word of praise is the use of illustrations to set the exhibitor exactly right on his exploitation. This is of particular advantage in effecting tie-ups as the local merchant is enabled to see clearly just what his winndow display or special exhibit will look like.

AMONG the voluntary letters in praise of the Tom Mix picture, "The Lone Star Ranger," which have been received by Mix was the following from the Adjutant General's office in Texas: "Just a few words so you will know the people of this part of the state, as well as we Rangers appreciate very much your picture, 'The Lone Star Ranger.' It was a splendid picture as well as a reproduction of the actual work which we come in contact with on the border. Wishing you great success in your picture work, I beg to remain, Martin N. Koonsman, Sergeant Co. B, Texas Rangers."

In his early days Tom Mix spent two years of his life on the frontier of Mexico and the Lone Star State border as a Texas Ranger and he therefore was able to make the picture vividly realistic.

THE National Committee for Better Films has included three William Fox special productions in the list of motion pictures appropriate for special Lenten programs. These pictures which have been listed as stimulative of religious thought are "St. Elmo," "The Town That Forgot God" and "The Shepherd King."

"The Town That Forgot God" is one of last season's specials and presents the drama and sermon of a small town of hypocrites and a small boy whose faith protected him from his enemies.

"St. Elmo" and "The Shepherd King" are two of the specials on the 1923-24 program.

A FEATURE of the poster service prepared by Pathe in connection with its forthcoming release of the new Hal Roach production, titled "The King of Wild Horses," is an actionful twenty-four sheet, designed by Dan Smith, who is recognized among the prominent animal painters of the United States.

This lithograph, which has been done in four colors, shows the great black stallion, who plays the title role, repelling another huge stallion intent on attacking the black's herd.

DR. HENRY A. ROSE, of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, N. J., who has been delivering a series of illustrated lectures in his church about the motion picture, has the following to say of two William Fox productions: "Both 'If Winter Comes' and 'The Shepherd King' have made deep impressions. These are two of the most unusual pictures I have ever seen and should be seen in every city and town of our country—and by everybody. Such pictures are a credit to the screen and a benefit to the church as well as the citizenry of America."

THE Paul Dresser Memorial Association, Inc., of Terre Haute, Ind., expressed its appreciation of the benefit performance of "On the Banks of the Wabash" in that city in a letter from Mique O'Brien of the executive committee to Vitagraph.

"Your very much appreciated communication enclosing Vitagraph's check representing your share of the receipts from the first run of 'On the Banks of the Wabash' at the Grand, has been turned over to the treasurer of the Paul Dresser Memorial Association and I am requested to tell you just how grateful the promoters of the memorial are to Vitagraph for its magnificent donation.

"Not only the members of the Paul Dresser Memorial Association but all of Terre Haute and those who knew Paul Dresser, wherever they may be, will join with me in again thanking you for the superb way in which you have co-operated in a cause that is now being taken up by the people of Indiana. As you know the picture ran up against a blizzard but it had merit enough to outdraw at a ratio of 3 to 1 any picture that was shown in Terre Haute while 'On the Banks of the Wabash' was on view."

Regional News from Correspondents

Indianapolis

CONSTANTIN BAKALEINIKOFF became permanent director of the Circle Theater Orchestra Sunday afternoon. Bakaleinikoff came to Indianapolis several weeks ago as guest conductor of the orchestra. His reception by theatergoers was so enthusiastic that his connection was made permanent, the management announced. The new conductor was born and educated in Russia, having graduated from the Moscow Conservatory. He served in the Russian army in the World War. He directed the Russian Opera for a time prior to 1914.

Manager Cook of Cook's Opera House, Greencastle, Ind., has agreed to donate proceeds of the theater March 10 to 14 to the DePauw University Endowment Fund. The theater draws much of its patronage in the winter from the university students.

Woodlawn Amusement Company, Evansville, Ind., has been incorporated with $25,000 capital and C. F. Cluthe, G. J. Schoeny, Hulda Cluthe and Clare C. Schoeny as directors.

The Superior Film Corporation, South Bend, Ind., has been incorporated with $3,000 capital, announcing object to be manufacture of motion pictures. Directors are Lew Swan, Lee P. McGirr and Harry A. Richwine.

Arc Amusement Company, Crawfordsville, Ind., has filed preliminary certificate of dissolution with the Secretary of State.

The spring program of theatrical construction in Indianapolis includes erection of a two-story brick stucco photoplay theater, dance hall and storeroom building by Leo Kahn, local manufacturer, at 825 South Meridian street. Work is planned to start about April 1. Cost will be approximately $150,000. Vonegut, Bohn and Miller of Indianapolis are architects.

Mr. Kahn plans to make of the theater a community center. The building will have eighty-nine feet frontage upon Meridian street and will be 195 feet deep.

The Central Amusement Company, which operates the Lyric vaudeville theater, has leased the north half of the Crystal theater building, which adjoins the Lyric on the south. Charles Olson, president, said the additional space will be used for enlargement of the Lyric lobby.

Gustav G. Schmidt, partner in an Indianapolis movie chain, including the Crystal, was confined to his home last week with malaria fever.

Joseph F. Smith, manager of Bair's South Side theater at Fountain Square, has bought the Oriental theater, 1105 South Meridian street and the St. Clair theater, 900 Ft. Wayne avenue, from Michael J. Duffecy. The St. Clair, one of the finest of the city's neighborhood houses, was completed about six months ago. New lighting fixtures are being installed and the interior redecorated at the Oriental. Mr. Smith will continue management of Bair's South Side.

Samuel Lebowitz has bought the Dunick, neighborhood theater, 1320 East Sixteenth street, from J. E. Nicholson.

Charles M. Olson, president of the Central Amusement Company, has bought the Regent, downtown picture house at 42 South Illinois street from the Indianapolis Amusement Company. Purchasing price was not made public. The house has 700 capacity and has shown western pictures almost exclusively. Olson is operating it as an individual, his company not figuring in the deal.

Kansas City

FRANK L. NEWMAN is reaping nothing short of a harvest with his "Song Revue of 1923" at the Newman theater, Kansas City. The revue, which includes a cast of twenty persons and the year's entire crop of popular syncopation, is drawing better than both Shubert houses with legitimate attractions. From the once-epidemic, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," to "Wonderful One," all the best sellers are included. Louis Forbstein, violinist, and the Mitchell brothers, banjoists, vie for the jazz crown, with the Coon-Sanders novelty singing orchestra a close runner-up.

F. F. Nine, veteran exchange manager and salesman, has joined the Kansas City Hodkinson branch. Last week's business amounted to more than double the largest previous week, according to George Hinton, manager.

E. C. Rhoden, Kansas City National manager, who returned from a trip into the territory last week, paid a high tribute to Stanley Chambers, manager of the Miller theater, Wichita, Kas.

"He has the knack of staging a better show at less cost than any exhibitor I know of in the territory," Mr. Rhoden said.

Mr. Chambers' latest stunt was a big jazz revue in which the audience entertained itself with a "Kazoo Khorus."

Phil Ryan, vice-president and general manager of Capitol Enterprises, with headquarters in Kansas City, left hurriedly for New York last week to complete a business transaction.

The monthly sales force meeting of the Pathe office in Kansas City last week turned out to be more of a "pep" gathering. With the weather hinting of spring, the salesmen were instructed to "go and get it."

Lew Nathanson, Topeka, Kas., and R. B. Christian of Excelsior Springs, Mo., were two of the busiest exhibitors on Kansas City's film row last week, buying up features.

E. J. Dennison, Paramount inspector of films, was in Kansas City last week, seeing to it that all prints are kept in the best of condition and suggesting methods of improvement in storing and shipping reels. Half of his time is spent in New York, and the other half on the road.

W. J. Kupper, assistant to the general sales manager of Fox, is unusually optimistic concerning future business conditions in the Kansas City territory. He spent three days at the local exchange last week.

Jack Roth again is manager of the Isis theatre, Kansas City, after being associated with several houses in the last few months. He will be succeeded as manager of the Apollo theatre by "Rube" Finklestein.

Ever so often Mike Kahn of Film Classics, Inc., Kansas City, has to take a little "spin" over the territory just to keep in selling form. He returned last week from a trip through Kansas and asserted his "form" still was above par.

W. P. Bernfield, former city salesman for the Universal branch at Kansas City, again is with that organization, doing special work in conjunction with the "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Universal has divided its territory into five zones, each salesman covering the theatres of one zone.

The "merchant's reduction sale" plan, adopted by the Richards & Flynn exchange in Kansas City recently, has proved a success, especially in the smaller towns, according to officials of the exchange.

HARRY TANNER has taken over the Frisina Amusement Company houses at Pana, Ill., and the Palace in Nokomis, Ill.

The new theater in Lawrenceville, Ill., owned by the Hurley B. Gould Theaters, Inc., will be thrown open on St. Patrick's Day.

Raymond McKibben of Albian, Ill., has plans under consideration for the erection of a new theater there.

Work of demolishing the buildings on the site of William Goldman's new $1,000,000 St. Louis theater, Grand boulevard at Morgan street, started the past week, and the general contractors, the Selden-Breck Construction Company, are under contract to have the new theater ready for occupancy on Labor Day.

Plans for the new house were prepared by Preston J. Bradshaw, an internationally recognized authority on theater construction. It will represent the very last word in movie picture structures. It will front 146 feet on Grand boulevard by 188 feet on Morgan street. The auditorium will be 61 feet high, equivalent to a six-story structure. The theater will have seats for 3,500 persons.

The Grand avenue frontage will embrace ten stores and seventeen offices. As has been printed, the theater will become the St. Louis first-run house for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan productions.

W. C. Finks of the Opera House, California, Mo., is confined to his home by illness.

W. M. Sauvage, well known Alton theatrical and movie man, has taken over the Grand theater in that city. He also owns the Hippodrome and only recently started tearing down his airdrome preparatory to erecting a new 1,200-seat one-floor modern picture theater.

Circuit Judge Frey of St. Louis on February 25 denied a temporary injunction and receivership in the suit of W. A. Koons and W. W. Strack against the Jewer Amusement Company, which operates the Garrick theater, St. Louis, as a burlesque house. Koons and Strack claimed that their partners, Joseph Oppenheimer, C. C. Collier and Everett Taylor refused to permit them to have a voice in the management of the theater and they were not given a proper share of the profits. Judge Frey denied their petition.

Barney Rosenthal of the Columbia Picture Corporation, Empress Theater building, St. Louis' newest independent exchange, left for Chicago, Saturday evening, March 1, to meet Joe Brandt of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. Upon his return to St. Louis, Rosenthal expects to announce the permanent location for his exchange. He has secured an office in Picture Row, but is not quite ready to give the exact location.

Walter Lee, former booker for Universal, and Robert Cummings, office auditor, have resigned their positions with that exchange. Cummings has gone south with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Joe Desberger, well known to St. Louis territory exhibitors, is now managing Fred Cornwell's Delmonte theater, while Barney Fagan, formerly in the independent film exchange business, is the new manager of the Congress theater on Olive street.

Charley Vollmer, for many years manager for leading St. Louis theaters, is now conducting a "toy" film exchange in the Empress Theater building, St. Louis. In the past few years toy films have become very popular and Charley sees a great future for his exchange.

R. G. Taylor of Columbia Picture Corporation has returned from a visit with his parents in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Jake Rosenthal, well known Dubuque, Ia., movie magnate and vaudeville impressario, spent the past week as the guest of his brother, Barney Rosenthal, head of the Columbia Picture Corporation.

Green M. Luttrell of the Majestic theater, Jacksonville, Ill., was a visitor of the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hall of Dupo, Ill., on Saturday evening, March 1, entertained Tom McKean and his F. B. O. organization at a dinner-dance in their dancing pavilion in Dupo.

Harry Greenman, popular manager of the William Fox Liberty theater, St. Louis, is the proud father of a baby boy who put in his appearance at the Greenman home on February 21. The youngster has been named David MacLean Greenman.

The New Fourth Street theater, Moberly, Mo., is purchasing its equipment from the St. Louis Exhibitors Supply Company, Plaza Hotel building.

G. E. McKean, local manager for Fox Films, was host at a banquet for his exchange employes at Hotel Melbourne on Monday evening, March 3. The dinner was followed by a dance. Everyone had a glorious time.

Harry Haynes' St. Louis Exchange has moved into its handsome new quarters at 3334 Olive street. Sol J. Hankin, manager for Educational Pictures, occupies space in the same office.

Bob Cluster of the Washington theater, Belleville, Ill., will hold a "sales" meeting for Tom McKean and his F. B. O. organization on Saturday, March 8.

C. E. Penrod, district manager for F. B. O., was a visitor of the past week. He was well pleased with the way things are moving in the St. Louis territory.

Lennie Arnett has purchased the interest of Jack de Poynster in the Palace theater at Johnston City, Ill.

George Ware, former manager of the local Vitagraph Exchange, is back in St. Louis. He recently resigned the managership of the Kansas City Vitagraph exchange. He is undecided as to his future plans.

Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Cairo, Ill., entertained a party of friends at the Ziegfeld Follies at the American theater, March 1.

Senator John Reese of Wellsville, Mo., visited Harry Hynes in his new St. Louis Film Exchange and highly complimented him on his new quarters.

Ben Bautle, formerly owner of the Grand theater at Sparta, Ill., has purchased an interest in the Fourth Street theater, Moberly, Mo.

Bill Laris, former manager of the West End Lyric, has leased the Highpointe theater, St. Louis, and will operate it as a high-class motion picture house.

George Placas, owner-manager Criterion theater, Franklin avenue, has returned from a trip to old Mexico, where he went to look after his oil interests.

Harry Loeper of the Lyric theater, Springfield, Ill., spent the past week in Chicago. Henry Halway plans to operate a motion picture show in the Knights of Columbus hall, St. Charles, Mo.

Visitors of the past week were: Bib Stempfle, St. Charles, Mo.; Bob Cluster of Johnston City and Belleville, Ill.; Jim Reilly, Princess theater, Alton, Ill.

Cecil Mayberry, district manager for W. W. Hodkinson Corporation stopped off in St. Louis en route to Chicago from Omaha and Kansas City.

Dan Roche, well known Hodkinson exploiter, has arrived in St. Louis to handle the publicity on the first run for "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," which opens at William Goldman's King's theater on March 8.

Charley Werner of Metro was confined to his home for a few days by illness. Herman Ferguson, owner of the Liberty, Maldin, Mo., has purchased a beautiful new home.

MESSRS. Marcus, Neufeld and Korson, state-righters now united last week, staged a Philadelphia invasion of the Washington field. They have formed the new "Trio Productions," Incorporated. Already in possession of the Philadelphia regional franchise, they have taken over the Washington unit of Preferred Pictures, the only separately chartered exchange of the Al Lichtman unit, incorporated two years ago in Albany, N. Y.

Jos. Young and Al Palmer will retain their relative posts in the new enlarged Washington offices, for the present. Louis Korson and Oscar Neufeld are associated with Marcus in the new venture.

Manager C. S. Spoehr of Vitagraph is smiling; last week four of the five first run Richmond, Va., theaters were showing Vitagraph pictures.

Miss Helen Dysart, formerly in Federated Films, Mather building, is new secretary to Charles Parker of the Universal Film Exchange of Washington, on New Jersey avenue.

The Washington exchange of Federated Films, of Baltimore and Washington is now headed by Israel Colb, formerly a salesman for Merit Films in Buffalo and Albany territories. More recently Manager Colb has been associated with Mr. Oletzky's Baltimore city and Eastern Shore trade.

Lew Lyons, formerly special representative in Baltimore for Universal Pictures, now is covering the Maryland theaters for "Bob" Smeltzer, Washington manager of First National Pictures.

F. L. Greenhalgh has deserted the Maryland assignment of First National, and transferred his affections to the Old Dominion.

Ben Lust has made good his latest moving day threat, and is now occupying the northeast portion of the former Sydney Lust-T. A. O'Donnell offices, which are now again occupied by the Lust klan, and their office executives, vice-president, Secretary Fitzgerald and the cashier.

Title to Community Hall, Gwynn Oak and Liberty Heights avenues, Baltimore, has been conveyed to Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Quandt for $50,000, title in fee, by the recent purchasers of the Howard street estate.

Edwin A. Sherwood, manager of Crandall's Exhibitors Film exchange, after four weeks' spent assisting "Johnny" Payette, assistant general manager of Crandall's theaters in staging the presentations of Waring's Pennsylvanians at the Metropolitan and Ambassador, left for a tour of the region, returning Saturday.

Wesley Etris, manager of Crandall's Apollo and Strand theaters at Martinsburg, West Virginia, and son of Robert Etris, manager of Crandall's new Ambassador theater here, was a Washington visitor last week.

S. H. Dudley's efforts to maintain his old-time "S. H. Dudley" theater on U street, across the alley from Crandall's Lincoln have proved unavailing. A "For Sale" sign has adorned the colored film house for several weeks.

Cleveland

JOHN KUMLER of Toledo's Pantheon theater was in town last week, getting all fixed up with First National pictures for the spring business.

Billy Partelle, who owns and operates the Majestic theater at Mansfield, has just received his discharge from Mt. Sinai hospital in Cleveland, where he has been confined for the past four weeks. Partella underwent a serious operation, but came out of it right-side-up-with-care.

Mrs. O. J. Smith, widow of the former proprietor of the Majestic theater, Akron, has been appointed administratrix of her husband's estate. Word has passed around local exchanges that Mrs. Smith will maintain her interest in the Majestic theater and will run the house herself.

Charles Barbian, who guides the destiny of the Waldorf theater, Akron, was one of the week's visitors around the exchanges which arranged several screenings for his benefit.

Judge Foster, of the Marion Photoplay Company, which controls practically all of the picture houses of Marion, was around the city fixing dates for previously booked pictures. Foster's all set for the spring, he says.

Ed Beattie, general manager of the Butterfield interests, stopped off in town last week, visiting with Fox Exchange Manager Frank Drew. Beattie left Cleveland Wednesday for New York, in company with Fox General Sales Manager R. W. White, who had been spending a few days in the office.

George Fleishman, manager of the World theater, Toledo, spent Friday in the exchanges, buying pictures and dating previously purchased pictures. Fleishman says business is pretty good over in Toledo. He says he does little exploitation. He plays the big pictures. And the big pictures play themselves, without any ballyhoo from the exhibitor.

Louis Moidle, who manages the Grand theater, Denison, journeyed up to Cleveland to pay the local exchanges a personal visit last week.

The New Palace theater, St. Claire avenue and East 25th street, Cleveland, has changed hands. J. Stein, former owner has sold the house to G. Ross. It is said that Stein, although a veteran local exhibitor, is leaving the picture field entirely.

A. Toth is the new proprietor of the Palace theater at Tiltonsville following its sale recently by the former owner, Louis Bourg. Bourg also has sold out his Yorkville theater at Yorkville, to Cleve Brawdy.

S. A. Smith, who manages the Smith's theater at Sugar Creek, was in town last Tuesday.

B. F. McCoy, of the Park and Opera House, at Millersburg, was one of the week's out-of-town exhibitor guests during the past week. As was also George Zigiob, who manages the Dreamland and Cozy theater in Akron.

Sam Gerson, a member of the Goldwyn Exchange, passed out pound boxes of candy to all the girls in the office, and cigars to all of the men last week. There's a reason. And the reason was the arrival of a boy.

San Francisco

FEBRUARY 25th, Walter Kofeldt, San Francisco manager for Pathe, conferred with Messrs. Glosser, Erickson, Knowles, Osborne and Cobbs, Pathe salesmen.

Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists, was a visitor in the city, where for several days he discussed matters with K. Hodkinson and C. Milton of the local office.

Benny Westland, publicity director at the San Francisco office of Universal, on March 1st succeeded Charlie Kurtzman as publicity director at the Granada theater. Kurtzman will open his own publicity office at Los Angeles. At one time Westland was director of publicity at the Cameo.

Bert Lennon, formerly publicity director for Thomas H. Ince is now in San Francisco as western publicity director for Lewis B. Mayer and Metro.

J. C. Cohen, president of the Consolidated Amusement company of Honolulu, who is now on a business trip in New York, was expected back in San Francisco by March 5.

F. C. Munroe, president of the Hodkinson corporation, together with H. A. Richards, general counsel of the company, was a recent San Francisco, visitor.

Paul C. Mooney, vice president of the Hodkinson corporation and director of sales, is expected in the city shortly to discuss matters with Sol J. Vogel, district manager.

E. Byard of Ferndale, California, was a recent visitor in this city to purchase films for his theater.

Miss E. Castro, head stenographer in the Educational offices for the past three years, was forced to resign because of illness. Her place has been taken by Miss M. Burns.

R. Pollack, owner of the "Playhouse" at Calistoga, California, was in the city recently.

E. M. Mastron of Lovelock, California, a recent visitor on San Francisco's film exchange, reported conditions are greatly improving in his section.

Marie Thibedau of the First National, has returned to her desk after an illness of thirty days.

O. L. Olsen, who in the past never had time for anything except the signing of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan contracts, surprised his friends last week when he took off enough time to sign a wedding contract.

Mischa Gluschkin, celebrated violinist, has been employed to direct the Strand theater's new concert orchestra. As a youth of ten Guschkin's violin playing revealed the mark of genius and as a mere lad was employed as a concert master. He later was a soloist in Germany, his success being compared to that of Elman and Kreisler.

Among the orchestras with which he played are the Riga Symphony and Royal Conservatory. At Helsingfors, Finland, he served as second concert master under Schneevoigt and at Strassburg, France. Just before the outbreak of the war he was serving as concert master and soloist of the Exposition orchestra of Cologne.

R .R. Boomer, manager of the Cameo theater, has been officially thanked by the policemen serving in the "Police Quartet," which recently sang at his theater.

T. V. Damon of the Yerrington theater, Nevada, recently in this city stated conditions were much better in his section of Nevada than previously reported.

W. C. Wheeler, San Francisco manager for Vitagraph, returned from a business trip to Reno.

Central Penn.

A STORY comes from Scranton of how M. E. Comerford, head of the Comerford Amusement Company, which controls a large chain of picture theaters in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, came to the aid of Miss Lotta Mazeppa, of Scranton, a very promising young violinist, when he learned that the girl contemplated giving up her musical education because of a lack of financial resources. Mr. Comerford's attention was called to the young musician's plight by the Rev. J. J. Curran, of St. Mary's Church, Wilkes-Barre, and immediately arranged a benefit concert in the girl's behalf, held in the Strand theater, Scranton, on February 10. The concert was given by Miss Mazeppa, assisted by the St. Mary's choir, of Wilkes-Barre. Subsequently a similar concert was given in the Irving theater, Wilkes-Barre, another Comerford house. Miss Mazeppa had been studying the violin in New York under Auer.

There are reports in Hazelton that Claude M. Stauffer, formerly connected with the management of the Grand theater in that city, has taken an option on some property for the erection of a new picture theater there.

The Manhattan theater, Scranton, is to be transferred to the old Second National Bank building, in the same block, according to plans of the Comerford Amusement Company.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests in Harrisburg, and president of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, attended a meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Committee of the American Bankers' Association at which it was decided to ask the Chambers of Commerce of Lebanon, Carlisle and Harrisburg each to name a representative to go to Washington and request Congressman Frank C. Sites, of Harrisburg, to support the Mellon tax plan.

The stork news contains the interesting item that Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Woerhle, of the Third Street theater, Easton, have announced the recent arrival of a daughter.

Canada

TOM S. Daley, formerly manager of the Algoma theater, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, has been appointed manager of the Danforth theater, Toronto, formerly an Allen suburban house, by the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

The Allen theater, Calgary, Alberta, one of the first of the large Allen houses in the Dominion, has lost its old identity. The Famous Players Canadian Corp., which acquired the house last summer, has decided to change the name to "Strand Theater." Claude Smith continues as manager of the theater. There is no change in policy. Famous Players also has the Capitol theater, a newer house, in Calgary.

The Capitol theater, 2492 Yonge street, Toronto, was the scene of a threatening fire on February 28 which was apparently of incendiary origin. The flames were discovered at 5:21 A. M. by a police officer, the fire at that time shooting through a fanlight in the roof. The damage was reported to be $15,000. The authorities found that the rear door of the theatre had been forced open, despite a heavy lock and a cross bar. The Capitol was erected several years ago by an independent company and it is not one of the many Capitol theaters in Canada controlled by the Famous Players Canadian Corp.

The addition of a film feature to his Keith vaudeville program was the wise move made by Joe Franklin, proprietor of the Franklin theater, Ottawa, starting February 25. Shows were run continuously three times daily and the greatest difference in patronage was noted for the afternoon performance, Mr. Franklin having much larger crowds for the matinees.

Several picture men of the Canadian Capital were largely responsible for the tremendous success of the Mardi Gras Carnival and Cabaret Floor Show which was held in the ballroom of Loew's theater, Ottawa, February 28 and 29, under the auspices of the Ottawa Lodge of the Elks. Those who organized and carried out the big program included Manager Orol Cloakey of the Regent, Frank Badgley of the Government Moving Picture Bureau, Norton Payne of Loew's theater and Capt. F. W. Goodale, Loew's manager.

The youngest theater manager in Winnipeg, Manitoba, is S. Swartz, who has been appointed manager of the Rialto theater, following a recent similar appointment to the Starland theater which he relinquished to take over the Rialto. Some time ago, Mr. Swartz was with the Lyric theater in Minneapolis.

Paul Riseman has bought the Arlington theater, a suburban theater of Winnipeg, Man., from M. J. Williamson.

A. H. Wicks, formerly an exhibitor of Bredenburg, Sask., has purchased the Bijou theater at Rivers, Manitoba. Mr. Wicks is well known throughout the Canadian West as he was one who took "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" as a road show through the western provinces some time ago.

Des Moine

R. H. FAIRCHILD, salesman for F. B. O. out of Des Moines, was suddenly stricken with an attack of appendicitis at Cedar Rapids on Wednesday and was operated on at the hospital at Cedar Rapids.

Davis City, Ia., is again to see the cinema flicker. For over a year the theater there has been closed, but last week Mr. Sutherland, who had previously operated the theater, opened the theater with the showing of a Universal feature.

Mrs. Stegall of Fayette writes that she is planning the building of a theater at this town.

The New Mills theater at Tama has been added to the possessions of Exhibitor Jarnagin, who also bought the Idle Hour theater at Tama.

L. E. Mathews, formerly manager of the Lyric theater at Boone, Ia., is enjoying a vacation. He sold the Lyric theater to Wigman and now Mathews is looking for a new location.

Everybody at the Educational exchange has been busily engaged in spare moments in moving into new headquarters in the same building, the Des Moines film exchange building, but just across the hall from their former location. An addition to the staff of Educational is Fred Hiershorn, who will go on the road for Educational. He used to be with Select in Omaha. Mr. Kahn in his recent trip to the key cities reports that business is good, but the roads are not.

W. W. Booth of Belle Plain, Otto Panken of the Strand theater at Marengo, and Nate Chapman of Iowa visited the Famous Players office this week.

J. R. Grainger, general sales manager for Goldwyn from the New York office, and District Manager Bansford visited the Des Moines exchange last week.

George Stephens, recently made assistant booker at the Famous Players exchange, is making good at his job.

B. B. Reingold, manager of Goldwyn's Des Moines office, made Cedar Rapids in his trip into the territory this week.

Seattle

GEORGE REISNER'S new Tokay theater at South Bend., Wash., was opened the latter part of February, with great ceremony, and was favored with a delegation of film men from Seattle, including the managers or representatives of the United Artists, Greater Features, Famous Players, Universal, De Luxe, Film Booking Offices, Pathe, Fox, Selznick and Hodkinson exchanges. "Robin Hood" was used at the opening attraction, and drew $1.10 as the admission charge. A seven-piece orchestra furnishes the music at the house. Mr. Reisner tendered a large banquet to the visiting theater and film men before the opening. The house represents an expenditure of practically $100,000, and is noted because of the fact that it is a 1,000 seat house in a city of less than 4,000 inhabitants, drawing capacity houses at practically every performance. It plays road shows as well as motion picture programs.

Letters received here this week announced that the American theater at Dayton had been purchased by J. W. Allender, owner of a string of houses in the small towns of this territory. A. F. Fleck was the former owner and manager. Mr. Allender was scheduled to take possession of the house early in March.

G. G. Swigley, owner and manager of the White Center theater, located in a suburb of Seattle, was seriously injured recently when the machine which he was driving skidded and crashed into a tree stump near the outskirts of the city. The accident was caused when Mr. Swigley lost control of the automobile on streets made dangerous by falling rain. He was thrown from the car, the latter being entirely wrecked.

H. J. Muller, appointed secretary to the president of Selznick Dist. Corp.

Ed J. Myrick, formerly assistant general manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, last week took over the ownership and management of the Strand theater in Billings, Montana, which he has reopened under the name of the Myrick theater. The house was formerly under the direction of J. L. Byrd. Mr. Myrick last week announced plans for the construction of a $90,000 suburban house in this city, work on which is expected to begin within a very short time.

Manager Frank Edwards of the Winter Garden theater last week announced that he had secured Victor DePinto as conductor of the new Winter Garden concert orchestra which has just been engaged to furnish the music at that theater. Mr. DePinto has just come to this coast from the East, according to reports, where he was well known as the conductor of a number of large theater orchestras in that territory.

Theater employes of practically all houses in this city gathered at the Moose hall one night the latter part of February, when they entertained their friends at a specially arranged Theater Employes Dance. Special musical and entertainment stunts were included in the program of events, and an eight-piece orchestra furnished the music for dancing.

Miss Agnes Young, head usher at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theater, has been receiving much publicity and praise recently as a result of the appearance of her ushers during the showing of "Scaramouche" at the theater. Miss Young is especially interested in the atmosphere surrounding the presentation of any picture, and for "Scaramouche" she designed French costumes for the ushers that were considered as fine as any that have ever been seen by theatergoers in this city.

A spring fashion show, given in conjunction with a well-known Seattle costumer, was used to good advantage recently by Robert W. Bender, manager of the Columbia theater. A special electrically lighted runway was built around the orchestra, and a dozen models displayed to the audiences the latest spring models in costumes of every type.

W. K. Beckwith, salesman for Manager H. A. Black's Vitagraph exchange in the Seattle and western Washington territory, late in February received a check for $250, as first prize in the recent sales contest held in the western division. The contest was conducted by the Vitagraph organization for all salesmen in exchanges in the western territory, and ran for ten full weeks. Mr. Beckwith's sales during those ten weeks far eclipsed any other salesman in any Pacific Coast exchange.

Paul C. Mooney, vice-president of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, in charge of sales and distribution, was expected to be a visitor at Manager R. C. Hill's local exchange late in February. W. G. Carruthers, salesman, has just joined Mr. Hill's staff, and will work in the Washington territory. He is well known in the Northwest, having been connected with the Fox and Universal exchanges during his four or five years on the Pacific Coast.

Mrs Fred G. Sliter, wife of the recently appointed manager of the First National exchange, arrived recently from New York and is now establishing her residence here. Mr. Sliter's son and daughter are at school in the East at present, but are expected to come to this coast at the close of their term, early in the summer.

Louis Rosenberg, head salesman for Al Rosenberg's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange, left here last week for Portland, after spending a number of days in the local office. Mr. Rosenberg started off on his trip in a new Hudson speedster, having traded in his former Essex coach for the former car.

L. K. Brin, president of the Kwality Film Exchanges, was expected to leave Seattle this week for Los Angeles, where he was to confer with the Warner Brothers, whose product he handles in the Northwest territory. He was driving the entire trip with his father-in-law, who has just come to this coast from the Middle West, en route to California. Mr. Brin expected to be gone about two weeks.

Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox exchange, was expected back in Seattle soon, after having spent a number of days in Los Angeles and San Francisco, conferring with Fox officials in the former city. During his absence the local office has been under the direction of Jack Cohen, assistant manager and booker.

Edward Armstrong, assistant general manager of Universal, left last week after having spent two or three weeks in the Washington and Oregon territory. L. J. Schlaifer, manager of the local Universal exchange, has just returned after a road trip around this state that took the better part of a week to make, and is again located in his Seattle office.

W. S. Southern, associated with Fred Walton in the American and Grand theaters in Bellingham, paid an infrequent visit to Film Row recently, after an absence of a number of months. B. B. Vivien, owner and manager of the Empire theater, Anacortes, was another out-of-town exhibitor who spent a number of days among the local film magnates.

A. H. Huot, manager of the Film Booking Offices Exchange, has recently returned to his office, after completing a short road trip to a number of key cities in this state.

SOUTHWEST

RESIDENT Manager J. P. Epperson of the Pathe branch at Oklahoma City, made a business trip to Dallas and other Texas points the first of the week.

Fred H. Wright is remodeling his theater at Maybank, Texas., and also building a new theater at Kemp, Texas. Resident Ralph Morrow of Dallas is visiting a meeting of Hodgkinson managers and department heads at St. Louis, Mo.

R. A. Kelly has sold his Yale theater at Cleburne, Texas, to R. Landress, who has taken charge. H. H. Hoke, director of the M. P. T. O. of Texas has gone to Battle Creek, Mich., for treatment. He has been ill for the past month.

LESTER'S Rivoli, Columbia, South Carolina, suffered a fire loss amounting to $10,000 last week, the blaze having started near the roof at the rear, caused by defective wiring. The interior of the entire theater was somewhat damaged by water and smoke, but work of decorating and rebuilding is already well under way.

H. P. Laseter, who has been in Florida for Progress, has joined the sales force of Metro in Atlanta, succeeding Joe Marentette, who goes with Associated Exhibitors.

Will B. Woods, the well known exhibitor of Gadsden, Alabama, is preparing to make a European trip in the arly Spring. His assistant, Lee V. Castleberry, was a visitor on Atlanta's film row the past week.

A company of local business men are planning to open a theater in Rockwood, Tennessee. R. D. Fulk will manage the new house.

Among the theater owners in Atlanta during the past week were Col. R. G. Allen, Raleigh, N. C.; C. E. Daffin and his assistant, Mr. Mayhew, Daffin theater, Tallahassee, Florida; Charles W. Picquot, Southern Pines, N. C.

Ford Anderson, district manager for Southern Enterprises, has just returned from his first official visit to the Knoxville territory.

The LaFayette theater, a colored nouse at Winston-Salem, N. C., owned by W. S. Scales, is in ruins from fire.

Demolishing of the old Pastime theater, Pensacola, Florida, is already underway to make room for the new $300,000 to be erected by the Saengers.

C. A. Midelberg will build a new theater to replace the old Capitol at Charleston, W. Va. The old Methodist church building in Williamston, W. Va., is being remodeled into a picture house.

E. H. Gillespy and G. V. Whitton of the warehouse department of Southern Enterprises, and J. W. Baker and Homer Hamlin of the accessories department, met in a golf tournament at Piedmont Park, Atlantna, last Saturday afternoon.

The Rex theater, Sumter, S. C., will be closed for extensive remodeling and decorating.

H. H. Everett, Charlotte branch manager of Progress Pictures, was called to Atlanta the past week, owing to the death of Mrs. Everett's mother.

A. J. Sharrock, advance man for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," is now in the southeastern territory exploiting percentage runs.

Ford Anderson, M. S. Hill, E. R. Rogers, E. L. McElravey and Arthur Amm, all of the theater regional managers of Southern Enterprises, have gone to New York to attend the meeting of district managers called by Harold Franklin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Kessnich have returned to Atlanta from New Orleans, where Mr. Kessnich underwent an operation for appendicitis.

The Savoy theater, Atabama City, Ala., which sufferd a disastrous fire last November has been reopened, thoroughly renovated and refurnished. Mr. Woods, owner, has closed his Lyric theater, Gadsden, Ala., the lease having been taken over for mercantile use.

Mrs. Anna Sessions, New Orleans branch manager of Hodkinson, has returned to her desk after attending the sales conference in St. Louis. The officials of the company presented her with a platinum wrist watch for third highest rating in general efficiency in the United States.

Yeggs cracked the safe of the Trianon theater, New Orleans, week before last, escaping with $2,200 in cash. They are both Saenger houses and burglary insurance covered the loss.

Charles W. Picquot opened his new Carolina theater, Southern Pines, N. C., last week.

The new Kettler theater, built by Carl Kettler in West Palm Beach, Florida, had its formal opening Saturday March 1st. It was very successful and flattering, many exchange and exhibitor friends either wiring congratulations or flowers.

H. J. Paradis, has completely renovated his Oasis theatre in Wilson, North Carolina, adding a balcony, Superior Projectors and Mazda equipment. He is also building a new theatre in Kinston, North Carolina.

J. K. Singletary will award the contract soon for a new theatre in Bradentown, Florida. It will seat 1200, be built of pressed brick and hollow tile. It will be leased by the E. J. Sparks Enterprises, who will operate it.

W. B. Fulton, salesmanager in Tennessee and Alabama and A. R. Ninninger, salesmanager in Georgia and Florida were in the Atlanta office of Eltabran Film Company the past week end for a conference with the big chief T. A. Branon. Otis Branon, a brother of T. A. has returned to the industry after a year away owing to a nervous breakdown.

Sig Samuels has returned to Atlanta after two weeks visit in New York city. While there he purchased a set of scenery for his Metropolitan in Atlanta which is an exact duplicate of that in the latest edition of the Ziegfeld Follies costing more than $5,000.

GEORGE L. CLOWARD, manager of the Metro exchange, went to the Idaho territory to close some important contracts.

Joe Koehler, Metro salesmtn who covers Idaho out of the local office, advises his headquarters that he has had an unusually successful week, closing many good contracts.

C. A. Dillerd, local salesman for the Metro exchange, is at present in Idaho Falls, Idaho, acting as business manager for the presentation of "Scaramouche," at the Colonial theater.

Al Hagar, exhibitor of Idaho Falls, Idaho, where he operates the Rex theater, was in the city visiting the exchanges and lining up new productions for his house. He attended the weekly dinner and business meeting of the Intermountain Film Board of Trade at the Newhouse Hotel Monday, and following the business was called upon to speak. He said that if every exhibitor who comes under the jurisdiction of this board could have the privilege of attending such a meeting, he was sure they would readily see that each and every exhibitor was receiving a fair and square deal at the hands of the board, and, that they would feel mighty kindly toward that body, as he had come to do, through attending.

Jesse D. Solomon, resident manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, returned recently from Butte, Montana.

C. J. Mercer, resigned his capacity of salesman for the local Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan office, and will go to the Hodkinson exchange as salesman.

Charles Knickerbocker, who assumed managerial duties at the W. W. Hodkinson exchange in this city several weeks ago, will give up his duties locally, and be advanced to the position of Home Office Representative, going first to Kansas City. Knickerbocker is well known in this part of the country being formerly identified with the local Goldwyn exchange as manager before going East prior to his return here as Hodkinson manager.

W. A. Corby, manager of the F. B. O. exchange for the past six months, severed connections with this organization on the first of March. He goes to the Hodkinson exchange, as manager, succeeding Charles Knickerbocker. Corby will be succeeded by Abel Davis, who comes from Denver where he has been associated with the F. B. O. office.

David Fahrquar, formerly manager of the local Select exchange, has returned from abroad, and has rejoined the Select force, selling in the Idaho territory. He was in London, where he was connected with the First National people.

H. W. Perry, prominent exhibitor of Ogden, Utah, returned Monday from the coast, where he has been the past few weeks, combining pleasure and business. Perry operates the Ogden, Otah and Cozy theaters in Ogden, and now has under course of construction the new Egyptian theater, which will open in April, according to present plans.

Fred Gage, newly appointed District Manager for Universal, was in the city conferring with Milton H. Cohn, manager of the Universal exchange. Gage has been in Butte, Montana, and Spokane, Washington, and will return to Denver upon completion of his duties here.

A successful sales conference was held for the salesmen of the Universal office here. All salesmen were in from their territories and the salient points of the spring program were gone over.

M. H. Cohn, Universal manager in this city, leaves for Logan and northern Utah tomorrow for a few days on business.

The Universal employes of this city turned out en masse yesterday to greet William Duncan and Edith Johnson, who stopped off between trains.

George Hays, manager of the Associated Exhibitors' exchange, just returned from a three weeks' trip into the Idaho territory, placing the productions on the spring program. He reports business as very good in Idaho, with the financial conditions coming back in splendid style.

Mrs. Lucille Baugh, of Shoshone, Idaho, has purchased the Baugh theater in that city from Miss Myers, and will continue the picture policy of this house.

The partnership of Olds and Brown have secured the Mutual theater at Rupert, Idaho, from Hollenbeck and Haynes, the transfer taking place this week.

Mike Nielson, owner of the Rex theater at Buhl, Idaho, has purchased control of the Rex theater in the same city from C. J. Kalinan, and will operate the two places.

Out-of-town exhibitors who "made" film row this week include: Frank Knotts, who operates the American theater at Park City; George Lindsay, owner of the Star and Crescent theaters at Eureka, and Abe Glassman, owner of the Alhambra theater at Ogden.

Albany

JAMES W. HOLDEN, the new manager of the Universal exchange in this city, arrived in town during the past week, and lost no time in getting down to business. Mr. Holden has been connected with Universal for the last six or seven years, starting in with the company in New York city as a salesman, and being later on transferred to Cincinnati, where he made an excellent record for himself as a branch manager. Mr. Holden came from Cincinnati here. The local exchange is now being transformed into what will later on be a buying office, and as such will be one of the largest exchanges in the city, serving about 400 theatres, and with additional salesmen covering the territory.

Alec Weissmann, who left this section two or three weeks ago for Mexico, where he will handle the United Artists' product in letters to friends here during the past week, writes that he likes the country very much, and moreover that a bull fight beats a baseball game, when it comes to real thrills. According to Mr. Weissmann, a Mexican exhibitor may buy a picture for twenty days, but has the privilege of running it for a few days, and then repeating at some time in the future.

The Leland Music Publishing Company, which was recently formed in Albany, with Jacob Tarsches, part owner of the Leland theatre, as a member of the company, will open a store on Clinton Square in Albany.

Fred W. Mansert, who has been manager and doing the booking for the Rialto in Glens Falls, for a long time, is no longer with the company. Fred Colburn was last week elected president of the company.

The offices occupied by the Famous-Players exchange in Albany, are now being redecorated throughout, the manager, J. H. MacIntyre, keeping a watchful eye on the work. About twenty are employed in the exchange.

Nathan Beier, manager for New York state, for Warner Brothers, dropped into town last week on his way to Buffalo, where he remained a day or so before returning to New York.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, head of the Robbins chain of houses, took a little vacation last week, and went rabbit hunting with friends.

There is a new manager at the State Theatre, in Utica, a Mr. Babson, hailing from Palmer, Mass. The house is one of the Goldstein circuit.

E. J. Smith, district manager for F. B. O., and former general sales manager for Universal, spent a couple of days here last week.

Jack Perrin, the four year old son of the manager of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres, has a mild attack of diphtheria. Incidentally, the father has been under quarantine, the nature of the boy's illness having been discovered while Mr. Perrin was at the theatre.

J. H. MacIntyre, who recently came to Albany, to handle the Famous-Players exchange, is the owner of a decidedly rare watch charm in the shape of a Verdun medal. Mr. MacIntyre went over seas in August, 1917, and participated in the fighting in every sector.

The Grand, at Malone, owned by Bob Landry, who also owns the Strand, in Ogdensburg, and the Clinton, in Plattsburg, will be reopened on April 1, following extensive repairs, during which Mr. Landry has been running his pictures at the Palace.

Film salesmen, who visited northern New York last week, came back to town with some wild tales of the blizzard that waged for two days. In some places the film salesmen were obliged to follow the street car tracks rather than the sidewalks to the treatres visited.

First Graphic will move its exchange on April 1, to the third floor of the building now occupied by the Universal and the Bond Photoplay companies.

With Ben Apple as captain, the bowling team from the American theatre in Troy, trimmed the five from the Troy theatre by 104 pins one night last week. But there is an explanation due in that Ben Stern was not rolling with the Troy theatre aggregation.

Fenton Lawlor, salesman for Selznick, has joined up in a similar capacity with the F. B. O. exchange, while Ben Smith has come with Selznick.

Irene O'Brien, relief cashier at the Lincoln in Troy, has gone with the Griswold, in a similar capacity.

Jane Holloran, one of the best known young women along Film Row, and who has been practically in charge of matters at the Selznick offices for the past year, and who was formerly with Grand and Warner, has left for New York, to become secretary to the director of Cosmopolitan Productions. Miss Caroline Goodman, will be promoted to Miss Holloran's position. Isabel Dailey, of the local F. B. O. exchange, has also gone to New York.

There has been little improvement in business at the collar factories in Troy, while a layoff at the car shops in Albany is also affecting the theatres.

Carpenters were busy in Troy last week repairing seats at both the Lincoln and the American theatres.

Carelessness on the part of patrons in losing money and articles continues in the Albany and Troy theatres. Mrs. Anna Bender, of Menands, who left a mesh bag in the ladies' room of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, and which contained about $2,000 worth of jewelry had the same returned to her by an unknown woman. At the Lincoln in Troy last Saturday, a woman lost $29 in bills, and on the same night at the Troy theater, a patron lost $25.

In its remodeled form, the Strand, in Troy, will accommodate about 800 person on the first floor. The carpenters have progressed to the extent that the house, damaged by fire, will be in shape to reopen on April 1.

Overhead will be cut during Lent at some of the houses in this territory. No soloists will be engaged at the Troy theater during the Lenten season, while the Lincoln will reduce its orchestra from ten pieces to eight, except on Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday, the same house also cutting down somewhat on its newspaper advertising.

The oldest statewide salesman in the person of N. I. Filkins was in town the past week, representing Advance Pictures, with headquarters in Syracuse.

"Cliff" Lewis, who is handling exploitation for the Strand, Syracuse, N. Y. He was former manager of the Strand, Schenectady.

Having jumped his newspaper advertising no less than ten times since he assumed management of the Griswold, in Troy, and having advanced his admission prices from 15 to 20 cents, without losing patronage, Jacob Golden, former newspaperman, is making a record these days in the local theatrical field. Mr. Golden is constantly springing new ideas to attract business. He now plans to offer $100 for the best story written with the locale in Troy, the story to be later transferred to the films and shown at the Griswold. Next week Mr. Golden will use Stephen Harrington, a Troy policeman, as his soloist, the cop having attracted much attention at the recent Patrolmen's minstrel show. By using his brains, Mr. Golden is breaking house records on Sundays. In place of running a show from 6 to 8:10 o'clock on Sunday night, he is finishing his first show at 7:45, and getting the "break," while at other houses patrons are forced to stand in line until after 8 o'clock.

BALABAN & KATZ'S entire staff, including executives, managers, ushers, musicians and all others connected with their chain of theaters, with their wives, gathered at the Sherman Hotel on March 1 for a big get-together supper and dance. More than eight hundred enjoyed the evening. Singing and dancing numbers were put on by artists of Balaban & Katz's entertainment staff. The party, which was a huge success, lasted until a late hour.

The Hoyburn theater has been taken over by Clyde Elliott, who operates the New Evanston theater and will conduct both houses as high-class feature theaters, booking only first-class pictures and big box office attractions.

O. Lambert has been appointed assistant manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's exchange to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Ira Firman.

Fern Andra, star of German movies, who used to live in Hammond, Indiana, is back in the old home town visiting her father and mother. The Woman's Club, Elk's Club and the Chamber of Commerce have all given receptions in her honor and many other affairs have been given to make the stay of Miss Andra pleasant.

Albert Dezel, who has been connected with Irving Mack for the past six months as general manager of the Chicago Advertising Service, has resigned to take charge of the advertising and publicity for Braden & Chester. His first assignment will be to put over "Powder River," which is shortly to open up for four weeks' showing in a loop theater. This is an official United States war picture which was taken on the battlefields of the world war by the United States Signal Corps.

Walter Hill, who recently resigned as Universal's Chicago publicity and exploitation manager, after having been connected with that company for several years, is now district agent for the DeVry Corporation, in charge of Indiana territory, and has opened headquarters in the Meyer-Kaiser Bank building, Indianapolis, Indiana.

Jack Cohen, old-time film salesman, is seriously ill at University Hospital, but has been able to see some of the film men who called there. He has been in the industry for a number of years and was connected with Goldwyn and Select.

F. A. Flader, general manager of theaters for Universal, spent last week in Chicago. From there he went to the coast, where he expects to make his headquarters at Universal City for a week or two.

Vice-President and General Sales Manager Grainger, of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation, spent Thursday and Friday at the Chicago offices of his company and then proceeded to the west coast by the way of Seattle.

D. O. Reese has left Warner Brothers to become connected with Universal as a salesman and will cover suburban territory. Harris P. Wolfberg, Divisional Manager of Universal, was in Kansas City this week-end, visiting with his family. He returned to Chicago early in the week.

Roy Alexander, who recently resigned as manager of Universal's Chicago exchange, is visiting the west coast and expects to make his headquarters in Hollywood for a few weeks.

Ira Firman is in New York city, considering an offer for a new connection with a film company. Mr. Firman recently resigned as assistant branch manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitans Chicago Exchange.

Buffalo

EDDIE WEINBERG, former manager of the old Buffalo Mark-Strand, Elmwood and other theaters, who went to London several months ago to manage a Universal house in the British metropolis is back in this country and postcards from the Elks' club, New York, that he is happy to be back once more in the good old U. S. A. Eddie is looking for a new connection. In addition to his long period of service in the local exhibitorial field, Mr. Weinberg also managed the Syracuse Strand during the illness of Edgar Weill, a few season's ago.

The local follies idea is taking hold in western New York. Last week the Strand, Niagara Falls, staged one, this week Manager Peckerick put over a local show at the Loew's State and down in Jamestown, Manager Peterson did the same at the Palace theater. More than half a hundred of Chautauqua countys fairest participated in the Jamestown revue.

Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the F. B. O. exchange was all smiles the other day. When we asked him what the big idea was he produced a $100 check which was awarded the office for being the winner during the week in the Major Thomson contract expedition. No wonder Fred is buying a new Nash roadster, with balloon tires and all the other trimmings. Mr. Zimmerman announces the resignation of Charlie Goodwin from the F. B. O. sales staff.

Well, well, our old friend E. J. Hayes, formerly manager of the First National exchange, has been engaged as a special representative on the Associated Exhibitors' sales staff to handle a special block of sixteen features.

Joseph H. Schuchert postcards from Havana where he is vacationing that it is easier to see the races run than to run movies. Mr. Schuchert is the owner of the Columbia and Colonial theaters and is one of the pioneer film men of western New York, being manager of the Old General Film exchange when it opened.

Franz Rath, Jr., formerly associate organist at the Temple in Salt Lake City and feature organist at the Isis, Denver, and other western houses, has been engaged to preside at the console of the Wurlitzer organ at the Lafayette Square, succeeding Arthur J. Martel.

Charlie Hayman, president of the Cataract Theater Corporation, operating the Strand and Cataract theaters, Niagara Falls, is now in Madrid, Spain. On March 24 Charlie will meet Albert of Belgium.

Gosh, it must be tough to be a musician in a Hornell theater. You can't smoke back stage in that town, for Chief Platt N. Bond has started a campaign to put an end to such a practice. But the other day Recorder Fay P. Rathbun, in police court, returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Harold Bradt, one of the melody boys at a Hornell theater, who was charged with violating the ordinance by taking a few puffs back stage. Bradt produced a score of witnesses who declared he had not been smoking.

Harold Angers and Martin Thorman have resigned from the advertising department of Paramount exchange. James Cranton, formerly with F. P.-L. for three years has been engaged as postal clerk. Marvin Kempner, local manager, is continually on the jump these days. He is determined that some other city is going to get that tombstone next year.

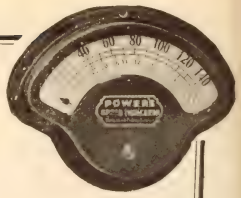
Paul Elliott has been added to the sales staff of the local exchange of the Selznick Distributing company. Mr. Elliott has been in Indianapolis with the same company.

The Stribling-Slattery battle attracted an unusually large gallery of film men. Among those noted at the ringside were Mike Kallett of Rome and Oneida, Mike Bloom of Cortlandt, Al Robbins, J. Meyer Schine, Howard Thurston of Lockport, Syd Samson of Bond Photoplays and many other "knights of the leaping tintypes."

Bill Calihan, manager of the Regent theater in Rochester, is now buying the pictures for the Eastman, Regent and Piccadilly theaters in Kodak Town.

Al Becker of the Becker Theater Supply Company of Buffalo is installing much new equipment in western New York motion picture theaters. He has installed two new high intensity Simplex machines at the Strand, Niagara Falls; two high intensity lamps at the Elmwood which Al claims improves the projection 100 per cent.; two machines, 700 chairs, a Raven half-tone screen at the opera house, Mount Morris, which has been changed into a picture theater by Charles Martina; a 700 chairs, a Raven Haftone screen in St. Matthew's church, two new Simplex mazda equipment in the Unity theater as well as a Dalite screen, two Superlite lenses and most everything else in this new J. D. Parmalee house.

Charlie Reiner, manager of the Grant theater, has gone to a sanitarium in Hornell, N. Y., to recover his health.



G. E. Cordingley, of the Gem, Oswego, N. Y., has advised the exchanges in Buffalo that he has been unable to obtain good pictures for his house because they have all been sold to the opposition and that he has leased his house to Associated Theaters, Inc., of East Rochester.

"The Little Brother to the Empire," is the way Harrison and Fitzer announce the opening of the remodeled Savoy theater in Syracuse.

Joe Liberman has been transferred from the Syracuse to the Rochester territory by Manager Sydney Samson of Bond Photoplays Corporation, while Jess Kaufmann has been transferred from Rochester to Syracuse.

POWER'S GOVERNOR TYPE SPEED CONTROL

AND

POWER'S SPEED INDICATORS

GIVE THE MANAGER AND PROJECTIONIST

ABSOLUTE CONTROL OF SCREEN PRESENTATIONS

SPEED INDICATORS

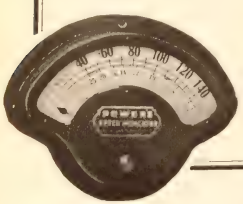
AN ARTICLE BY
F. H. RICHARDSON
Moving Picture World, March 1, 1924

HERETOFORE this department has rather discouraged the use of speed indicators on the ground that they were used to force the projectionist to adhere rigidly to an art-murdering "schedule" and to enable the leader of an orchestra to force the projectionist to synchronize the picture with the music instead of the orchestra leader synchronizing the music with the picture.

The speed indicator is here, however, and as it is used with excellent results in many first-class theatres, there is nothing to be gained by continuing to oppose it. It is an accomplished fact and further opposition would be merely butting one's head against a stone wall, with nothing to be gained but a cracked head, or at least a bad headache. The thing to do now is to fully accept the speed indicator. Occasional abuse is something that we are bound to find in every good thing which has ever been given to this world.

Synchronizing Possibilities

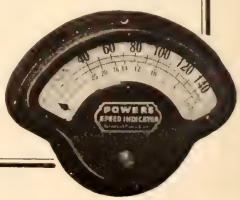
The great value of the speed indicator rests upon the possibilities it presents for synchronizing projection and camera speeds. Used for this purpose with the producer indicating the exact speed at which each scene ought to be projected, the speed indicator would instantly become a tremendously useful and absolutely indispensable part of motion picture equipment. Screen presentation would win the fullest recognition as an important factor in good showmanship, and projection would gain some of the attention which is now so generously given to production. The sooner all theatres install speed indicators the sooner will producers awaken to the opportunity lying at their door for correcting one of the worst abuses found today in projection, viz.: overspeeding. As a matter of fact, producers should issue a schedule with each production setting forth the exact speed for each scene. The speed for each scene could be carefully worked out in order to produce the best possible effect upon the screen and this undoubtedly would greatly increase the pleasure of motion picture audiences and receive the warm approval of the public. This has already been done to some extent, but we hope to see a wide acceptance of the idea properly worked out through the use of speed indicators.



Camera Speed Not "Standard"

It is idle to claim that camera speed is "standard." It is not standard, no matter how vociferously cameramen may claim it is, and in all human probability it never will be. This is so for any one of several reasons. As well dispute it as the fact that two plus two make four.

I have for years insisted that the correct presentation of the picture is the highest function of the projectionist, but he has not as a class arisen to the demand. It is true, however, that in most cases he is not permitted to do so, or at least not more than to a limited extent, by reason of schedule limitations. With speed indicators, however, it would not be necessary for any manager who is a real showman to wait for the producer to give a complete schedule of speeds for any given production.



With a speed indicator, however, and the correct speed of projection indicated by the producer himself, there certainly would be greater chance of convincing friend manager that if he wants an iron-bound schedule he must trim his film footage to somewhere nearly fit the time instead of ruining everything by overspeeding projection.

Taking everything into consideration this department strongly advises that speed indicators be included in all future projection installations. It is up-to-date practice, and as matters now stand is to be commended. Nearly all high-class installations are including speed indicators, and high-class installations are pretty good guides for less pretentious ones to pattern after in essential details.

Need of Prologue for Effective Presentation

This Feature of Program Can Result in Enhancement Or Ruin of Picture

By Joseph Plunkett,
Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

WHENEVER exhibitors of one of America's largest industries hold a confab and in beneficent moods exchange innermost secrets of program presentation, much wrangling over the subject of prologues is bound to ensue. Certain indomitable traits are inherent in most exhibitors —they love to feel that theirs is the best method of presentation and are not satisfied with being a step or two removed from this enormous ambition. This is a commendable characteristic, indeed, and easily found in any other American field of endeavor. Though I am one of the brood, I shall attempt to be different this time by being less recalcitrant; I merely shall offer my views in the following which may be regarded in any light but not disputed because they are based on experience alone. But to grant a concession I will say that it is quite possible for experience to differ.

Prologue Has Caused Much Discussion Pro and Con

It is apparent from the foregoing that I am pro-prologue. Whatever has been said derogatorily of the prologue, I have sought to overrule; but reiteration is sometimes necessary. I have read on one or two occasions of several people who have deigned to express themselves rather dubiously on this subject, its intrinsic value as a subsidiary factor to good picture presentation. It seems to me that the reason for this, their doubtful attitude, is attributable to the fact that the true meaning of the word prologue is very often misinterpreted. Once the prologue becomes unequivocal to all, it will serve all as invaluably as it has served the Mark Strand Theatre.

Not Necessary to Depict Certain Scenes of Picture

Evidently, the general impression seems to be that a prologue must of a necessity be a replica of a certain scene or anything else, no matter how irrelevant, from the photoplay which it preceeds. It must not. A prologue should — and must, to earn the right to be called that and to be of value — be representative of the style or type of photoplay it is to serve as an introduction. It must typify the locale for one, be atmospherical, strike a note of symbolism and suggest the nature of the picture that is to follow. Here it must stop!

But in a desperate effort to create atmosphere some have instead been accustomed to present such material that either bears no resemblance to the theme or which is a direct extract from the picture. The latter of the two mistakes oftimes reveals enough of the plot to destroy the desired illusion and thus kill the suspense, and is therefore impracticable. Imagine a producer spending hundreds of thousands in the making of a picture, leading up to the grand denouement of his story by many months of toil, only to have the climax shattered by a faulty prologue. An exhibitor may, with the best of intentions, do injury to both producer and audience. Which goes to prove that there are prologues and prologues.

Only Slight Danger of Overworking Prologues

The prologue may be overworked too, but the danger is slight. The only time the prologue idea will jar is when there is a constant repetition of the same scenery, soloists, music or other embellishments. It is even a necessity when the preliminary scenic picture is Chinese in character, for instance, and the exhibitor must switch to his feature picture of the Alaskan wilds. The climatic transition is so expensive that the shock which the spectator receives may be compared with that of a speeding car of which the brakes have suddenly been jammed on. It is here as well as in innumerable other instances that the prologue is an excellent medium. And as long as good prologues can be presented intelligently they will be successful and their life interminable.

I am not overlooking the fact that "the picture is the thing," and if it is in my power to enhance the picture's value with a prologue that can be perfect in every way, I doubt whether it is my duty NOT to do so since I would be rendering a service to the producer, the theatre and most important of all, the audience, without whom I would not be writing this today.

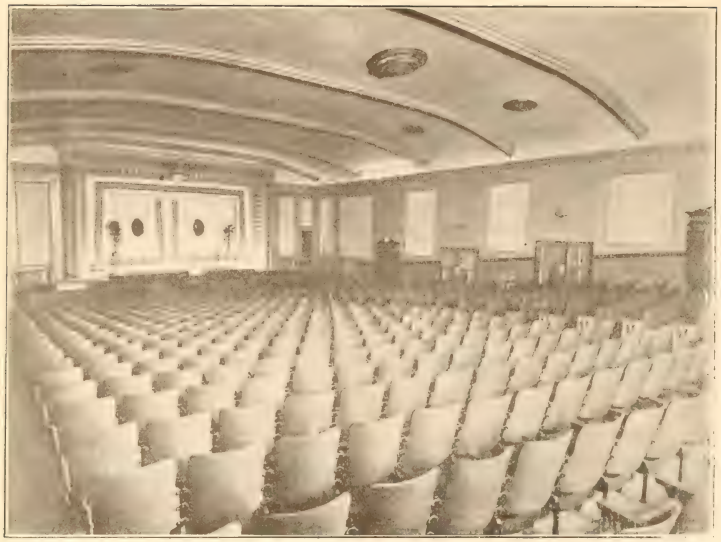
Worth Considering

THERE seems to be good food for thought in an article which recently appeared in an issue of the "American Projectionists." While the article is not signed, the contributor apparently has had reason to express his personal experiences.

Today, there are two articles which should be in every Projection Room, where continuous shows are given. A film measuring machine and a speed indicator connected to the Projector. These help out the Box Office in this way:

The new show comes in and is measured, and found to consist of say, 8,080 feet, not counting leaders and tail pieces, of course, the time allowed for each show is two hours, or 120 minutes including a 5 minute overutre and a 5 minute intermission between shows, which leaves 110 minutes for the film. Dividing 8,080 feet by 110 minutes, shows I must maintain an average of 73½ feet per minute, which is easy to do if there is a speed indicator. Slow marching scenes and slow action are allowed for and speed noted in first show, and I find that making allowance for them, my running speed must be 75, slowing to 65 and 70 for special scenes.

From this data a time table is easily made out, and a copy given to the box office, which enables a patron to know just at what time the picture he is interested in goes on.



There's a regularity about this class of show that is agreeable to all concerned. Many patrons hate to come in on the second or third reel of a feature, and put off their theatre going till another time, generally missing the picture they wanted to see altogether.

Keep after the Boss for these two articles, they are a part of the necessary equipment if the house is properly run.

Contract Involving $500,000 Let for Pensacola House

A contract involving approximately $500,000 went to C. H. Turner company of Pensacola, following opening of bids in New Orleans by the Saenger Amusement Company, which is to build a theatre in Pensacola, Fla.

There were twelve bidders. The permit has been issued and the Turner company is ready to start construction. The theatre, seating 2,000 persons, will be built of steel structural frame and combination of concrete, tile and brick. It will have an entrance 25 feet wide on Palafax street and a decorated arcade about 100 feet leading back to the entrance, which will be approximately 100 x 156 feet. The front will be 55 feet high and elaborately designed.

Ritz Theatre, Staten Island, is Model Large Suburban House

THE Johnson & Moses Theatrical Company, operators of the biggest and finest theaters in Staten Island, New York City, dedicated their new Ritz theater on the evening of Saturday, March 1.

The new Ritz theater will be one of the largest and best equipped theaters in Staten Island and will accommodate more than 2,000 persons.

The Ritz theater is a new departure in modern theater design, executed in Italian Renaissance. The facades are of glazed terra cotta and imperious pressed brick, enriched with classic pilasters, supporting a well proportioned and attractive terra cotta frieze, the center portion of which is carried up forming a pediment with a classic panel portraying Apollo and the Nine Muses, executed in rich scraffito.

The interior is of the Adams style of architecture, most attractively rendered with rich paneled side walls with tapestry panels extending to well proportioned cornice. The ceiling, which is beautifully paneled, gracefully splays to a large dome, 50 feet in diameter, enriched with ornaments and provided at the base with an ornamental cove providing a concealed lighting system in which two thousand electric lights are used.

The proscenium arch, 50 feet in width, is attractively executed in ornamental plaster, enriched in the center with a large and well proportioned cartouch. On each side of the proscenium arch are two tiers of boxes, placed on a rake insuring perfect vision of the stage. Most attractive ornamental arch is extended over the boxes, providing for a large organ chamber on each side of the proscenium.

On the mezzanine floor is a large lounge or reception room, beautifully paneled and provided with a groined ceiling, on one side of which is an attractive fireplace with well designed cast stone mantel piece. Directly in the center of the lounge is a large well hole surrounded with balustrade of classic design. The balcony is entered directly from the mezzanine through vomitories on either side. The first five rows of the balcony are arranged for loges, beautifully carpeted and equipped with tapestry upholstered seats. The ladies' parlor and men's smoking room are on the mezzanine floor, each being attractively paneled and decorated.

The lobby, which is of generous dimensions, is provided with Tino's marble wainscoting with light colored Italian marble paneled side walls above extending to the ceiling and enriched with marble pilasters with classic capitals. The ceiling is ornamental plaster with deep panels or coffers enriched with ornamental mouldings. On either side of the lobby, also at each end of the mezzanine, large mirror panels are provided set in metal settings, providing most attractive appearance.

The stairs throughout the building, which are exceptionally broad, are of Italian marble with marble and ornamental iron railings.

The lighting fixtures are most attractive in design. The main chandelier is 10 feet in diameter, is of solid crystal. This together with the main dome is lighted in four colors. Each color being controlled with a separate set of dimmers so that the building can be lighted in any color starting with a very dim light and gradually growing into a most brilliant lighting effect, or, if desired a combination of colors can be used in the lighting.

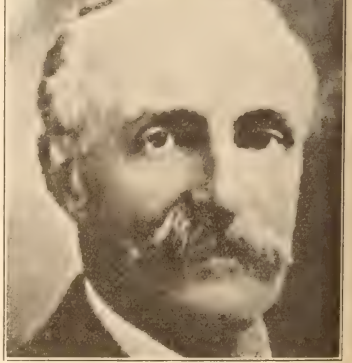
The building is provided with one of the largest and best pipe organs being furnished by the Skinner Organ Company.

Modern attractive marble drinking fountains are provided throughout the building and every convenience essential to the comfort of the patrons has been carefully studied and provided for.

The building is absolutely of fireproof construction throughout and is provided with every modern fire appliance including stand pipes, sprinklers and portable fire equipment.

The stage, which is one of the largest, is equipped for any kind of a production. On the left side of the stage a three-story extension is provided in which there are 20 dressing rooms and large chorus room.

The building is heated with a blower system of steam heat insuring a generous supply of clean warm fresh air and is ventilated with two exhaust fans, eight feet in diameter, placed well above the ceiling line of the auditorium, drawing the air through perforated panels in the ceiling, insuring a constant circulation of fresh air at all times.



Theatre Building Proposed for Stillwell & Surf

Coney Island will have a $1,000,000 theater if plans of the Chanin Construction Company are carried out to put up a seven-story building, 104x185, at Surf and Stillwell avenues. The site has been leased for 63 years from Richard Garms at a reported total rental of $2,000,000.

Irwin S. Chanin, head of the company, says the proposed structure will seat 2,600 and the building will have stores, offices and a dance hall, roof garden and restaurant. The theater is to be on the rear of the plot and will have an entrance at the rear. The lessees are represented by Samul Kramer, attorney, of Manhattan, N. Y.

Solo Organist Engaged to Write Organ Numbers

Check Depreciation

In Your Theatre Chairs Before it is too Late

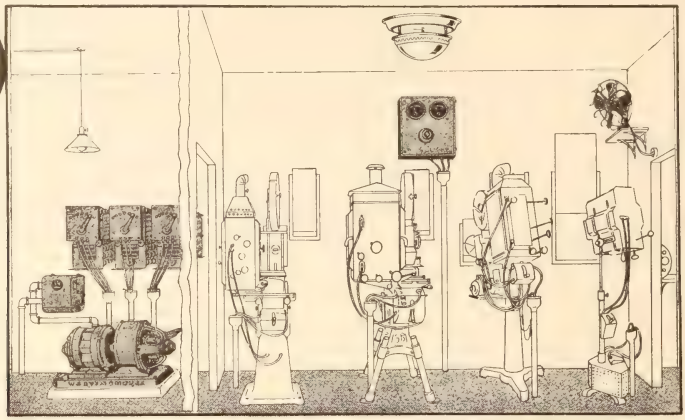
RECEIVING as they do the hardest individual daily use of any one single item of theatre equipment, Theatre Chairs are the most likely to show the marks of wear and depreciation. Next to pictures and program, no feature should be guarded more against failure to please and satisfy your patrons. As every good manager knows, it is the combination of comfortable chairs and pleasing surroundings in your auditorium with good bills on screen and stage that build dependable patronage and sure profits year in and year out.

As specialists in Theatre Seating, with an experience covering many years and thousands of theatre chair installations we know that we can be of assistance to you in appraising fairly and efficiently the exact box office and patron value of your present theatre chair equipment.

If your seating is not clearly up to the standard that you must maintain to safeguard the prestige and patronage you now enjoy, you want to know that more than we. It will cost you nothing to take us into your confidence. Our advice you will find disinterested and honest.

Poor seating is a poor investment in the first place but a still poorer one to hold on to.

Make today "Chair Inspection Day" in your theatre. Come into it as though a total stranger and try out your chairs yourself, by sitting out a show or more. Try them on yourself.



Then if you are in the least doubt of their entire suitability, write us to secure, without obligation, a theatre seating engineer's candid opinion.

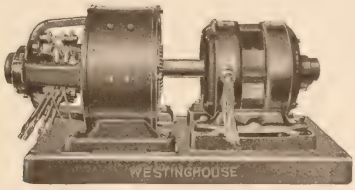
Electrical-Equipment for

No part of the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre is more important than the electrical equipment for projecting the picture on the screen.

The experience of Westinghouse in designing motor-generator equipment for motion picture projection means much when made use of. This experience has been acquired by actual contact with the various problems of better projection, affording a thorough knowledge of the apparatus necessary to produce the best results.



Westinghouse equipment is sold through distributors who are representative dealers in the entire equipment for a motion picture theatre—they have complete information on Westinghouse Motion Picture Projection Equipment and will be glad to assist you in selecting the proper electrical equipment for your theatre.

A new renovating machine recently imported from Germany by the Dura Film Protector Company. This machine immerses the film in a bath of cleansing solution, this solution being circulated and sprayed on the film in such a manner as to remove all foreign matter. The film is then buffed on the celluloid side in order to polish. At a demonstration of this machine the results appeared to be excellent.

New Machine Imported by Dura for Cleaning Film

A new machine has been imported from Germany by the Dura Film Protector Company for the purpose of cleaning and renovating film that has been in use for considerable length of time.

A photograph of this machine is shown on this page. The large container in the center is partially filled with a cleansing liquid. When this container is raised in a position to encompass the mechanism directly above it and the film threaded as shown, it is ready for operation. The method of cleaning is, as the film passes down through the tank, the cleansing liquid is circulated and sprayed in such a manner as to remove all foreign matter from the film. It is then exposed to the air and immediately dries, being buffed on the celluloid side as it passes the buffing wheel directly under where the film is finally rewound.

The machine operates with considerable rapidity and film, after passing thru it, appears to have all foreign matter removed, particularly every bit of oil taken from its surface. The machine is now in operation by the Dura Film Protector Company.

Pictures of Heart Beats Made by Scientists

The New York Tribune reports that motion pictures of the heart beats of a turtle and of heart pulsations of other animals have been successfully made by Benton R. MacMillan, chief mechanician of the physiological laboratories of the Cornell Medical College. The camera also shows the effects of drugs on the heart.

Some of the more recent experiments on glands and the reasoning power of animals, the importance of the thyroid gland, the results obtained by injecting iodine into animals from which the thyroid have been removed, also have been graphically portrayed.

He has succeeded in making some extremely difficult pictures depicting the diastole and systole of the heart of a turtle, taken at a five-inch range. He gained his idea for photographic reproduction of vital organs during a visit to Scotland last summer, when he witnessed the showing of pictures of blood circulation in the lower animals. The rhythmical expansion and contraction of the heart muscles is shown exceptionally clearly by the films.

Shows Effect of Drugs

Another phase of experimentation with heart pulsation has also been pictured by Mr. MacMillan, showing the effect of various drugs on the action of the heart. The organ used was taken from a frog and attached to a recording lever which makes a record of pulsation on a smoked drum. The heart is suspended in a liquid of the same composition as blood, into which lead tubes conducting the different drug solution with which the experiment deals. By means of a special perfusion stopcock, the invention of Mr. MacMillan, these drugs are injected one after another, and the resultant reaction recorded by the cinematographs.

Wide use has been made of the machine in the picturing of experiments carried on with sheep and goats by Dr. Sutherland Simpson and Dr. H. S. Liddell. The reasoning powers of the animals are shown. This was accomplished by means of a maze, through which the animals were trained while young to find their way.

E. P. Giacomazzi Rebuilding Old Star Theatre

E. P. Giacomazzi has completed arrangements for the rebuilding of the Star Theater building which was destroyed by fire about four months ago.

The new building as planned will consist of two stories. The lower story will be used for the theater and auditorium, and the upper one will contain office suites. The building, it is estimated, will be erected at a cost of $10,000 and will be modern in construction throughout. Beside filling the need for a large auditorium and the constant demand for office rooms, the new building will be an addition to the business section of San Juan. Construction work is under way.

More Light for Less Money With the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector

Pictures equalling the best in the largest theatres can now be obtained in smaller theatres without costly apparatus.

The same steady illumination possible with a direct current arc can now be obtained with the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector on either alternating or direct current at a great saving in first cost and at one-fourth the current consumed by the arc, taking into account all inevitable losses by either method.

Maintenance cost is also low because there is no carbon dust to injure the mechanism of the projection machine; and the cost of lamp renewals does not exceed the cost of arc lamp carbons.

The G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector produces better screen results than any a-c. arc equipment and is the equal of the d-c. arc outfit up to 50 amperes.

The simplicity of the Incandescent Lamp Projector (no adjustments during operation) and its healthfulness (no fumes or dust) recommend it to projectionists everywhere.

Explanation of Image Formation by Means of Plane Mirrors

LESSON II — PART II

THE formation of images by means of mirrored reflectors constitutes an exceedingly interesting study. It is possible, by varying the shape of the mirror, to change the apparent size, shape and position of an object when its image in the mirror is viewed. The control exercised by the shape of the mirror naturally gives rise to different forms such as

Plane
Convex
Concave

There are in addition two other forms of reflectors the parabolic and elliptic which however are used for special purposes since they are not capable of general image formation. The parabolic reflector, in particular, gives a very poor image and its use is confined principally to searchlighting and other forms of projection work. The elliptic form, theoretically, is ideally suited to certain forms of projection and many attempts have been made to apply it but no general success has resulted due mainly to the fact that with the comparatively large light sources today, the distortion of the principal image at the conjugal focal point is too great. With an extremely small light source of very high brilliancy and an accurate mirror, some interesting results could be obtained with this form of mirror.

Plane Mirrors

The statement has often been made that we see objects by means of the light which they reflect to the eye. All objects reflect light. Even lamp black, the most perfect absorber known reflects a small percentage of light. However, there are several kinds of reflection and in order for an object to be visible when viewed from any position every pin point on the object must send light rays in every possible direction. In other words the object must diffuse the light. Were it not for dust, scratches, fingermarks, etc. the surface of a mirror would be invisible. Its presence, however, could be detected by the images of other objects formed by it.

Now when such a diffusing object, as for instance, a piec of blotting paper, is placed in front of a plane mirror ever point on the blotting paper will send out light in every possible direction and such light rays as strike the mirror will be regularly reflected from its surface. The rays which do not strike the mirror are obviously useless as far as image formation is concerned.

Furthermore, when the eye is located in a certain position, only those rays which come from the object, strike the mirror, and are reflected to the eye are of any account as far as concerns viewing the reflection of the object in the mirror.

This fact makes it a little difficult to trace the paths of the light rays between object and mirror and mirror and eye. However, the position of the image bears the same relation to one side of the mirror that the object bears to the opposite side. Knowing this fact we can easily locate both the image and the paths of the principal light rays as follows.

Referring to Fig. 11, A shows the three requisits for image construction; an object, OP; a mirror, KM; and an eye E. In order to locate the image (part B) draw lines B and D from both ends of the object perpendicular to the mirror and continue them on through so that line A, on the opposite side of the mirror, can be made equal to B and line C equal to D. Join the ends of these two lines by the arrow as shown. This represents the image of the object as formed by the mirror.

Now (Part C) from both ends of the image draw straight lines to the eye, E. That portion of the lines between mirror and eye represents the actual paths of light rays coming from the object after reflection from the mirror. The lines between image and mirror represent the imaginary paths of the light rays coming from the image.

From the points where these lines cut the mirror (Part D) draw lines to both ends of the object. The actual paths of the light rays will then be as shown by the heavy solid lines and the object will appear as if it occupied the position of the image behind the mirror.

Furthermore, no matter where the eye was placed, as long as it remained in the field of the mirror, the object would always appear as if it occupied the fixed position of the image. Thus, in Fig. 12, if the eye were located at point H it would see object PE as if it occupied position FG. The heavy solid lines between eye, mirror and object would be the paths of the light rays.

If the eye were then moved to point J it would again see the object PE as if in position FG.

If the part LM of the mirror were cut off then the light rays from part OE of the object would not strike the mirror and hence would not be reflected to the eye. Only part FN of the image would then be visible. In other words, position J is outside the field of the mirror as regards part OE of the object.

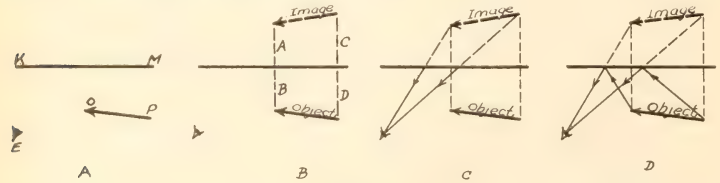

Figure 11

Reversal of Image

A great deal of confusion seems to exist in the minds of some people as to whether or not a plane mirror shows a reversed image of an object within its field.

It is a well known fact that when the printed page of a book is held up before a mirror not only are the letters seen reversed but the words also read from right to left instead of, as usual, from left to right. Thus the letters MO HOW if held up before a mirror would be seen as WOH OM. The argument as to whether or not the image is reversed chiefly centers around this point. The majority of text books claim it is reversed. However, one author, who has established a reputation for knowing optics recently came out with a book in which he claims the image is not reversed that it is all a matter of how you look at the image. In other words, referring again to Fig. 12, the rear side (side nearest mirror) of image FG, as seen when the eye is in position H, is really a picture of the front side (side nearest mirror) of object PE.

According to this writer, if the eye were placed on the opposite side of the image FG (side fartherest from mirror) thus facing both image and object at the same time, the image would then appear exactly the same as the object. Furthermore, if the sides of the object are really reversed then why not the top and bottom also?

An indication of the error in this line of reasoning lies in the fact that even if the eye is placed on the side of the image opposite to that of the mirror, the perspective still is not the same since point P on the object points downward away from the eye whereas point F, the same point on the image, points upward or toward the eye.

However, the chief fallacy of this argument lies in endowing images with two sides a front and rear. Such a claim, to say the least, is unique. It is practically equivalent to saying the plane mirrors are capable of looking around corners and seeing the opposite sides of objects.

The test question is this: "What view of object DE does the mirror KM present to the eye located at some point H?

If a certain side of an object is presented to a mirror, that mirror will surely reflect a reversed image of that side of the object to the eye. We are not interested in hypotheti-

Features Embodied In New Simplex Ticket Register

The World Ticket & Supply Co. Inc., briefly outline below features of the latest model Simplex Ticket Register.

The construction of the Simplex Ticket Register is especially proper for drop key models, where the booth counter must be cut through next to the cashier for the operation of the keys. With this design, practically all the weight of the machine is carried by the front wall of the booth on account of the mechanism and motor being all at the back of the machine and next to the front wall of the booth.

Each unit of the Simplex is complete in itself, and has its own operating mechanism. The construction also makes possible an evenly balanced machine when in operation. The construction also permits the operation of all the units at the same time and where a customer wants an adult and child ticket the cashier does not have to wait while one set of tickets issues before pressing the button for the others. Every movement is positive in each unit. The feed wheel of each unit is designed so that no matter what wear takes place in the mechanism the tickets are cut at the proper place.

The magazines are open on one side with a retaining strip to keep the tickets from falling out. This construction leaves the tickets always free to issue without binding. This also leaves an unobstructed view of the tickets in the magazines. One of the chief advantages of the open design is that the magazine does not have to be removed from the machine to rethread, as the movement of a few inches of the magazine will allow the end of the strip to be picked up and the machine rethreaded without even opening the retaining strip.

The top plate of the Simplex machine is so constructed that there are no obstacles to interfere with the sliding of the coins in the making of change.

It is claimed that this register is meeting with material success and is being endorsed by many exhibitors in this country and abroad.

The World Ticket & Supply Co. Inc., report very good business for the past fiscal year.

Blizzard Fails to Make Impression on Simplex Service

TO folks who know, the "Ten Commandments," Paramount's superfeature, rings the top note of directorship and photographic harmony. So it naturally follows that the producers of this famous picture should insist upon perfect projection wherever the picture is shown.

Among the numerous theatres selected by Paramount for the "Ten Commandments" showing is the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia. On Tuesday night last were gathered a distinguished audience of public men, film executives and movie fans, all of them forming a first night gathering to greet the initial Philadelphia showing of the "Ten Commandments" at the Aldine. Present also were certain executives of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, who were extremely gratified at the enthusiastic manner in which the city of brotherly love welcomed their latest offering.

In the Cohan Theatre, where the "Ten Commandment" is now showing in New York City, the Projection has called forth unstinted praise and it was natural that in the opinion of the film executives the projection for this picture should receive like praise at the Aldine Theatre.

Therefore, as the story goes, bright and early the following morning, the telephone on E. M. Porter's desk at the Precision plant rang loudly for on the other end of the wire was Harry Rubin. Mr. Rubin is the Chief of Projection at the Rialto, Rivoli, and Criterion Theatres, New York City, and was also delegated with the job of supervising the projection of the road shows that are touring the country with the "Covered Wagon" and the "Ten Commandments."

"How" asked Rubin over the 'phone, "how long would it take you folks to install three new Simplexes and three High Intensity Lamps in the Aldine Theatre in Philadelphia?"

"When do you want 'em" queried Mr. Porter. "Well" said Rubin, "our folks don't want another show to go by without it's run on different machines so it looks as though we'd have to rush them down right away."

So it was left. And things began to move, with the result that at four o'clock that afternoon, with the advance guard of a real old fashioned blizzard beginning to blot out the familiar buildings on 34th Street, the Simplex truck left the factory with its three complete Simplexes that had to be installed in Philadelphia that night. And through the howling blizzard they went, reaching the Aldine Theatre at 11:30 where E. S. Porter, Jim Soons (electrical wizard of Precision), Mark Swaab (the Philadelphia distributor for Simplex) and the Aldine projection crew formed a reception committee when the snow covered truck drew up at the theatre.

And like a well trained unit, they started to work with the result that just as the first streaks of daylight illuminated the bronze features of William Penn atop the City Hall tower, in the Aldine theatre, a tired group were just finishing a screen test of the completely installed trio of Simplexes. A final tuning up and then all was in readiness for the matinee which was witnessed by a critical jury composed of Famous Players representatives, Aldine Theatre respresentatives, distributor representatives and projectionists whose verdict was "perfect" after which verdict E. S. Porter accepted the thanks of all concerned for the almost unprecedented service which Precision had rendered and it was during this time that the thoughts of the "Eleventh Commandment" flashed thru E. S. Porter's mind and softly he murmured to those around him "Thou shalt use none but the best."

Company Makes "Grand" Modern House

With the taking over of the Grand Theatre, the James Theatre Company made various renovations in the "Grand" which now put the theatre in the better suburban house. Before remodelling, the theatre contained ten posts which were removed completely and the theatre now has the appearance of a modern structure although it is one of the oldest houses in Columbus, Ohio. The stage warrants special notice for the pretty design.

Do Your Box Office Receipts Slump in Summer?

You can prevent a serious drop in attendance during the Summer. One of the best known theatres in Chicago ran to capacity all during the torrid days last Summer. There is only one way under the sun that they could have done this. The answer is —cooler air.

It is not any too early for you to prepare for the coming hot weather. You will not be satisfied with a poorly planned ventilating system so why not let us talk over your proposition now while there is ample time.

Sturtevant sales engineers in your vicinity are able to talk to you on any kind of a system. They will recommend only the one best suited to your needs.

Practical Optics for the Projectionists

cal cases involving the placing of the eye in positions where no image would be visible The point is: "What do we actually see?"

The thing we really see is a "reversed impression" of the object, in the mirror. And the top and bottom of the object are not reversed for the same reason that type for printing is not placed up-side-down by the typesetter. Furthermore, in photography, when printing a positive from a negative, the positive is not placed up-side-down with respect to the negative, yet the negative prints a reversed picture on the positive and type must be set "backwards" in order to print in the regular manner. Also when threading a Graphoscope Portable projector, the film must be placed with the emulsion side toward the aperture (reversed) in order to compensate for the reversal caused by the right-angled prism (mirror action) used in this machine.

So it is with the plane mirror also.

Difference of Opinion

In a recent issue of the NEWS we printed the recommendations of a certain manufacturer for cleaning the "head" of a motion picture projector. The same issue also contained a short talk on the depreciation of screens.

In commenting on the above two points, R. H. Palmer, Jr., Manager and projectionist of the Dixie Theatre, Dunedin, Fla., has the following to say:

"I have always used gasoline to clean my machine heads. First I use a toothbrush and gasoline, then submerge the machine in gasoline a number of times after which I remove it and turn a strong stream of water on the head. I follow this with an air-blower working at a pressure of 80 lbs. per square inch. Have been using this method of cleaning for the past five years and find it about as good as any."

Screen Formula

"The best way to remodel or renovate a screen is to buy a new one. I have made six or seven screens in the past seven years according to the following directions.

"Have a carpenter build a frame four inches from edge of projected image (I presume Friend Palmer means that the frame should extend out four inches beyond the edge of the picture on all sides. Thus, if the picture was 12x16 feet, the frame would be 12 ft. 8 in. by 16 ft. 8 in.)

"Cover this frame with fibre or beaver board and paste a good quality of heavy paper on top of this. Apply two or three coats of painter's glue, or size, to the paper covering and after this dries give it two coats of aluminum paint. Then apply another coat of clear glue and before it dries sprinkle or dust on some aluminum powder. This leaves the screen surface like sand paper. It is not glossy and gives a good picture. The cost is around $2.00 per foot the short way (referring evidently, to the height. A 12x16 ft. screen would then cost 12 x 2 or $24.00.)

"As to the lasting quality, I know one that was used three years and was still in fair condition at the time it was destroyed by fire."

A Matter of Opinion

Gasoline, it must be admitted, is a good cleansing agent but the chief criticism we have to offer is that it evaporates so fast as to have a tendency to leave the dust and grit on the bearings instead of removing it. A light oil would undoubtedly be better.

However, the experiences of the individual projectionist should influence their choice.

Depreciation of Screens

We do not exactly agree with Friend Palmer's statement that the best way to renovate a screen is to buy a new one. In many cases this would be the better course to follow, however, one of the arguments for using a high quality screen is the ease with which its surface can be brought back to nearly its original condition by means of cleansing. The crystal beaded type of screen particularly is good in this respect:

The screen formula seems to be all right but it is our opinion that it would not retain its intial high reflecting power much over a year. If this were true, it would, no doubt, be quite as economical in the long run to purchase a high grade screen in the first place since such a screen should easily give five years service.

We recognize the fact however, that economy, or other reasons may dictate making your own screen and on this score alone it is justified IF proper care is used to get a good finish since a poor screen, or one having reflecting characteristics unsuited to the particular theatre in mind, can do more damage to the box office receipts than the comparatively slight saving resulting from "making your own."

A good screen is the best kind of an investment.

Egyptian Theatre to Be Built in Alhambra

W. G. Kellow and Theodore Nagel have purchased frontage at Valley boulevard and Garfield road, Alhambra, Cal., and have commissioned Architect John W. Smart to prepare plans for a two-story structure that will contain an Egyptian theater and will cost about $150,000.

Marcus Loew Adds Another to New York String

Marcus Loew has added a theatre in White Plains to his Greater New York string. The playhouse will be given a gala opening about two weeks from now, attended by stage and screen stars in person.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Adds to picture interest the appeal of good photography—affords an additional safeguard for the success of the picture in the eyes of the audience—carries quality from studio to screen.

Look in the margin of the release print for the identification "Eastman" "Kodak."

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base, is available in thousand foot lengths.

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT

"Thou Shalt Use None But Simplex"

The Paramount Super Feature

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS"

opened at the

ALDINE THEATRE PHILADELPHIA

Present at the opening were various officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, who were NOT entirely pleased with the projection, for the Aldine was NOT using Simplex projectors.

And here's what happened the next day—

Mr. Harry Rubin, who has charge of projection at the Criterion, and the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres in New York City, and who has charge of "THE COVERED WAGON" and "THE TEN COMMANDMENTS" projection, got in touch with us and here's what happened.

10:00 A. M.—Phone Call—"Can You Install Three Simplexes with Simplex High Intensity Lamps at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, by tomorrow morning?"

10:01 A. M.—Answer—"Sure"!!

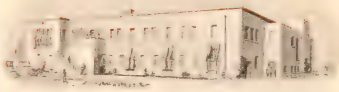
4:00 P. M.—Machines loaded on Simplex truck.

11:30 P. M.—Arrive at Aldine Theatre during howling blizzard.



6:00 A. M.—Installation complete. Machines tested.

2:30 P. M.—Matinee started.

Later—Famous Players officials, Aldine management and picture men present congratulate Simplex representative on projection and service.

Unanimously agree that projection now is the finest ever witnessed at the Aldine

NEW YORK

Gloria Swanson has made another "Humming Bird"!

You know what "The Humming Bird" is doing! Breaking records from coast to coast. Copping a barrel of coin. Absolutely the box-office sensation of the past six months!

Here's a promise and a prophecy: "A Society Scandal" will be even more of a sensation! Bigger crowds. Bigger money. The greatest Swanson of them all!

Drop around to the Rivoli, New York, and watch the crowds. And read these reviews:

"Fits Miss Swanson even better than did 'Zaza' and 'The Humming Bird.'" —Brooklyn Eagle.

"The very best thing Allan Dwan has ever directed. Everybody is at their very best." —Tribune.

"Unusually large crowd lured to the Rivoli by the star's name and the title. None of them disappointed." —Herald.

"I should like to have the revenue it will bring. Gloria's fans are going to eat it up." —American.

"A vehicle upon which any exhibitor can ride with profit." —Telegraph.

"Designed to tickle the ladies. Swanson fans will draw long breaths." —Daily News.

"Gloria never so glorious. Better than 'The Humming Bird.'" —Evening World.

The Fighting Coward

(Paramount—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

CHALK up another hit for James Cruze. Here's a picture that answers the continual demand for "something different." Taking his company right down into the heart of Dixie, Natchez, Mississippi, to be specific, Mr. Cruze has taken Booth Tarkington's story of ante-bellum days along the famous waterway and developed it into one of the most delightful pictures we've seen in several months—a picture which is at once a drama, a comedy, a satire and a romance.

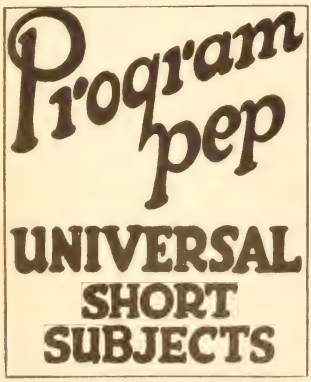
SPECIAL SHORT SUBJECT NEWS

Universal Short Subjects Will Put Spice In Slow Programs

FOR that necessity of successful programs, snap, try Universal Short Subjects! You will find every conceivable kind of material in the big array of stars and subjects Universal offers, all of which has proved itself the best box-office ammunition! Comedies, westerns, news reels, all are the best the market affords—and have stood the acid test of audience appeal! Try them!



Your patrons will laugh themselves sick at this comic scene from the Universal One Reel Comedy, "Keep Healthy."

New Two-Reel Westerns Are Real Treats

THE new two-reel westerns will be made with all the care devoted to full-length pictures. They will be feature pictures in short lengths! The plans for these new two-reel westerns are the most ambitious ever undertaken for any short subjects. Stories from well known authors are being purchased and all the stars have been picked with care—Pete Morrison, Bob Reeves, Harry Carey, Jack Mower and many others, all stars. The direction will be the best! They are just the kind of westerns that you have always wanted.

International News Reel No. 22 the Best Ever

FOR THE first time in history, Umberto Romagnoli, International News cameraman, and Captain Coppola, crack pilot of the Italian Air Service, hovered over the mouth of Mount Vesuvius in an airplane, shooting "close-ups" of the seething volcano amid swirling smoke and deadly gases. A big, new thrill your fans will never forget and which you get in International News No. 22 at no extra cost. The Prince of Wales makes his first public appearance since his last riding spill—and another big spill takes place in Elgin, Ill., where four thousand barrels of beer are poured into the streets by prohibition officers. These and other big news events in International News No. 22 are indicative of what International News gives you always without extra cost!

You Can't Go Wrong with The Leather Pushers

"IT'S the finest short feature on the market today. Sullivan is a whirlwind. They're certainly a money-getter. Book them and boost them big"—Manager Peck's Theatre, La Salle, Ills. The fourth series is the best of them all and Billy Sullivan is better than ever. They are made from the inimitable Collier's Weekly stories by H. C. Witwer.

Pete Morrison a Great Favorite in "Ghost City"

MANAGER O. L. Meister of the Whitehouse Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., says: "Any exhibitor who doubts what a serials can do should have attended our opening today. Ghost City and Pete Morrison are becoming great favorites. We did better than expected. It offers great exploitation possibilities." If your audience wants action they will get it in this serial.

Get Ready For "The Fast Steppers"

THE new racing series is going to be fastest two-reel series ever made! Billy Sullivan and Shannon Day have just finished the second chapter under direction of Edward Laemmle. They are based on "The Information Kid" stories by Gerald Beaumont, read by thousands in the Red Book Magazine. Book this series now! Be ready to show them as soon as they are ready!

Erle C. Kenton to Direct New "Gump" Series

THE Gumps are back in a new series with Erle C. Kenton directing. Mr. Kenton has directed some of Mack Sennett's best comedies in the past and it is dead certain that he will make the new Gump series more famous than ever. Melville Brown and Phil Dunham will assist Mr. Kenton and arrange the stories for Andy, Min and little Chester. Samuel Van Ronkel is now busy with the new production plans and Joe Murphy, Fay Tincher and Jackie Morgan will be featured.

Rudolph Valentino A Real Sensation With Women Patrons

THE screen's greatest lover is back with Carmel Myers in a two-reel re-issue that is a knockout. The Valentino name will jam them in! Read what St. Paul did with "A Society Sensation": "Society Sensation with Valentino a real sensation, packed our Tower theater all week; played to more women than we generally play to on entire week."—Signed, Joseph Friedman, Tower Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Double-barreled thrills!

Double-barreled because—FIRST, the thrills are built right into the story, written by the famous and popular Saturday Evening Post author, Courtney Ryley Cooper, who is a real genius when it comes to planning hair-raising, breath-taking situations. SECOND, because these stupendous thrills are enacted by William Duncan, himself, king of dare-devils and the greatest chapter play star in pictures today. That's why "The Fast Express" will make any other chapter play look like a pink tea. It is in every sense of the word a super-serial.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

REVIEW ~ by Martin J. Quigley

Hodkinson Has a Sure Bet In Five-reel Comedy-melodrama

"HIS DARKER SELF," an Albert L. Grey production, directed by John W. Noble, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson corporation. Featuring Lloyd Hamilton. From a story by Arthur Caesar. Subtitles by Ralph Spence. Five reels.

THIS comedy-melodrama, made in the D. W. Griffith studios, is a subject that has the ingredients of a clamorous success. It is funny in concept and funny in execution and the sub-titles are among the funniest that have ever been written into a picture

The production, we have heard, was originally laid out as a starring vehicle for Al Jolson, to be directed by D. W. Griffith and we have no doubt that Mr. Griffith more or less watched the picture going through his studio. If he did not he certainly missed a number of good sound laughs.

Lloyd Hamilton is as funny as Al Jolson probably thought he would be in the part. Hamilton is a diverting comic, well-schooled in all the tricks of getting his full share of laughs out of every situation and piece of business.

The comedy vein of the production is frequently broken into with decided flourishes in the realm of thrilling melodrama. Near the end of the picture there is an action-full chase participated in by a number of speed boats that constitutes an excellent thrill punch.

The story is light enough not to interfere with the gags and the thrills. Hamilton impersonates a colored man about town and seeks to track down a bootleg chieftain of darktown. He encounters a series of adventures that carries the interest safely through.

The sub-titles of the production, done by the talented Ralph Spence are a particular feature of the show.

We found the picture extraordinarily good entertainment. Its laughs and thrills can hardly miss with any kind of an audience. It ranks with the very best feature length comedies we have seen and we expect it to be responsible for a gale of laughter in the motion picture houses of the country.

The Cast: Lloyd Hamilton, Tom Wilson, Tom O'Malley, Lucille LaVerne, Irma Harrison, Edna May Sperl, Sally Long, Kate Bruce.

EXHIBITORS HERALD March 15, 192

Mid-Western Classic Is Great Picture

"THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER, a Whitman Bennett production for W. W. Hodkinson, from the story by Edward Eggleston. Featuring Henry Hull and Jane Thomas. Directed by Olive Sellers, scenario by Eve Stuyvesant. Six reels.

Not being an expert historian on the period with which this picture deals, we can't make any comments as to the historical accuracy of the feature, but from the standpoint of entertainment this picture will be hard to beat. It is a picture that relies largely on fine directing and intelligent acting to put it across and introduces a minimum of blood and thunder action to hold the attention. Jane Thomas as Hannah Thompson, the "bound-out" girl, without any posing or striving after effect, portrays most convincingly that character so seldom seen on the screen or elsewhere, a very sweet and appealing woman of innate chastity and virtue. Her work is consistently excellent in this picture.

Henry Hull's work, in the title role, while very fine in every way, does not seem to leave the lasting impression that is gained by seeing Miss Thomas. He appeared to have more actual footage than she, but the outstanding figure of the picture, to our mind, was Miss Thomas. Hull's interpretation of his character, however, was very good and added greatly to the enjoyment of the picture.

One of the surprises of the picture was the acting of Nat Pendleton, said to be amateur heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. One unconsciously associates such brawn as his with a minimum of real brain power, but as Bud Means, devoted friend to the schoolmaster, he does some very intelligent work and handles his part well throughout the production.

The work of everyone was good, but aside from the above mentioned the outstanding characters were Mary Foy and Arthur Ludwig as Mis' Means and Pete Jones, respectively, who made us detest them thoroughly. Tom Brown as "Shocky" Thompson and George Pelzer as Squire Hawkins

The story concerns the adventures of Ralph Hartsook, a Hoosier schoolmaster of the days prior to the Civil War, during his reign as schoolmaster in the "Flat Creek" school district in Indiana. He falls in love with Hannah Thompson who has been bound-out to the family with whom he first boards, and after having been accused of being guilty of the many robberies which have startled the country, he, with the help of Bud Means, brings the guilty ones to justice, loves, himself, and marries the girl he loves.

It is a picture you would do well to see.

The Cast: Henry Hull, Jane Thomas, Frank Dane, Mary Foy, Walter O. W. Nat Pendleton, Dorothy Allen, Ludwig, Hall, George Pelzer, Arthur Palm, Frank Andrews, Harold McArthur, Tom Brown, Adolf Link, Jerry Sinclair, Dor- Walters, Dick Lee.

Action! Action! Action!

Thrills—action—romance! But these alone do not make a great picture. Story—ideas—continuity—are equally essential. And that's why the producer employed the screen's foremost story writers --

John Emerson and Anita Loos

Result: A typical Emerson-Loos story, with many comedy climaxes to relieve the tension of the melodrama—When not shivering with suspense you're convulsed with chuckles.

When, for instance, the supposed bride lifts her veil and reveals the features of—another—your sides fairly shake. Mirthful recreation without slapstick. Fun without roughness.

"I've got as much right to the gal as you have!"

"Oh, please rush this call for help!"

Meets Biggest Competition

The picture has played Broadway and justified itself—with "Ten Commandments", "Covered Wagon", "The White Sister", "Hunchback" and "Great White Way" as opposition.

No matter how excellent tne dramatic feature, it needs the "relief" of a good comedy to make a thoroughly pleasing program.

Grace Kingsley, reviewing the program at Clune's Broadway in the Los Angeles Times, says:

"Neal Burns disports himself in a thoroughly delightful Christie Comedy called 'Fool Proof'. ***

"What a relief these bits of nonsense are after the heavy emotion of the 'features'! Why don't the larger houses follow the common sense plan of putting in a snappy two-reel joy-pager, instead of their everlasting grand opera?

"It is always a joy to go to Clune's. You don't have to watch any second-rate steppers prance, any third-rate singers warble, nor get a crick in the neck looking up at the high-brow grand opera tabloids."

Washington's Birthday Pulled $14,520—"Robin Hood" Formerly Held It for Fortnight's Run—Look for Better Than $50,000 on Second Week—Business Good at Other Houses

'AMERICA' SMASH HIT

"Scaramouche," the Metro special, smashed all existing box-office records at the Capitol last week by running up gross receipts of $67,960. The picture on Washington's Birthday alone drew $14,520. That is now the record for one day's taking at the big picture house.

As against "Scaramouche," the Strand held "The Hunchback Notre Dame," the Universal picture, but it did not have the draw that the presentation at the bigger house held. "The Hunchback," however, is also held over for the current week. The Capitol yesterday got another smashing day for the second Sunday, $12,290 gross, with the outlook being that business will be in the neighborhood of $50,000 on the second week.

The record for one week at the house was formerly held by "Robin Hood," while the two weeks' record was recently captured by "Little Old New York."

"Again-Prints"

L. B. JONES, who while a prominent executive of the Eastman Company, is also an advertising man, makes this salient contribution to the important subject of prints:

"Whatever tends to give the greatest satisfaction to the ultimate consumer, even if it costs more money at the start, works for the general progress and prosperity of the business."

A true statement! Elementally true, of course. But there's many a business today — and especially the motion picture business — that demands some fundamental business axiom.

* * * *

Prints are the goods we sell to the public. It is by prints alone that we are known to the public; prints make our sole contact with the public. Prints are the entertainment we sell; and the motion picture business will rise or fall by virture of the quality of entertainment it purveys.

It matters not whether Mary Pickford is in the picture; nor whether it is a picturization of a great drama; nor the best work of the best director; nor whether money has been lavished upon sets — if the print shown is too distressingly bad to be enjoyed by the public.

And yet — How much thinking and talking do we do about the condition of prints? How much as compared with the production of the negative? Is it not a fact that all production energy, initiative, finance and hope to the point of hysteria — are centered upon the making of the picture?

And then — How much money, time and consideration are devoted to the picture the public sees — the print — in the several thousand theatres where the public will see it, and judge it by the quality of the print?

* * * *

Prints, we repeat, are the goods we sell to the public. And yet, in all the advertising pages of the trade papers, there is not a word said, nor has there been in our recollection, about the quality of the prints.

That, certainly, is a singular fact.

The advertisements discuss negative value only. Apparently it is assumed that the prints furnish the negative value; that they are alright.

And yet we know that they are not.

That often they are wretched.

Some companies, judging from the questionnaires coming back from exhibitors, pay attention to their prints; others plainly enough, do not. While the advertisements are silent as to print quality, the salesmen in the field are not. They are selling pictures to many theatres by emphasizing print quality above the negative value.

We are wondering a good deal these days about the effect of the radio upon picture theatre attendance. When exhibitors like Fred Desberg, Frank Newman, A. H. Blank and others tell us that radio is encroaching, we realize the situation is serious. But, for all that, the question simply simmers down to a matter of competitive entertainment.

If the picture holds its own, if it maintains its appeal, radio won't bother it to any extent. But it must keep up its quality of entertainment, and that means, beyond any argument, that in those several thousand small towns where radio gives that much-desired contact with the outside world, the motion picture must —somehow — be a great deal better than it is — if we regard as essential " the general progress and prosperity of the business."

And it's a matter, apparently, that is equally up to the prosperity of the and concern of exhibitors and producer alike.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WHAT numberless letters and telegrams describe as an interesting address was broadcasted from WOR radio station at Newark, N. J., Monday night by William A. Johnston, president and editor of the News.

Mr. Johnston's talk, as he prefers to term it, summed up the idea that salaries paid to stars are simply a result of supply and demand.

"There is one Norma Talmadge and one Mary Pickford. People all over the world want to see them in pictures, hence their services are in demand and the supply being so exceedingly limited, their services are worth a lot of money."

Mr. Johnston explained the case of Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd, Norma Talmadge, Charles Ray, Jackie Coogan and a number of the other greater stars who are producers.

We furnish a few vital points in Mr. Johnston's address:

"The movie salary is not large in the theatrical world. The Stone family, Fred Stone, Mrs. Stone and their daughter, Dorothy Stone, draw a combined weekly salary of $8,000—paid out of the earnings of a single theatre, whereas in the case of a Chaplin, or Fairbanks, or Lloyd film, it is being played simultaneously, day and night, in several hundred theatres all over the world. By all business logic the film star ought to receive a great deal more than $10,000 a week."

"Stars and their salaries are economically like diamonds—the price is high, keeps going higher, and always will be high because few are to be had and everybody who can afford them wants them."

"It is exactly the same with the lesser stars and feature players. There are some seventy well known actors and actresses whose services are greatly in demand—so much so that they work some seventy odd weeks a year. They work in several pictures at once, and their salaries range from $500 to $2,500 a week."

"The producers are willing to pay, because you, yourself, want to see these favorites at your theatre, and because you want to see them, your exhibitor wants to get pictures that feature them. He makes known his wants to the distributor and the distributor, in turn, demands the pictures from the producer. So there you have your plain case of supply and demand which raises the price of these stars' services.

"It is exactly the same economic law that determines the price of a pair of shoes or a suit of clothes or the food that you eat.

"Most people don't understand the movie and all that goes with it because they still think of the picture as they do of other forms of entertainment. There is a vast difference. The stage is a business, but the motion picture is an industry."

AFTER viewing the latest James Cruze picture, "The Fighting Coward" and being minded to enthuse ad lib over this most delightful production, we began to write: "Add another triumph to James Cruze" when we found that our own reviewer and still another had opened their appraisals with exactly the same words. So we will begin all over and also take a new tack.

"The Fighting Coward" is a thorough-going delight. Who couldn't be charmed with it? To take a straight drama, keep it popping every moment with action and interest and then deftly satirize it all so that laughter is apt to jump out of any nook and cranny of the play is accomplishment indeed.

James Cruze is a director par excellence, but—and this is the moral we point—James Cruze is making one hit after another today and winning plaudits from every side because James Cruze is an organization director. He can, without losing a bit of his own virile originality, take advantage of all the resources, facilities and brains about him. He is amenable. His is not a one-track mind. He feeds others and lets others feed him back. His eyes and ears—with all his training and experience—remain open and his bump of egotism keeps low.

And that, gentlemen, is our idea of a director of today, because today the public wants organization made pictures. The public demands, say the genius of one man's inspiration, but assuredly finish that comes from many contributing sources.

WHEN so conservative and able a showman as Frank Newman comes out for the two-a-day policy with big pictures, it means something. The public wants them, says Mr. Newman; that's enough. The obvious thing to do is to give them to the public in the right way.

Referring to the picture situation in general Mr. Newman isn't worried about radio nearly so much as the renting policy of some distributors. First runs are being placed with vaudeville houses at very much less than the rentals asked from a picture theatre for the same pictures. The vaudeville house gives the picture to the public along with six acts of vaudeville for a less admission price than the prevailing picture theatre admission. "How," asks Mr. Newman "is the picture theatre to maintain prices—and rental prices—against such tactics?" We don't know.

THE third annual ball of the Paramount Pep Club—which is now in the fifth year of its prosperous existence—was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor last Friday evening. Each succeeding year since the Paramounters started their terpsichorean function, has found it (like the circus) bigger and better than ever—with everything new but the name. The various committees in charge of the ball co-operated with business-like efficiency. The general dancing begun at nine-thirty and continued until twelve o'clock—at which hour a special vaudeville show was presented.

Among the performers were Ann Pennington and Brooks Johns from the Follies, Grace LaRue, Rae Samuels, Van & Schenck, three celebrated pianists of syncopation, Zez Confrey, Victor Arden and Max Kortlander, Vincent Lopez and his orchestra—and other big-time acts from the Keith circuit.

After the entertainment dancing was resumed and continued 'til the wee sma' hours. Among the guests were Adolph Zukor and party, Jesse L. Lasky and party, Robert T. Kane, E. J. Ludvigh, S. R. Kent, Sidney Olcott, John Flinn, Dagmar Godowsky, Bebe Daniels, Richard Dix, Thomas Meighan, Irving Lesser, Fred Warren, Allan Dwan, Hugo Riesenfeld, William Brandt, Louella Parsons, Mel Shauer, H. H. Buxbaum, Charles McCarthy, A. M. Botsford, Claude Saunders, Harold B. Franklin, Victor Shapiro—and hundreds of others associated with the industry and other fields of commerce and art.

INDEPENDENT producers will appreciate a story told by Ex-Governor Carl Milliken of Maine at the last luncheon of the Independent Producers and Distributors Association; he seemed to hold the opinion that a new crop of producers was needed each year if independent production were to continue.

"Years ago," said the Governor "an old showman travelled New England with an act the leading feature of which showed a lion and a lamb reclining at ease and in amity. An inquisitive New Englander asked the old showman if he did not have considerable trouble with the two animals. "Oh yes," said the latter, "of course we have to renew the lamb occasionally."

ADD another theatre to the growing coterie of "two-a-day" show houses. This time a big new one—the Forum, of Hollywood, California. The Forum cost a round million dollars, seats 1,807 people, all in one floor, and has parking space for five hundred autos. The lobby has ten magnificent paintings, size 16 by 21 feet each. It is a splendid addition to the country's finest theatres.

"Of course," says Julian K. Johnson, the Forum's managing director, "we will run two shows a day, reserved seats and all that goes with the big picture presentation. That is what the big picture demands; and the big pictures are with us."

Mr. Johnson, formerly with Finkelstein and Rubin and A. H. Blank, and one of the most prominent theatre directors, was in New York last week. He wires us from Los Angeles that he has secured Griffith's "America" for the opening—and for an indeterminate run.

WHEN William Murphy, of St. Louis, was tried for robbing a shoe store recently, his defense was an alibi. He couldn't possibly have committed the crime for he was attending a movie that night with another young man and two girls, according to his attorney.

The other young man and the girls confirmed his story. But on cross-examination the prosecutor asked one of the girls what picture she saw at the theatre.

"Charlie Chaplin in 'Safety Last'," she responded.

"Guilty!" the jury decided.

The alibi failed because the jurors knew Harold Lloyd was the star of the film. The moral of this tale is if one wants to establish an alibi concerning attendance at a theatre—one should keep up to date on the pictures and their stars.

TOM MEIGHAN is a stickler for correct detail. He believes in covering his tracks so that no gaps are discernible. While making scenes for "The Confidence Man" he invited Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing the other day to give him several pointers. The warden probably knows more confidence men than any other person in the United States.

J. STUART BLACKTON has invented a new technical arrangement of lights by which he has procured effects in photography which never before have been shown on the screen. The experiments were conducted upon his arrival in Los Angeles and used for the first time in the studio set of "Between Friends."

Mr. Blackton will acquaint us with the technicalities of his invention just as soon as they are perfected.

IF the Japanese system of transporting film was adopted in America the firemen would be riding the rattlers as government employes. It's a strikingly original system—to say the least—and the Japs apparently have no knowledge that celluloid is highly inflammable. The film is shipped in a large canvas bag wrapped with straw. Tin containers are unknown. The Imperial Railways will not accept a shipment of film unless it is wrapped in straw.

This system if instituted here would certainly increase heart palpitation among producers, distributors and exhibitors alike.

The ever-present theatre bromide: — Program Subject to Change without Notice—would come into its own.

Imagine an exhibitor announcing to his audience—"We regret to inform you that we are unable to show "The Great Train Robbery" tonight as the film was destroyed by fire during transportation."

R. G. Liggett, president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas, tells this one:

"When I owned the old Seventeenth Street theatre in years past, I had an opportunity to sell it one day. I didn't care to sell at that time, but I asked the man who wanted it what he intended to use it for. He confided that he desired to establish an undertaking parlor there. The only thing left for me to do was to tell him that he had picked an ideal location as the theatre had been 'dead' for several years."

SIR PHILIP GIBBS, the British war correspondent and author, once wrote a book which he called "Now It Can Be Told." Under the same head, and with an eye on the German film invasion that followed the war, let us tell you something interesting about C. L. ("Bill") Yearsley.

On another page of this issue you will find an article by Mr. Yearsley on that same German invasion. He does not tell you, however, because he is too modest, that it was he who insisted upon the featuring of Pola Negri's name in connection with the first German pictures of hers that came over.—In our opinion, Miss Negri in great part owes her present position as a star in American pictures, to Bill's foresight and judgment. It might have come anyway But that is the way it did come. And we think it is due Mr. Yearsley, even at this late date, that the fact should be recorded.

Chicago Exhibitors Aid Music Fight

Join Broadcasters' National Association In New War on American Society

THE Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, at its monthly meeting held on March 7th, at Ridge Masonic Hall, voted one hundred per cent to become Class B associate members of the National Association of Broadcasters, and thus join the broadcasters, hotel men, ball room proprietors and allied interests in their fight on the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers.

The membership fee was fixed by the theatre men at ten dollars per house and all those present at the meeting, which represented a large proportion of Chicago theatres, paid their dues before adjournment. The Class B membership gives the theatre men the use of the broadcasters' musical library music tax free. The broadcasters guarantee to use the membership fee of Class B members, only for the maintenance of the music library and promotion of the fight in congress to amend the copyright law in such a way that the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers would be no longer able to collect the so called music tax.

Representatives of the Theatre Service Bureau appeared at the meeting and a committee was appointed to consider their proposition to secure reduction of fire insurance rates on moving picture theatres. According to the report rendered by Business Manager Jack Miller at the meeting, 208 theatres are now members of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, and everyone of them is paid up. Mr. Miller's report of the Association's many activities for the last month showed the organization is proving of great benefit to its members and was endorsed by the large crowd at the meeting.

A letter has been sent out to all members of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners by direction of this organization's board of directors, advocating the use of non taxable music wherever it is possible, and urging members not to utilize the music for which they are forced to pay a tax to the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, if they can avoid it. The letter also expresses the hearty sympathy of the board of directors for the fight being waged by the Broadcasters' Association on the music tax.

Building Code Bills Would Mean Big Saving

THERE is a chance of saving the New York State many thousands motion picture theatre owners of of dollars through the passage of two bills already introduced in the legislature and which have for their purpose the exemption of cities from the provisions of the proposed state building code, where cities themselves have their own bureau of buildings. In the Senate, the bill has been introduced by Senator John Knight, while Assemblyman C. P. Miller is fathering the bill in the lower house. The bills are identical and each has been referred to the committee on labor and industries.

The bills, as introduced, provide as follows: "This article (meaning the standard building code) shall not apply to the city of New York or to other cities having a bureau of buildings, which is charged with the duty of enforcing a building code enacted by the legislative body of such city."

In all probability, there will be a public hearing later on in the month on the bills. If the bills are passed and approved, it is generally conceded that they will thwart the drastic demands embodied in the proposed building code as first submitted.

Many New Film Concerns Formed in N. Y.

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week showed the following directors and capitalization: Blinderman's Amusement Co., Inc., $5,000, B. Warners Adjudged Losers in Suit by Harris

Charles K. Harris was awarded a verdict in the amount of $2,037 against Warner Brothers in the New York City court during the week. The suit was based on a contract made in 1922.

The complainant alleged he gave Warners his story "The Bridge of Sighs" to be made into a film, and the right to select three other scenarios, for which Mr. Harris was to receive $15,000. The latter says "The Bridge of Sighs" was returned to him and he substituted "The Tie That Binds." He alleged that $2,000 was due him under an agreement to pay him $2,000 a month.

Warners contended that none of the scenarios was finished suitable for use by them. They filed a counter claim for $8,000 already paid, but this claim was dismissed.

Chicago Plans Rules for Arbitration Board

An exhibitors' committee, including Ben Berve, Adam Dernbach, Jack Miller, Ludwig Siegel and Aaron Saperstein, are working with a committee from the Film Board of Trade to draw up new rules and by-laws under which the Arbitration Board will work. The committees' aim is not only to improve the procedure of the Arbitration Board, but to harmonize its rules with the state laws in every particular.

Film Censorship Debate at Rochester

BEFORE a large attendance of the City Club at Rochester, N. Y., March 8, the question debated was whether the motion picture censorship law should be repealed or not.

Courtland Smith, secretary to Will Hays, advanced arguments, supported by a mass of evidence, that the law should be repealed, while George H. Cobb, chairman of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, emphatically declared that the present censorship law should not be repealed.

The local newspapers gave columns to the affair.

Stench Bombs in Campaign to Unionize Chicago

The stench bomb campaign alleged to be carried on by organizers attempting to form the Theatre Ushers, Cashiers and Doormen's Union of Chicago, has caused considerable trouble to Chicago theatre men, eleven theatres having suffered from the malodorous bombs, following which police details were placed at these theatres to prevent repetition of the outrages.

The new union claims to be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor but theatre men have been unable to verify this. The stench bomb attacks followed efforts of the union organizers to compel theatre managers to force their employees to join the union, which in every case, met with a refusal from the managers. Investigation among ushers, cashiers and doormen develops the fact that most of them know nothing of the new union and are not interested in joining it.

Cosmopolitan Appointment Surprises Canada

Moving picture men of Canada have been stirred by the announcement at Toronto, Ontario, of the appointment of Jack Arthur, director of music and productions of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, to the general-managership of the Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York, owned by William Randolph Hearst. Mr. Arthur is to assume the new position May 1st, it is said.

As general director of music for Famous Players in Canada, Mr. Arthur has had supervision of music and specialty presentations in all of the 60 theatres of the corporation in the Dominion and he has had outstanding success in the producing of novelties, dances, prologues and other features of moving picture performances at the large theatres on the circuit.

December Film Exports Total $778,638

December exports of films totaled $778,638, according to figures made public by the Department of Commerce. The different divisions were:

Sensitized, but not exposed, 4,450,999 ft. valued at $109,761; negatives, 352,540 ft. valued at $121,079; positives, 10,590,922 ft. valued at $547,798. The monthly total is $778,638.

The month's largest shipments included 1,904,291 ft. unexposed film, valued at $51,125, to Japan; 183,404 ft of negatives, valued at $73,722, to England, and 1,654,566 ft. of positives, valued at $70,218, to Canada.

Looking Back on the German Invasion

By C. L. Yearsley, of 1st National

OF all industries ours is by far the most emotional and although it is, as an industry, also one of the most stable, we are one vast nervous organism insofar as major trade movements and influences are concerned. If self-examination and analysis of past events are helpful in fitting the individual to face the future with more confidence it may be equally beneficial for an industry to occasionally take stock of its forgotten ills with an eye to future cries of a possibly similar nature.

On Monday, Dec. 13, 1920, motion picture America was startled and mightily disturbed by the news that a German-made picture, under the title of "Passion" had broken the box office record of the Capitol Theatre, New York.

Following its sensational Sunday opening, the picture ran two weeks at the big Broadway Theatre, being the second production to justify a two weeks run and the theatre had then been open over a year.

Besides breaking box office records, it seriously alarmed some of our hitherto undefeated production champions and worse still, threatened to prove the advance guard of a German invasion that might ruin our production industry financially.

Motion picture annals, picturesque as they are, hold few sensations that equal the advent of Pola Negri in "Passion."

The screen of the world's largest theatre, had not been secured for "Passion" without effort.

History of "Passion"

David P. Howells brought the picture to America. He begged and pleaded with wise exhibitors to look at the production. Having admitted in advance that it was a German made costume picture, it took all of his superb salesmanship to get the big chiefs of First National to even screen it.

Robert Lieber, Harry Schwalbe, J. D. Williams and other of the Circuit's stalwarts first witnessed the Little Milliner's way with a king, in the dark, chilly projection room of the company's old headquarters in the fall of 1920.

Warmed by the fire of Pola Negri, stirred by the genius of Lubitsch, they capitulated. Then followed a test run of the picture at Jacob Fabian's Garden Theatre, Patterson, N. J. and "Passion" made good.

In the meantime, S. L. Rothafel at the New York Capitol had viewed "Passion," re-christened from its original title "DuBarry" by Mr. Williams, and became convinced that the production was worthy a place in his theatre. Critics eulogized it. Pola Negri became a rage in a week. It lifted the ban on costume pictures and started the German invasion with a rush. The public's acceptance of German films on their merits as works of art and entertainment threw our production circles into a near panic. It was obvious that we could not pay American wages and material costs and compete with the Germans, whose labor, studio and laboratory experts, chemicals, building materials of every kind were so much cheaper.

Some of our producers at once planned to make pictures in Germany. It was conceded that a few Americans would have to be taken over to handle certain phases of production but upon the whole Germany was looked upon as a sort of production Klondyke. After four years, so far as is known, the net result of American production in Germany is that one big producer spent a great deal of money on the experiment and gave it up as impractical as well as for reasons to be explained later.

C. L. (Bill) Yearsley.

The early weeks of the invasion were full of promise for importers. A great many films were brought over, edited and titled to fit this market. Exhibitors generally showed little hesitancy about running them because the public had accepted "Passion" with no evidence of war prejudice.

Success and Failure

"The Cabinet of Doctor Caligari" was a success at its Broadway opening. People marveled at its wierd novelty. Highbrows hailed it as the herald of an epoch screen impressionism. Its New York success was repeated in many large cities, largely due to public curiosity. The people in smaller communities apparently cared less for artistic fads.

Generally speaking, the big cities were interested in German pictures while the country at large did not care for them. Historical subjects of other than German national locale were more successful than German stories either historical or modern. Not a single modern German drama received a first run. "Deception," "Henry the Eighth," "The Golem," "Woman Against Woman," "Danton," and other spectacular productions achieved a varied degree of success.

Most popular of all were the Pola Negri—Ernst Lubitsch Productions. "Gypsy Blood," "Carmen," "One Arabian Night," "Sumurun," "Vendetta," and "Sappho," (retitled "Mad Love") all made money for both distributors and exhibitors—especially in the cities. All were truly artistic and gave little or no visual evidence of German origin or atmosphere.

The metropolitan success of the earlier German pictures roused American production workers to the perils of the invasion and national opposition began to crystallize. John Emerson, President of the Equity Association sounded the actors' alarm. American Legion members among Hollywood Studio workers created a street demonstration that forced the management of a Los Angeles theatre to withdraw "The Cabinet of Doctor Caligari" which had just opened to big business. The same picture had to be withdrawn in Dallas, Texas. American picture folk had determined not to submit tamely to the loss of their industry to the Teutons.

Exhibitors' experience the country over was beginning to demonstrate that while the public would accept true art and entertainment from anywhere our people did not really want German pictures, most of which were beginning to fail at the box office.

The public's curiosity had been satisfied, they were quickly tired by so many heavy historical, spectacular subjects no matter how well done. Modern stories of German life and atmosphere would not go at all.

So the German invasion fell of its own weight because the American product, even at higher cost, proved much more acceptable and therefore more profitable.

The influences and circumstances responsible for what success German pictures had in America may be summed up as follows. First, there was the really artistic and entertainment value of the better subjects. Second, the public, already sold on the idea that the Germans do many things exceedingly well, were curious to see how well they could make motion pictures.

Naturally importers brought in the best subjects first. The impetus gained by the few really fine German pictures secured distribution and first runs for the less desirable ones that followed.

Another contributing factor to the brief success of the invasion lay in the exhibitors' resentment at high film rentals caused by what was then considered excessive production costs. Many exhibitors, faced with ever increasing rentals and seriously alarmed by the decreasing attendance due to post war industrial depression, felt themselves forced to welcome anything which promised a reduction in operating expenses.

Having won the war, theatre men saw no reason why they should continue it industrially, especially as the public did not at first show any resentment to German pictures. Exhibitors hoped foreign competition that would lower production costs was at last at hand—and what exhibitor or merchant does not want more profitable merchandise if he can get it?

It was the box office that invited the German invasion and the box office that defeated it. As we look back upon the hysteria that attended Pola's seduction of our industry we may take comfort in the thought that we have met the enemy and they are ours. The effectives of the German invasion were Pola Negri and Ernst Lubitsch and they are now of us. It is also gratifying that art and genius again proved themselves international, for therein lies the security of our own foreign markets. American motion picture supremacy seems secure so long as we can capture the talent of the world.

Smith Again Heads Ohio M. P. T. O.

Attack by Pettijohn on Bunk Publicity Features Annual Banquet of Organization

MARTIN G. Smith, of the East Side Amusement Company, Toledo, was elected for the third time as President of the Motion Picture Owners of Ohio, at the third annual convention of the organization held at the Hotel Chittenden, Columbus, March 6-7.

Other officers are: J. J. Harwood, Cleveland, vice-president-at-large; J. A. Akerman, Cincinnati, first vice-president; William M. James, Columbus, second vice-president; James P. Dunlevy, Akron, third vice-president; George M. Fenberg, Newark, secretary, and J. A. Schwalm, treasurer.

Members of the executive committee are: Fred Tynes, Portsmouth, J. N. Trunk, Youngstown; Henry Bieberson, Jr., Delaware; Isaac Friedman, Akron and George Moore, Bucyrus.

The banquet was featured by the outspoken address of Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, who assailed publicity put out by both exhibitors and producers.

He declared that publicity has been responsible for the producers' and exhibitors' ills. "The publicity bunk being handed out is doing more to hurt your business than anything else," he said. "They have called every piece of cheese a super-special until you must convince the public you have something very much out of the ordinary or they'll stay at home and play with the radio."

A strong declaration in favor of Sunday opening in Ohio was made by Charles L. Thurber, secretary to Mayor James of Columbus, who made the address of welcome to the convention in the Mayor's absence.

"There is no reason why the exhibition of film productions in Ohio on Sunday should not be legalized," said Mr. Thurber. "The motion picture is America's greatest entertainment and there is no valid reason why it should be considered illegal to exhibit them on Sunday. They are a great deal cleaner than most entertainments of the theatrical world."

At the banquet, R. F. Woodhull, of Dover, N. J., President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey and a director of the national organization, acted as toastmaster. Mrs. Elmer G. Derr, President of the Cleveland Cinema Club, delivered a short address. Robert E. Welsh, editor of Moving Picture World, made an interesting talk.

During his speech at the banquet Mr. Pettijohn urged that a referendum be taken on censorship and predicted that if this were done censorship would be wiped out in Ohio. Vernon M. Riegel, Ohio censorship chief, answered Mr. Pettijohn's remarks by the assertion that "censorship has been given the State by the people and we try to give a fair and impartial censorship of films for we are not there to keep society from going to the bow-wows."

C. C. Crabbe, attorney general of Ohio and Speaker H. H. Griswold of the Ohio House of Representatives were other speakers on the program. The attorney general declared that upon investigation he found that in the 14 months he has served not a motion picture exhibitor has had to face his office.

Just before the close of the convention March 7, Governor Donahey addressed the delegates on indirect taxation. He made a plea for the exhibitors of Ohio to exert every effort in the elimination of indirect tax, and explained how it affected them and also asked that they exert all their power toward the abolition of a partisan state assembly, and the minority control, which he asserts, predominates in the legislative bodies.

Outstanding among the resolutions passed at the convention were those which urged support to the fight on taxation, the theatre admission tax, the music license tax and censorship in Ohio, as well as that which calls upon every exhibitor to lend all aid possible in the statewide supervised and conducted "music memory" contest, March 27.

C. C. Perrin, of the Theatre Inter-Insurance Exchange, Philadelphia, discussed on insurance and the music tax was the topic of discussion by George P. Aarons, recording secretary of the M.P.T.O. and counsel for the M.P.T.O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, and Henry M. Staab, Milwaukee, secretary of the Wisconsin organization.

M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the M.P.T.O.A. Public Service Committee, gave a general report of the activities of the national organization. Sydney S. Cohen, president of the national body, was not present and sent a telegram of regret.

Fred Meyer Commended For Truth In Advertising

THE PALACE THEATER, Hamilton, Ohio, of which Fred S. Meyer is managing director, has been commended by the Advertising Club of Hamilton for truth in advertising.

The club awards a trophy annually, and this year honorable mention was given to the Palace. The Hamilton newspapers devoted considerable space to the story. The Hamilton Advertising Club is affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Kleine Loser in Tilt on "Deliverance" Suit

Dr. Edwin Leibfreed was the winner in a preliminary tilt in his suit for $13,250 against George Kleine before Supreme Court Justice Geigerich during the week. The action developed in connection with the Helen Keller film "Deliverance."

The decision came on the suit of Dr. Liebfreed to strike out part of the answer. The court left in the answer only denials of the allegations in the complaint.

Dr. Liebfreed alleges that he was receive a salary of $500 a month from Kleine as secretary of the corporation. That part of the Kleine allegations ordered striken out were that in addition to expenses of $13,467, he paid the plaintiff $4,750, making a total of $18,217 which should be repaid to him. Kleine claimed that in all there was $57,902 due him in addition to the expense of handling the picture. He claimed the film had grossed to date $15,163.

"Siegfried" Given Unique Showing in Berlin

THE first screening of the Decla super production of the Ufa, "Siegfried," the first of the two pictures in the Nibelungen production by Fritz Lang, was attended by representatives of the trade press not only of Germany but of Great Britain, France, Italy, Holland, Austria, Czecho Slovakia and Roumania as well. The opening performance took place at the Ufa Palast, Berlin, the largest kino in the German capital, last week.

Amongst the British representatives, who had come to Berlin especially for the occasion, were Mr. Norman-Wright, publisher of the Film Renter, Ernest Fredman, the editor of that paper, Mr. Raymond of the Kinematograph Weekly, Mr. Caborn of the Bioscope, Mr. Barrow of the Tattler, Sir Sidney Low, representing various publications, and Alfred Rose of the London Central News.

The French Trade Press was represented by Raoul de la Bourie, while George Gabrielli attended the performance for the Italian trade papers.

After the show, a banquet took place at the Hotel Adlon, where Dr. Stresemann, formerly the Chancellor of Germany and now German Minister of Foreign Affairs, delivered a speech in which he hailed the film as a medium of peace and better understanding between the nations of the globe.

Delaware Grants Charters For Amusements

Recent charters granted to film and amusement concerns, and related enterprises by the corporation bureau at Dover include, Universal Pictures Corporation of Delaware, Incorporated, motion picture films, etc., capital $10,000. The C. P. Lens Sales Company, Inc., to deal in motion picture films, raw stock, chemicals, photo and camera goods, lenses and supplies etc., was incorporated as a $100,000 concern. The Potomac Photo Supply Company incorporated under similar terms as a $50,000 interest. A capital increase was granted the "International Theatres of America," Incorporated, originally capitalized at $100,000 to a new base of $1,000,000.

Lefcourt Plans New House For Broadway

Broadway is to have a new picture theatre. It is to be built by A. E. Lefcourt, former president of the now defunct Pioneer Film Corp., on the property immediately adjoining the Strand on the north, at Broadway and Forty-Eighth Street.

It has a frontage of 52 feet on Broadway and a depth of 140 feet on Forty-eighth street.

The approximate cost of the land and the proposed building will be in the neighborhood of $5,000,000, it is said.

T. O. C. C. Clubhouse Plans Are Progressing

Plans are progressing with the T.O.C.C. for a clubhouse in the New York film district to take in various classes of membership which will include all phases of the industry. It is said there will be different memberships for exhibitors, exchange men, theatre architects and trade paper men, to all of whom the clubhouse would be accessible.

Public is Entitled to Good Prints

By E.R. Rogers, F.P. Theatre Dept.

I HAVE been greatly interested in the campaign inaugurated by MOTION PICTURE NEWS for better prints. Certainly, there is no phase of this business more important to its welfare or more capable of working great harm, if it is allowed to drift.

In discussing this subject, it seems to me we should direct our attention first, to the obvious responsibility we owe the public. The artistic standards of the screen demand the use of good prints. What is the sense of spending money, time and effort on a production only to have it delivered on the screen to the ultimate consumer—the public—in a slipshod fashion?

The relation of good prints and good projection to dramatic effect and ultimate box-office success ought to be clear to everybody. Five minutes' reflection will convince anybody that no adequate apology can be offered the public for anything that detracts from the pictorial value of the screen. The public is not interested in disputes between exhibitors and exchangemen as to who is to blame for bad prints. But the public is interested in, and has the right to demand, the best possible pictures under the best possible conditions. And the conditions can't be right, if the print isn't.

Now, it seems to me that the subject of bad prints has several angles. If we start out to fix the responsibility, we find that it rests alike upon exhibitor and distributor. It is certainly the duty of the distributor to supply the theatre with adequate prints. Unless he does so, he seriously jeopardies the theatre's standing as a purveyor of entertainment and, incidentally but very importantly, injures the whole industry in the eyes of the public—directly or indirectly.

Reaction on Theatre

But if adequate prints are supplied—and they are in many cases—and these prints are seriously injured or destroyed by poor mechanism, who is to blame? The answer is clear. The exhibitor is to blame but the public suffers most, because the public has paid its money to see good pictures—good as to physical condition as well as good in dramatic and entertaining quality.

The reaction on the theatre is a decline in attendance, and this, in turn reacts on the distributor. It has very often a direct relation to the question of rentals. The exhibitor loses money, not merely on the picture which was in poor condition, but on succeeding pictures. It is a fact, as everyone knows, that once you drive business away from a house, it is no easy matter to get it back. That business has been driven away from the theatre—especially the small town house—by bad prints is just as true. This condition can be cured, and normal business restored—in time—by giving the public good prints. But the theatre has lost prestige in the meantime.

The public suffers, too, if play dates are deferred longer than the life of the prints. The exhibitor has, then, bought shopworn goods; and the public knows they are shopworn. This overworking of prints should be stopped. It is doing the distributor no good and is certainly doing much harm to the exhibitor.

Distributors should discard bad prints long before it becomes an absolute necessity. Sometimes prints never go out of service until they burn in the machines or are sent back to the exchange in such a disconnected condition that it is too much trouble to put them back again.

I am one of those who firmly believe that no distinction should be made, in the matter of prints, between big houses and small exhibitors. The small theatre needs good service as well as the first-run fellows. If anybody thinks the so-called small town public is not discriminating in this matter, he is very much mistaken. They know, and they do not fail to register their displeasure when they are disappointed by being shown a cheap piece of merchandise, which is what a bad print most assuredly is.

In reference to play dates as related to the print question, let me point out that they have a very vital bearing on each other. The popular picture, it stands to reason, is likely to be worn out far more quickly than the subject of lesser appeal. If the print of a popular picture needs to be renewed, the exchange ought to renew it. It is only good business to do so. Good business for the whole industry.

Projection Quality Necessary

If the exhibitor books within reasonable time after release date, he stands a far better chance of getting good prints. And it is clearly up to him to see that he has good equipment, and that the equipment is kept good. An operator who knows his business is a great asset in this business. He is a very important cog in the machine which extends all the way from the studio to the screen.

It is an axiom that no matter how good a picture is, it can be spoiled by poor projection and careless handling of film. And the operator's carelessness or incompetence has far more than a mere local effect. It may spoil the picture for a great number of audiences in other towns, and thus work considerable damage to the industry as a whole.

What we need, in my opinion, is a unity of purpose for the conservation of prints. The projection-booth, and what goes on there, is pretty nearly the final word in the picture's destiny. The director, the players, the author, the laboratory may all have done their work well. If the projection-booth fails to measure up, all the good efforts of the studio and laboratory people may go for naught. You can't have picture quality without projection quality.

In the same way, it is clearly the duty of the exchange to do its part in keeping prints in good condition by careful supervision and inspection. This means, among other things, that prints ought to be withdrawn from circulation and replaced in any instance where that is necessary.

The standards of screen efficiency can only be gained and maintained by unity of purpose and square dealing on the part of both exhibitor and exchange. Good prints are very essential. They are helpful in establishing respect for the business and building goodwill for the exhibitor.

The plain truth is that we are not fulfilling our duty to the public unless we give them entertainment that is as perfect in its physical condition as it is in dramatic and artistic quality. The whole question of prints goes right back to this. And the sooner both exhibitor and distributor make up their minds that the public has a right to good prints—in the case of every picture—the better off we shall all be, not only in business returns but in every other way.

New Guardianship Bill in N. Y. Legislature

WITHOUT any mention of matron or proposed license fee, a bill, much changed from the original pertaining to the admission of unaccompanied children to picture theaters in New York state, has been introduced in the Legislature during the past week, and will no doubt be passed without opposition. The bill was introduced by Senator Reiburn, and embodies many ideas on the part of Samuel I. Berman, of the New York State M. P. T. O., and others interested in the best methods to be employed in handling the unaccompanied children situation

The bill as introduced by Senator Reiburn provides that the governing body of a city, town or village, may adopt an ordinance allowing children between 8 and 16 years to be admitted to a picture theatre at such hours as will not conflict with school duties, but in no event later than 6 o'clock in the evening.

Such an ordinance must carry a provision, however, that no unaccompanied children are to be admitted to a theatre unless provision is made for their segregation on the street level of the house.

Former Governor Milliken Speaks in Penn.

"The Relation of the Motion Picture Industry to the Church," was discussed in an address made by Carl E. Milliken, former Governor of Maine, to the Ministerial Association of York, Pa., in the York Y. M. C. A. The audience included about one hundred ministers and other persons specially interested in religious and educational matters.

The former Governor took a broad-minded view of the industry, spoke of its great influence on the minds of the public and particularly the young, and told the clergy it was their duty to exert their interest and influence in eliminating unwholesome material from the screen.

Mr. Milliken went to York through an arrangement with the Appell theatrical interests and through courtesy of Will H. Hays.

N. Y. Assembly Gets Bills on Miniature Machines

Two bills, apparently identical with those introduced and defeated last year, have been introduced in the New York State Assembly during the past week by Assemblyman Steingut. The first bill seeks to amend the general city law by providing that miniature motion picture apparatus, use of which is permitted, must be of a type approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, or the head of a fire prevention bureau of a municipality. This bill has been referred to cities committee.

The second of the Steingut bills amends the general business law as it relates to the requirements for, and the approval of miniature motion picture machines.

Music Tax Cases Heard in Kansas City

Exhibitors Contend Suits Were Not Brought By Real Parties At Interest

THE case of four music companies against six Kansas City exhibitors "went to bat" in the Federal court in Kansas City Monday and a definite ruling now appears inevitable, following months of delay. The case was taken under advisement by Judge Araba S. Van Valkenburgh.

Witnesses for both plaintiffs and defendants were present, the exhibitors being represented by Samuel A. Handy, and, after a brief hearing and examination of witnesses, counsel for the defendants was given ten days by Judge Van Valkenburgh in which to file a brief, following which the plaintiff will be given twenty days in which to file an answer.

The exhibitors are: H. H. Barrett, Colonial theatre; A. M. Eisner, president of the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A. and owner of the Broadmour theatre; J. T. Wilson, Queen's theatre; J. Stockdale and E. F. Stockdale, Empire theatre; A. H. Boussad, World-in-motion; Gillham Amusement Company, Gillham theatre. The music companies are: Irving Berlin, the Broadway Music Company, Leo Feist and Stark & Cowan.

"A part of the complaint on the part of the music companies alleges certain music was played without the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff," Mr. Eisner said. "It is the contention of exhibitors in the case that circular letters were sent to theatre owners by the music companies, urging them to play the music; that the music could not have been played without knowledge and consent of the music companies under such circumstances."

The exhibitors, through Mr. Handy, will base their defense upon the contention that the suits have not been brought by the real parties at interest, that the interest of the individual music companies have been assigned to the American Society of Authors, Publishers and Composers which according to Mr. Handy, is contrary to Federal statutes.

Maryland Legislature Scene of Sunday Opening Fight

Delegate Sharp, of Baltimore, on March 3 presented before the Maryland Legislature a letter from the Independent Citizens' League of Baltimore urging the Legislature to pass a law legalizing Sunday picture performances.

The League claims to represent 20,000 citizens. Its letter declared that the most progressive cities in the world show pictures on Sunday, and no lessening of church attendance is noted.

A number of petitions from church organizations in various parts of the State have been filed, urging that the present Blue Laws be retained. The result of the battle is in doubt.

Exhibitors In Northwest Conn. Organize

A new organization named the Northwest District Association of Motion Picture Theatres Managers was formed recently in Waterbury, Conn., for the purpose of bringing united action in opposition to the Federal amusement tax.

Nicholas Janele of the Lyric Theatre, Waterbury, was elected chairman and A. Bentino, of the Carroll Theatre, Waterbury, was elected secretary and treasurer. Members of the organization include representatives of picture theatres in the northwestern district of Connecticut.

Radio Injuring Neighborhood Patronage, Says Sidney B. Lust

THAT RADIO is injuring attendance at neighborhood theaters in Washington, D. C., is the belief of Sidney B. Lust, exchangeman and exhibitor of the Capital City. He writes to Motion Picture News as follows:

"I have been reading the different comments as to whether or not the radio is decreasing the patronage of the motion picture business.

"I certainly agree with William Brandt when he says: 'The radio is decreasing the patronage of the movies.' I believe that I can speak with a fair amount of knowledge, having previously been in the radio business in this city, also an exchangeman and exhibitor.

"Since the question became the topic of discussion I have talked with a number ronage decreasing. Surely this time of the year the movies business should be exof our residential exhibitors and they are all complaining about their night patcellent

"As an illustration, at my home I have installed a very fine radio set and on Sunday evenings when Roxy is broadcasting, my wife and a party of friends sit around and listen in, where heretofore they would go to the movies. I am given to understand that there are 75,000 radio sets in this city. What is the conclusion or result? Multiply this by three, which is a low average for the listeners in, and you will have 225,000 people staying away from the movies. While it may not decrease the patronage of the first run houses or the downtown houses, the community houses are suffering. You understand that I have asked a number of exhibitors who conduct community houses and this is also their version of the question. The radio may help the Capitol in New York, since they broadcast their program and at the same time advertise their theater, but this does not help the residential exhibitor

"There should be a solution to the problem. Who will be the genius to uncover it? I might suggest that we are making a mistake by encouraging the radio and the exhibitor is making a mistake by allowing his soloists and musicians to broadcast their talent, when it should be paid for at the box office."

Preliminary Skirmish on Repeal Bill at Albany

THE Walker bill for the repeal of the New York State censorship law will be passed by that body within the next two weeks, and then go to the Assembly for action.

A preliminary skirmish in the Assembly occurred March 12, when the Ways and Means Committee of that body refused to report the Hackenburg repeal bill out of committee. The vote stood 11 to 4. Assemblymen McGinnies, Yale, Hutchinson, Steinburg, Moore, Clayton, Porter, Lord, Lattin, Laidlaw and Cook, all Republicans, voted to keep the measure in committee, while Assemblymen Hamill, Boyle, Kennedy and McDonald, Democrats, voted to report it out.

Repeal advocates contend that the Walker bill, which is the Administration measure, will be passed should it come to a vote in the Assembly.

It is expected the real test will come on that measure, that a public hearing will be held after the passage of the bill in the Senate and that its fate will be known by April 1.

Ottawa Enjoys Capacity Lenten Business

Exhibitors of Ottawa watched with interest the effect that the Lenten Season might have upon theatre attendance by taking the cue from patronage at various local theatres on Ash Wednesday, which is a Government holiday.

All but one of the downtown houses played to capacity business both for matinee and evening performances. Incidentally, there was no decision on the part of any manager to charge night prices for the afternoon shows. On followings days, the leading theatres continued to enjoy excellent patronage. Weather conditions were excellent.

Schad Is Honor Guest At Philly Dinner

H. J. Schad, president of the Eastern Pennsylvania Theatre Owners, was the honor guest at a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton in Philadelphia recently, at which exhibitors, distributors, exchange men and national picture executives were present.

Charles H. Goodwin acted as toastmaster, and among the speakers were Charles Ray, film star; Sydney Cohen, president of the M.P.T.O.A.; W. Freeland, Mayor of Philadelphia; William B. Sharman, Mayor of Reading; Samuel E. Lewis, auditor general of Pennsylvania; R. S. Woodhull, president of the New Jersey M.P.T.O.; M. J. O'Toole and others. All paid warm tribute to the guest of honor.

Urbach and Schottenfels Join M. P. World

Lawrence A. Urbach has resigned as editor of the Motion Picture Journal to join the advertising division of Moving Picture World. Mr. Urbach has been associated with trade papers for eight years, having formerly been a member of the staffs of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and Exhibitors Trade Review.

Clarence Schottenfels, formerly with Exhibitors Trade Review and sales manager of the Rex Hedwig Laboratories, has also joined the advertising staff of Moving Picture World.

Mary and Doug, Hays, Griffith and other Notables on Program at Naked Truth Dinner, March 29

FOLLOWING the announcement that for the first time in banquet history there would be no speechmaking at The Naked Truth Dinner, annual gathering of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, the imposing lineup of those who will tell Bedtime Stories in place of lengthy dissertations at the Hotel Astor, New York, on the night of March 29, is announced today by A. M. Botsford, chairman of the entertainment committee.

These notable Bedtime Story tellers will include: Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Will Hays, David Wark Griffith, Samuel Rothafel, Reupert Hughes, A. M. Botsford, and ?, the Big Personality, one placed high in the Federal government, whose name is being withheld as a surprise.

These Bedtime Stories will be broadcast by Station WEAF along with the rest of the entertainment by wireless—to the W.A.M.P.A.S. in Hollywood, to every film club, to England and to the radio fans.

Further these Bedtime Tales will be limited to five minutes each instead of ten as previously announced and each will deal with Naked Truths concerning the motion picture industry.

Mary and Doug will detail some Truths about the films as viewed from the actors standpoint. Will Hays, as director general of the motion picture industry, will lay bare the facts as he sees them. D. W. Griffith will relate the reel dope about directors. Samuel Rothafel will give the showman's angle. Rupert Hughes will give the author's viewpoint. That Big Personality will say something to make his hearers' ears burn. And what The Press Agent, Mr. Botsford, will say will be the sensational surprise of the evening, so they say.

Thus will the program proceed apace smoothly and unruffled from the soup which begins at seven until the dancing that ends at dawn, with Paul Whiteman, the famous orchestra leader, there in person with two jazz bands, one playing where the other leaves off, providing continuous music in the interim between the story telling, the comedy sketch and the other entertainment features arranged for the evening.

Meantime the judging committee selected to pick the best fifteen-minute comedy sketch on the movies offered for production at the dinner is buried to the eyes with more than five hundred manuscripts submitted with a view o winning he $100 prize at stake.

Five hundred tickets to the Naked Truth dinner have been sold already, and as the number is to be limited to 1,000, those who would go are advised to get them now while the getting is good at $15 for doubles and $10 for singles. The sale of tickets is in the hands of S. Charles Einfeld, care First National Pictures, 383 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Ontario Exhibitors Plan Stunts For Rotarians

Two moving picture men of Ottawa, Ontario, are in charge of arrangements by the local Rotary Club for the district convention of International Rotary which is to be held at Syracuse, N.Y., on April 26, when large numbers of Canadian Rotarians from Ontario and Quebec will take part in the proceedings. Those who have charge of the Ottawa programs are Ray Peck, director of the Canadian Government's Moving picture bureau, and Oral Cloakey, manager of the Regent Theater, the Famous Players house in the Canadian Capital. They are planning unusual stunts.

Famous Operating Profits $4,245,783.93

THE FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY Corporation in its consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies), reports for the twelve months ended December 29, 1923, net operating profits of $4,245,783.93 after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings are at the annual rate of $15.07 on the common stock outstanding.

On March 10, 1924, the Board of Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2 per share on the preferred stock, payable May 1, 1924, to stockholders of record at the close of business on April 15, 1924. The books will not close

Edwin S. Porter, President of the Precision Machine Company, and Mrs. Porter both of whom are spending several weeks in Bermuda.

San Francisco Starts War On Film Fakirs

San Francisco managers of film exchanges are co-operating with the San Francisco police in helping them rid the city of fake film concerns and fake film promoters who have been practically running wild and taking money away from "would-be" movie stars.

The last film promoter arrested on complaints was one giving the name of James Calnay, who it is claimed, obtained as much as $25,000 by promising to make film stars of certain San Francisco men and women. It is also claimed he promised them big positions. His fees are said to have ranged from $250 to $1,500 and the ages of his customers were from 18 to 58 years. Ten others already have been arrested.

$6,000,000 Charter Granted In Delaware

Among the allied amusement and film charters granted in Dover, Delaware, last week was that of The Montrose Pictures Corporation, Incorporated, for the manufacture of motion pictures, etc., capitalized at $6,000,000. Other concerns included the capital increase from $4,750,000 to the new figure of $5,500,000 granted to The De Forest Films Corporation Inc., parent of the new film and radio enterprises of Dr. Lee DeForest.

The Comerford amusement interests of Pennsylvania secured a Delaware charter for their new "Comerford Construction Company, Inc., as general contractors conducting an engineering and construction business, etc., capital placed at $250,000; Trio Productions, Incorporated, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Washington and Baltimore, incorporated at $30,000 for the manufacture and distribution of motion pictures.

Daylight Saving Repealed in Niagara Falls

THE CITY of Niagara Falls will operate on standard time this spring and summer. The city council has adopted a resolution repealing the daylight saving ordinance. Voters of the city expressed disapproval of the daylight saving plan at a referendum held last fall and in repealing the ordinance the council is merely carrying out the wishes of the voters.

Lockport, N. Y., has also repealed its daylight ordinance and will be on standard time. Buffalo will operate on daylight saving time in spite of efforts of exhibitors to kill the ordinance.

Arbitration Discussed at Luncheon

Governor Milliken Talks at Luncheon of Independent Producers and Distributors

EX-Governor Carl Milliken of Maine, Vincent Gilroy, chairman of the speakers' committee of the Arbitration Society of America and George Blaisdell, editor of the Exhibitors' Trade Review were the guests of honor at the luncheon of the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association at the Hotel Astor March 6th.

Vincent Gilroy was the principal speaker of the occasion. He outlined at length the advantage of arbitration over litigation and told of the manner in which the Arbitration Society of America functioned.

Governor Milliken discussed the independent producers and distributors. He said in part:

"There are two points only I want to leave with you. If we are to get along and let a little money come back to the producer, the independent market has got to be running on all cylinders. The trouble with that market is that the territory is not 100 per cent complete. That is a problem in which all independent producers and all exchanges are interested and a situation that needs attention.

"The other matter that I am thinking of now, one that confronts the entire industry, is that of chain theatres, on which, to be perfectly frank, I claim no great wisdom.

"In my humble opinion, I believe the chain theatre is a very awkward situation throughout the country. I have an idea that unless that situation will be handled with great restraint by men who own the chain theatres, there will be a condition of revolt. The fact is that things have moved so fast and people have been so busy trying to keep up with this mushroom situation of ours that the average American has not noticed what is going on—but when he does, he will not stand by and have his entertainment dished out to him. It will not be long before it will be up to one distributor or one theatre to handle this entire situation."

Daylight Saving Battle in Troy, N. Y.

Motion picture theatre owners in Troy are already enlisted in a fight to repeal the daylight saving ordinance in that city. There will be a public hearing in the near future. Similar steps are to be taken by the owners of theatres in Albany and Schenectady.

It is claimed that the theatres in these three cities alone lost many thousands of dollars last summer by reason of the daylight saving act. The loss is perhaps heavier in Schenectady and Troy by reason of the fact that these two cities have Sunday shows, and depend to a considerable extent on this day to tide them through the week with a profit.

Gus Schlesinger On Road To Recovery

Gus Schlesinger, the foreign manager of Warner Brothers, is rapidly recovering at his home after a minor operation at the Fifth Avenue Hospital. He expresses thanks to his many friends for their kind thoughtfulness during his illness.

Urges Projection Inspectors as Aid to Better Prints

PROJECTION inspectors should be sent out by exchanges as an aid to keeping prints in good condition, according to the view of David S. Mayo, projectionist, of Americus, Georgia

In a letter to Motion Picture News, Mr. Mayo declares he believes the exchanges could save money "if they would have a first class projectionist go from one small town to another making inspections of all equipment and telling unfair managers either to fix their equipment" or lose service. "That may sound fooiish," he adds, "but exchanges in Atlanta can vouch what I say to be true. They have to write some managers insulting letters about paying for prints they have torn up before the managers will give their projection rooms a thought.

"Is the projectionist not the man that should know where the trouble lies more clearly than all the rest. I don't mean that he has more brains than all the others combined. But from a common sense standpoint a man who has studied a thing all his life should understand its nature and wearing quality."

Referring to the article by E. V. Richards, Jr., of the Saenger Amusement Co., New Orleans, which followed William A. Johnston's first editorial on Better Prints, Mr. Mayo writes: "Mr. Richards' idea that high amperage causes films to become dry and brittle, is wonderful indeed, as high intensity arc lamps have done a great damage to films as well as produce a great picture on the screen. . .

"That is one point Mr. Richards has scored, but, if you will permit me, I shall try to bring out even more points. The one and greatest cause of wear of films today, next to high amperage, is speed. Not so much in small towns as in large cities. Sprocket holes, after running at one of these first run houses, may not show defects, but after some few days' run afterwards they begin to show undercuts.

"In many large cities they give a projectionist an eight-reel feature, two-reel comedy, one-reel news weekly and twelve-minute overture added, with running time of an hour and forty-five minutes. Eleven thousand feet of film in 93 minutes, and still we wonder why film does not stand up as it once did at sixteen pictures a second.

"In the small towns the causes of extra heavy wear on films are inexperienced men and worn equipment. Theatres in good towns are paying dear for the managers in other towns who fail to keep up their equipment as they should, while others have inexperienced men who cannot keep up equipment for lack of knowledge."

Blank Closes Capitol at Des Moines

THE DES MOINES CAPITOL, owned by A. H. Blank, and one of the largest houses in the middle west, closes its doors Friday of this week because of the general slump in theatrical activities in that section. Mr. Blank is also threatening to close his Des Moines Rialto on April 1 unless there is an improvement in conditions.

The Capitol opened last August as a combination vaudeville and picture house. The Rialto is confined to photoplays. Efforts to stimulate business in many ways have been ineffective.

Illinois M. P. T. O. Fixes Convention Dates

The Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners set April 23rd and 24th as the date for the annual convention. The meetings will be held at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago. The convention committee in charge of the event is composed of L. Siegel, Glenn Reynolds, Ben Berve, L. Zaller and Mike Cohn, who are planning a program which will make this convention of interest to all exhibitors in the state.

One of the features already decided upon, is a big get-together dinner which will be attended by exchange men and exhibitors. The following have been named directors to fill the vacancies on the board, Jack Miller, Ike Gumbiner and Ben Coony, all of Chicago.

Child Labor Case Appealed In Pennsylvania

J. B. Curry, of Los Angeles, Cal., who was arrested in Harrisburg, Pa., on February 20, charged by the Pennsylvania Department of Labor & Industry with violating the child labor law in allowing his daughter, Dorabella, to appear as a professional entertainer in motion picture and other theatres of the state, was fined $100 and costs after a hearing before Alderman W. S. Doebler, of Lancaster, in which city the alleged violation took place.

Curry at once appealed from the decision and the case has been listed for trial in the third week of April. It is looked upon as a test case to determine whether children under fourteen years old may legally appear in professional theatrical performances after 8 o'clock in the evening. Deputy Attorney General Brown is representing the state in this case.

Kansas Showdown Due In Unfair Competition

A "showdown" on unfair competition in Kansas appears inevitable. Schools and churches long have been a "thorn in the side" in several sections of the state.

Supreme Court Judge Richard Hopkins, of Kansas, when he was attorney general of Kansas, gave it as his opinion that schools and churches, using motion pictures "commercially," ought to be taxed; that it was unfair for non-taxable institutions to commercialize in an industry in which others were taxed. Should developments in the near future warrant it, exhibitors probably will seek legal protection against such competition, in which case an appeal would be made to Attorney-General Griffith.

Film Stock Sale Halted by Missouri Official

Deputy Finance Commissioner B. T. Hurwitz in charge of the "Blue Sky" department at Jefferson City Mo., revoked on March 7th the permit previously granted General Film Manufacturing Company to sell stock in Missouri. The revocation, it is said, came without the defending company being given a hearing.

Harry F. Tecke, prominent St. Louis contractor and capitalist, is President of General and Romaine Fielding is Director General. Tecke succeeded Fielding as President several weeks ago and both claimed that there was no friction. The company was organized in 1923 to produce pictures.

The first intimation the film men had of the revocation was from newspaper stories. Hurwitz charged that the stock sold was promotion stock but this was denied by officers of the film company who state that the $85,545 sold to the general public had gone into the treasury and was being expended in conducting the company's business affairs.

President Tecke stated that the company had just finished "The Love Power," a feature picture, "A Child's Problem," three reel drama and is now completing "A Dog's Tale," the first of a proposed series of ten two-reel comedies featuring James Douglas and wife.

Industrial, educationals, titles, trailers and art work have also been some of the company's activities. Deputy Hurwitz finally agreed to re-open the case on Wednesday March 12.

Public Utilities Exploit Through Pictures

Public utility companies and other large concerns are turning more and more to moving pictures as a means of disseminating information regarding their progress and needs. Large sums are to be spent in this direction within the next few months, it is said.

Among the concerns which have taken up or are about to take up this method of exploitation are the following:

Mackay Companies, including the Postal Telegraph-Commercial Cable system; the Ohio Power Company, Iowa City Light and Power Company; General Electric Company, Atlantic City Electric Company, American Gas and Electric Company, Westinghouse Lamp Company, United Light and Railways Company, La Porte Gas and Electric Company, Chattanooga Gas Company, Grand Rapids, Grand Haven and Muskegon Railway Company, Alpha Portland Cement Company, Chattanooga Gas Company; Grand Rapids, Locomotive Company, Foamite-Childs Corporation, Lock Joint Pipe Company, McGraw-Hill Company, Reading Iron Company, John A. Robeling's Sons Company, Robins Conveying Belt Company, Tidewater Oil Company, United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company.

"Gambling Wives" is Sold for New England

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, closed a deal in Boston last week with McConville, Patton and Heffron, representing Independent Films, Inc., whereby the latter will handle "Gambling Wives" for New England. The Boston concern has been handling Arrow releases for the past three years.

Kansas Exhibitors Arrange Extensive Program

"The Exhibitors' Midnight Frolic," not only promises to be a feature of the convention of the M.P.T.O. Kansas at Emporia, Kas., April 1 and 2, but may become an annual addition to the convention. An elaborate 30-page program of the convention is being prepared this week by C. E. Cook, business manager, and a new high mark in attendance appears certain.

A "surprise" will be staged in the Strand theatre, Emporia, about Midnight, Tuesday, April 1, exhibitors only participating. Mr. Cook will leave for Emporia in a few days to complete arrangements for the meeting. The business program involves the following:

Discussion of co-operation with the national association of broadcasters in combating the music tax and the appointment of a legislative committee to work towards obtaining an amendment of the copyright act.

A report on the activities of the Kansas City joint board of arbitration during the last six months. Discussion of complaints pertaining to poor prints issued by exchanges. Discussion of amendments to by-daws.

A discussion: "What makes high film rental: competitive bidding or excessive production cost?"

Approval or dissaproval of a central shipping bureau of films and accessories.

Adoption of plans of co-operation with Parent-Teacher associations in aiding in public service work.

Formulation of plans to aid exhibitors in Kansas oil towns where business is greatly depressed.

Urson, Iribe Are Appointed Associate Directors

Frank Urson and Paul Iribe are announced as associate directors at the Lasky studio. According to Cecil B. DeMille, director-general, they will direct Leatrice Joy in her first film venture since her elevation to a rank of increased importance in the Paramount fold. She will have the principal featured role in "Changing Husbands," adapted from Elizabeth Alexander's story, "Roles."

The combination of Urson, Iribe, Joy, Cowan and Higgin presents five people, all of whom are graduates from the productions of Cecil B. DeMille. Frank Urson, who has directed a number of Paramount pictures, recently returned as Mr. DeMille's assistant. Paul Iribe is Mr. DeMille's art director. Sada Cowan wrote several scenarios for Mr. De Mille, while Howard Higgin was for a number of years Cecil B. DeMille's technical director.

Ethel Wales in Cast of "Inside Story"

Ethel Wales has just been signed for an eccentric character role in Mr. de Mille's newest picture, "The Inside Story," according to the announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production. Clara Beranger is the author and scenarist of "The Inside Story," a mystery comedy.

Fred Jackson To Write Story For Denny

Fred Jackson has been engaged by Universal to write an original story for Reginald Denny. He has chosen the title "You Can't Live on Love."

Pathe Plans Annual Sales Contest

"Storey Pennant Race" Scheduled to Open March 23 and Close July 12

PATHE will launch on March 23rd a $10,000 sales contest, which will involve the sales personnel of the company's thirty-five exchanges in what promises to be the most spirited competition of its kind ever conducted under Pathe auspices. This year Pathe's most important sales event on the annual calendar will be dedicated to J. E. Storey, General Sales Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and will accordingly be known as the "Storey Pennant Race — 1924."

The Race will be divided into two parts, each consisting of eight week periods. During the first eight weeks the competing branches will qualify for positions in the five Leagues into which they will be divided. This qualifying period will begin on March 23rd and will close at midnight of May 17th. The five Leagues and the qualifications required for admission to each group are as follows:

The Champion League, which will contain the seven branches showing the greatest increase in billings on all Pathe subjects during the qualifying period;

The National League, which will include the seven branches showing the next greatest increase during the preliminary period;

The American League, which will have the seven branches recording the third highest increase;

The Capitol League, which will contain the seven branches showing the fourth highest increase during the qualifying period;

The Minor League, which will include those branches not placed in any of the preceding divisions.

In the event that more than the designated number of branches qualify for places in any division or league, all branches so qualifying will be assigned places in such division or league and will be eligible for the division prize.

With the assignment of all thirty-five branches to their positions in the various Leagues, the major term of the contest will begin at midnight of May 18th and end at midnight of July 12th.

In case of ties, each branch so tied will be awarded the full prize provided for the position tied for.

General Sales Manager J. E. Storey, for whom the annual Pathe Sales Contest has been named this year, has been associated with the Pathe organization over a period of many years.

Heretofore, the Pathe sales contests have been usually held during March or November because these months, it was felt, coincided more nearly with the peak periods of the year's business. Officials in the present instance decided that any seasonal advantages that the early spring or late fall might hold could be dispensed with and the sales drive launched so as to extend right into the summer season. Practically the same procedure was adopted last year in the case of the Pearson Pennant Race, which extended throughout the summer season.

J. E. Storey, Pathe General Sales Manager, for whom the annual Pathe Sales Contest has been named this Year.

PRIZE ORCHID IS NAMED FOR MARY

The grand prize winning bloom of the International Flower Show, in this instance an orchid, has been named for Miss Pickford who, through this signal honor joins the ranks of such notables as Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, widow of the late President Harding; Mrs. Calvin C. Coolidge, wife of President Coolidge; General Pershing, Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians, and Princess Mary of England, now the Viscountess of Lascelles, for all of whom prize winning flowers has been named in very recent years.

Miss Pickford, to whom a bloom from the prize winning orchid was presented as she formally and officially opened the 1924 International Flower Show at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, is the first representative of the motion picture industry ever to be so honored.

The "Cymbedium — Mary Pickford," as the prize winning orchid has been named and under which title it will be registered officially in horticultural records and history, was grown by Joseph Manda, of West Orange, N. J. Mr. Nandis credited with having created more distinct types of orchids than any other grower, and his greenhouses at West Orange constitute one of the most beautiful show places of the kind in the East.

The plant was awarded the prize medal of this year's International Flower Show and will be placed in competition at other flower shows throughout this country and Europe.

F.B.O. To Distribute "Girl Of Limberlost"

Universal Announces Fall Schedule

Carl Laemmle Lists Releases Which Are Due from August to January

UNIVERSAL has definitely lined up its product for next season, and not only has practically completed most of next fall's pictures but is all set on its entire release schedule from August to January. This information comes from Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

Universal is increasing its Jewel picture output from twelve to thirty-six a year. Next year's product, to be known as the Perfect Thirty-six, is already well under way, many of the pictures having been completed and several of them having already arrived in the East.

Here is a list of next season's product as scheduled beginning with the first of the Perfect Thirty-six, to be released August 4th.

Number One is a Mary Philbin picture adapted from I. A. R. Wylie's Good Housekeeping Magazine story, "The Inheritors". This production was directed by King Baggot.

The second production of the year is the William Dudley Pelley Saturday Evening Post story, "Courtin' Calamity", in which Hoot Gibson is starred.

The third is "The Throw-back", the prize winner of the Laemmle Scenario Scholarship Contest.

The fourth production is a Jack Hoxie, entitled "The Triple Cross for Danger" by Walter J. Coburn. It was directed by Clifford Smith.

Reginald Denny's first contribution to the thirty-six is to be, "The Reckless Age".

Wadsworth Camp's railroad story, "The Signal Tower", in which Virginia Valli is starred, follows the Denny picture.

Baby Peggy's third feature picture, "Editha's Burglar," is the next of the thirty-six.

Jack Hoxie's western picture, "Love's Lariat", directed by Clifford Smith will be followed by Robert H. Davis and Perley Poore Sheehan's story of patriotism, "The Bugler of Algiers," under the direction of Rupert Julian.

The feature of October 5th is Booth Tarkington's novel of midwestern life, "The Turmoil". Hobart Henley directed.

Next a Hoot Gibson attraction will be released, "Broadway or Bust", by Byron Morgan.

Jack Hoxie contributes another western following this, entitled "Claim No. 1" which will be followed by William McHarg's Red Book story, "Wine".

November 2nd. Universal will release Kathlyn Norris's current best seller, "Butterfly".

Lincoln J. Carter's melodrama, "The Tornado", with an all star cast, follows "Butterfly". Jack Hoxie's western picture by Isadore Bernstein, "The White Horseman", will be followed by Mary Philbin in "Mitsi".

This will be followed by Reginald Denny in "The Missourian" by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., directed by James Horne.

Hoot Gibson's, "The Pony Express", is the first of the December releases, which will include, "Headlights", By Charlotte K. Kunzig, the second of the prize winning stories in the Laemmle Scenario Scholarship Contest; a Jack Hoxie subject entitled "The Purple Rider" and Virginia Valli in Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart's "K", directed by Harry Pollard.

Matt Moore Engaged For F.B.O. Production

Matt Moore has been engaged by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the F. B. O. studios, to play the leading role in "Fools in the Dark," work upon which began Monday under the direction of Al. Stantell. It marks the star's first appearance in an F. B. O. production.

The story is an original by Bertram Millhauser and was adapted to the screen by John Grey. Others in the cast are Patsy Ruth Miller, Bertram Grasby, Tom Wilson and Charles Belcher.

"Covered Wagon" Starts Second Year

Event is Fittingly Celebrated at N. Y. Criterion and with Ritz Luncheon

LAST Monday night saw the opening of the second year of the run of "The Covered Wagon" at the Criterion Theatre in New York City. The occasion was marked by a fitting celebration that night, and with a luncheon the following day at the Ritz to those critics who reviewed the production at its opening showing at the Criterion.

To mark the event at the Criterion the big electric signs on the theatre were changed to indicate the opening of the second year's run, the interior of the theatre was decorated with flags and a special musical program which included "Covered Wagon Days" was conducted by Josiah Zuro.

Emmett Flynn Will Make "Man Who Came Back"

PLANS for the immediate production of the stage plays and books purchased by William Fox for the screen are now well under way. The most important announcement of the week coming from Fox Film Corporation was that Emmett Flynn has signed to make "The Man Who Came Back." The film adaptation of the Jules Eckert Goodman stage success will go into production at once at the West Coast studios.

Dorothy Mackaill has been signed for the leading feminine role. George O'Brien will play the title role. The other principals in the cast selected so far include: Cyril Chadwick, Ralph Lewis, Emily Fitzroy, Harvey Clark, Edward Piel, David Kirby, Walter Wilkinson and Brother Miller.

"If Winter Comes" Subject Of Winning Essay

"If Winter Comes," the William Fox screen version of the A. S. M. Hutchinson novel, was taken as the subject of the winning essay in the recent Motion Picture Book Week Contest conducted by Mrs. Myrtle Whitney Snell, amusement inspector of Birmingham, Ala.

Following is a part of the essay which was written by Marguerite Matlock, a second year high school student:

"I like this picture because it is clean, wholesome and uplifting with just a touch of humor to brighten it. This picture brings before your mind the deep things of life. It inspires you with a longing to do right, to be just and kind. It also brings out in you a love for your fellowmen, for the keynote of this picture is love; 'the love that suffereth long and is kind.'"

Publishers See Marion Davies In "Yolanda"

Two hundred and fifty leading sellers and publishers of greater New York attended a performance during the week of "Yolanda," in which Marion Davies is starring, at the Cosmopolitan Theatre. They were the guests of Grosset and Dunlap, publishers of the special Marion Davies edition of Charles Major's romantic story from which "Yolanda" was adapted.

Raymond Hatton is to play a dandy of the Revolutionary War period in a "flash-back" to that time, in the Rupert Hughes' Goldwyn production, "True As Steel." Hatton has just joined the cast.

Arliss Pictures Through Selznick

Releasing Agreement Is Signed With Distinctive Pictures Corporation

BY the terms of an agreement just concluded, Distinctive Pictures Corporation will release future George Arliss pictures through the Selznick Distributing Corporation. The first of these will be a comedy drama, "Twenty Dollars a Week," which will be ready about the first of April.

This story is based on the Edgar Franklin novel "The Adopted Father." Supporting Mr. Arliss in this production are Edith Roberts, Taylor Holmes and Ronald Colman. Harmon Weight, who directed the previous Arliss pictures with the exception of "The Green Goddess" is responsible for this production.

The agreement was signed by Henry M. Hobart for Distinctive and W. C. J. Doolittle for Selznick. Negotiations have been under way between Mr. Doolittle and Mr. Hobart for the last six weeks.

The contract will not change in any way the existing relations between Distinctive and the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Corporation, it is said, by which the latter distributes certain other feature productions of Distinctive.

In discussing the acquisition of the new product, President Doolittle, of the Selznick company said:

"The addition of 'Twenty Dollars A Week' to the Selznick releases is in line with the policy of the company to distribute only the best of motion-picture product. Nothing further is necessary to indicate the importance of the move and the quality of the acquired product than the fact that it is a Distinctive picture."

"Second Youth" Goldwyn April Release

"Second Youth," the comedy drama adapted from the novel by Allan Updegraff, and produced by Distinctive Pictures Corporation is scheduled for release through Goldwyn Cosmopolitan in April.

The cast includes Alfred Lunt, Walter Catlett, Herbert Corthell, Jobyna Howland and Lynn Fontanne. Mimi Palmeri is also featured. Albert Parker directed.

D. I. BROSSEAU

Talks on Merchandising

Properly applied and supervised business principals are the necessary essentials for the material reduction of operating costs, according to D. I. Brosseau, business counsellor for First National, who has made an exhaustive study of conditions.

He says, in part;

"Taking into consideration the mushroom-like growth of the Motion Picture Industry, it is only natural that certain basic principles of business have been neglected in the marketing of motion pictures. Of course this same state of affairs is one which all new industries pass through before they eventually cut excessive costs, and work on solid business principles, and with sound business tactics. There is not a single merchandising principle that is used in other businesses which cannot be applied to motion picture business, and if these principles are applied properly, and with proper supervision, the net result must be a material reduction in the operating costs as well as in the cost of accessories, both from the investment standpoint, as well as from the quantity necessary to waste.

"There is no other business that is known where such heavy investments are made with so little turnover, a turnover as understood by merchants, and after all motion picture business, is nothing more nor less than a merchandising proposition.

"A turnover can be increased in two ways; first, by actually increasing the sales over a certain period with the same investments, or else decreasing the initial investment with no decrease in the sales. Until Motion Picture Companies realize that the business in which they are interested is no different from any other business, and the sooner they realize that the same principles of other businesses must be observed to meet competition, the sooner will this great business be looked upon with favorable consideration by both bankers and investors and other people whom all businesses depend for their capital and support.

"Standardization is another very important function, which older business has realized as being an essential and potential business builder and has adopted. Motion picture business requires this at present, when cost consideration is so vital a factor. Standardization of effort, of routine, of handling accessories, of print inspection, of accounting methods, etc., all would mean economy in a big way."

"Lone Wolf" Is Due For Early N. Y. Run

"THE LONE WOLF," starring Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt, which is to have its official release March 23rd, already has been booked by many of the leading theatres of the country, an announcement by Associated Exhibitors states. Original Stories Out, Says Goldwyn

Producer Declares Public Wants Only Well Established Stories or Plays

THE original story for the screen is a thing of the past. So says Samuel Goldwyn, who for years sponsored the original story written expressly for the screen and who perhaps brought more well known authors into the film world than any other individual producer.

"Following a careful survey in which hundreds of theatre owners were consulted and an analysis of the successful productions during the past three months, I can safely say that the public today demands only well known stories or plays and that competition among producers for subjects of this type will be greater than ever during the next six months," says Mr. Goldwyn.

"What the public wants are stories they know about. Subjects that they have read, seen on the stage or have learned enough about through the newspapers and word-of-mouth advertising. Then they want to see these characters and climaxes relived in pictures.

"Sometimes a play or a book has a situation that is talked about all over the country. Perhaps it is the title. In any event there is at least one outstanding factor that creates a genuine desire on the part of motion picture patrons to see the picture.

"For years I have been the champion of the original story. I have in the past induced many authors to write for the screen. I have experimented and invested considerable money in the idea. I am convinced however, that the situation today has changed.

"Another change in the trend of the public demand, strongly favors the modern story. With the exception of one or two stories now in production and which are of a standard of merit that will win them tremendous success, the costume or period play is a thing of the past. It is silly to say that all costume plays will fail. Some of our greatest successes to come will be such productions. They will however—at least the successful ones—be very few and far between. The producer of a costume play starts off with a handicap at this time and unless he is able to offer a human story that will carry on its sheer strength of plot, its exceptional characterizations and its beauty, he will never overcome this handicap."

Paramount Starts Work on Mystery Drama

"The Guilty One," a mystery drama featuring Agnes Ayres has just gone into production at Paramount's West Coast studio with Joseph Henabery directing. In support of Miss Ayres are Edward Burns, Cyril Ring, Crauford Kent and Clarence Burton.

"The Guilty One," was a stage success when it was produced with Pauline Frederick in the star role. The story and play came from the pen of Michael Morton and Peter Traill. "The Guilty One," was adapted for the screen by C. Anthony Coldeway.

Principal Schedules Five For Release

FIVE STATES RIGHTS productions are announced for immediate release, the distribution being through Principal Pictures Corporation. They are:

"Daring Youth," produced and presented by B. F. Zeidman. In the cast are Bebe Daniels and Norman Kerry, Lee Moran, Lillian Langdon and Arthur Hoyt.

"The Good Bad Boy," another B. F. Zeidman production. The principals are Forrest Robinson, Joe Butterworth, Mary Jane Irving and Brownie, the famous "dog star."

"Listen Lester," presented by the Sacramento Picture Corporation. In the cast are Louise Fazenda, Eva Novak, Harry Myers, George O'Hara, Alec Francis, Lee Moran and Dot Farley.

"The Masked Dancer," produced by Eastern Productions, Inc., with Helene Chadwick and Lowell Sherman.

"Beggars on Horseback," a B. F. Zeidman production, starring Monte Blue and Marie Prevost.

Fleming Company in S. F. for Water Scenes

Departure of Director Victor Fleming for San Francisco, with a company of thirty screen players signalized the start of production on "Code of the Sea," in which Rod La Rocque and Jacqueline Logan are co-featured.

Other members of the supporting cast as announced by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Paramount in charge of production, are Maurice Flynn, George Fawcett, Luke Cosgrove, Lydia Knott and Sam Appell.

At San Francisco a fleet of ships has been assembled for use in the numerous water scenes which are to be filmed. "Code of the Sea" is an original story for Paramount written by Byron Morgan and was scenarized by Bertram Millhauser.

Rawlinson Feature Title Is Changed

Herbert Rawlinson's "Clay O' Ca'lina" picture has been changed in title to "The Dancing Cheat." Alice Lake, Robert Walker and Edwin J. Brady have the principal supporting roles.

SIGNALIZING the beginning of F. B. O.'s new program of production, which will embrace a cycle of photoplays produced at the F. B. O. Hollywood studios under the general supervision of B. P. Fineman, general manager, work has started on "Fools in the Dark."

Directed by Al Santell and based on the original story by Bertram Millhauser, the new production will have as its central character a scenario writer who becomes involved in adventures said to be both humorous and thrilling. As the scenarist, Matt Moore will have the leading role. Others in the cast will be Patsy Ruth Miller, Charles Belcher, Tom Wilson and Bertram Grasby. The continuity was prepared by John Grey.

J. R. Bray to Picturize "Outline of History"

Plans are rapidly taking shape, according to an announcement this week, for the picturization of the "Outline of History," H. G. Wells' epic of the growth of civilization. Part of the production will be made in England, it is said, in order to make the suggestions and counsel of Mr. Wells more readily available, but the bulk of this picture will be made here.

Production work will be carried on under the direction and supervision of J. R. Bray, president of Bray Productions Inc., who controls the world screen rights to the "Outline." Mr. Bray has gone to England to confer with the author.

In conjuction with the picture production of the "Outline" arrangements will be made to photograph specially selected scenes to be made immediately available for use on the Brayeo, a new type of projector, invented by Mr. Bray, and designed to project still pictures on the screen.

Norma Talmadge's "Secrets" to Open at Astor

The opening of Norma Talmadge's "Secrets," has been definitely set for March 24th at the Astor Theatre, New York, where it will play for an indefinite run. The motion picture adaptation from this Sam H. Harris play, was made by Frances Marion and directed by Frank Brozage.

A special prologue will be arranged for "Secrets" by S. L. Rothafel, and special music has been written by Al Sobler and Haven Ballestyne. "Secrets" is not a picture with lavish sets or hundreds of people in the cast.

MacLean Productions Are Sold for England

Contracts were signed during the week by Harry Rowson, president of the Ideal Films, Ltd., and J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., by which the British rights to all Douglas MacLean productions were taken over by the Ideal.

Mr. Rowson arrived in this country some weeks ago and started checking up the independent market. His negotiations were suddenly nipped in the bud when he was stricken with illness which confined him to his room at the Astor Hotel. He signed the contract immediately upon recovery.

Miss Garon has already made two successful productions for C. B. C.: "The Marriage Market," and "Forgive and Forget."

F.B.O. Asks Exhibitors To Select Title

The Film Booking Office have mailed over 500 exhibitors copies of the script of Emory Johnson's new production, tentatively called "Swords and Plowshares," in hopes of securing a suitable title.

Nearly four thousand titles have been submitted, over two hundred considered, but none accepted. Therefore F. B. O. have passed the problem to exhibitors. The producers are willing to pay as high as $1,000 for an appropriate title.

Darmour Named Assistant To Selznick Chief

W. C. J. Doolittle, President of the Selznick Distributing Corporation, announces the appointment of L. J. Darmour as Assistant to the President. In accordance with the policy of the company, the appointment was made from within the organization, as Mr. Darmour has been connected with the Selznick company for a number of years.

In his new position, Mr. Darmour will work with all departments of the organization, at the same time giving special attention to the acquisition of new product.

Mr. Darmour has had an association of more than ten years with the motion picture industry, and is thoroughly familiar with every phase of the production of pictures. For seven years before he joined Selznick, he was with the Gaumont Company. Among other posts he held in the Selznick organizations were those of associate editor, then editor, of the Selznick News reel.

Careful Casting for F. B. O. Series

Declaring that the proper casting is a very vital factor in producing each of the two-reel subjects in its Telephone Girl series, based on H. C. Witwer's current stories in Cosmopolitan Magazine, F. B. O. officials promise players of prominence.

One of the most recent to be chosen was Mario Carillo, who has played "heavy" parts with stars of the screen.

Tom Wilson, prominent character actor; Eddie Hearn, leading man, George O'Hara; Douglas Gerrard and others appear in the various episodes, of which there will be twelve in the series.

Lloyd's "Girl Shy" for Release April 20

"GIRL SHY," the new Harold Lloyd comedy, will be released on Easter Sunday, April 20.

This marks Lloyd's debut as an independent producer.

"Girl Shy" is described as a comedy drama embodying a unique character study. Harold Lloyd appears as a "girl shy" youth. Jobyna Ralston is seen again opposite Mr. Lloyd, and Richard Daniels and Carlton Griffin are prominently cast in the support. "Girl Shy" was directed by Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor from a story by Mr. Taylor, assisted by Ted Wilde, Tim Whelan and Tommy Gray.

"Broken Barriers" Scenario being Prepared

Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin are making the screen adaptation of "Broken Barriers" which will be Reginald Barker's next production. Mr. Barker recently completed "Women who Give" which Metro releases this month.

Work on the sets for "Broken Barriers" is being rushed and Mr. Barker is now casting the exacting parts of the story.

"Why Men Leave Home" is Due Next Month

"Why Men Leave Home," a John M. Stahl production presented by Louis B. Mayer, has taken its place among the "1924 Twenty" of the Associated First National Pictures, Inc. The screen adaptation of the New York stage success by Avery Hopwood will be distributed to first run theatres during the coming month.

Lubitsch Decides on Next Story for Warners

ERNST LUBITSCH has finally decided upon his next story for Warner Brothers, which will be his last before he is loaned by that concern to Famous Players-Lasky for a picture with Pola Negri.

The coming Warner production will not be an adaptation, but an original story by the director and his staff writer, Hans Kraely. It is said that it will be a dramatic modern story with an American background. The title of the story and the cast have not yet been decided upon.

Selznick Off to England for Production

MYRON SELZNICK left for England last Saturday on the steamship Berengaria, to supervise the production of the first of a series of pictures to be filmed in England for release through the Selznick Distributing Corporation.

Accompanying him are Miss Marjorie Daw and a number of other leading American players who are to appear in these productions. The first production is to be a film adaptation of Frank Stayton's melodrama, "The Passionate Adventurer." The story is laid in England, and the picture will be filmed in its original locale.

Louis B. Mayer Enlarges Production Plans

Louis B. Mayer is more firmly establishing himself as one of the most progressive independent producers in the industry.

With a courage similar to that he displayed in New England when he paid a record price for "The Birth of A Nation," he has shown rare judgment in his production tieups.

With the recent acquisition of Elinor Glyn who this week signed a contract with Mr. Mayer to produce a series of specials, the Mayer units now number six, the others being Fred Niblo, Reginald Barker, John M. Stahl, Harry Rapf and Hobart Henley.

The contract with Mrs. Glyn was signed on her arrival in New York on the Aquitania from London early in the week. After a brief rest in the Metropolis she will start for Hollywood and take up production work at once. "His Hour" will be her first production under the new affiliation. Details of casting and directing have not yet been determined, but Mrs. Glyn will prepare her own continuity and supervise the production.

Both Cohen and Davis Retire From T. O. D. C.

THROUGH the incorporation of Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation in New York with papers filed at Albany on March 7th, it became known that both Sydney S. Cohen and Harry Davis are not connected with the organization and that Wm. A True is president.

The advisory board of the newly organized Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation includes among others the following well known officials of State exhibitor organizations: Martin G. Smith of Toledo, Eli W. Collins of Jonesboro, Ark.; J. W. Walsh, Hartford, Conn.; John A. Schwalm, Hamilton, Ohio; W W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; Fred C. Seegart, Milwaukee, Wis.; Fred J. Dolle, Louisville, Ky.; Lawrence E. Goldman, Kansas City, Mo.; Charles T. Sears. Nevada, Mo.; Joseph Phillips of Fort Worth, Texas; and Thomas Arthur of Lansing, Mich. All are presidents or national committee men of State exhibitor bodies.

YOUR IDEA

SOME sound advice to exhibitors is given in the current issue of "The Close-up," Paramount's publication for its theatre managers. That advice is simply, "Politics and running a theatre don't mix." The example is cited of a large theatre which recently used throwaways on a picture which bore a campaign message for local political candidates on one side, and advertising for the picture on the other.

Around election time, such throwaways will doubtless attract attention—but where the political candidate appeals to his party, the exhibitor must reach every class, Republicans, Democrats, and all. To quote "Close-up":

"But don't play with politics in the theatre. It's worse than shouting 'Fire' during a matinee performance. Stand absolutely neutral on political questions and political campaigns. There may be only one strong party in your town, but that party may not be strong at the State capital. Politics are fairly evenly divided. For every friend you make for your theatre by politics, count on losing a friend you've had."

Pretty sound stuff, this. In the small community, of course, the exhibitor's party affiliation will be known, and he may even be personally involved in politics—but so long as he does not use his theatre, or mix his politics and his business, it will not affect his patronage.

One of the first decorated fronts used in Italy, at the Corso theatre, Rome, during the run of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" (United Artists).

On the other hand, election time often provides the opportunity for clever and appropriate advertising. As was told in these pages some time ago, the elections were on in Ottawa when "Little Old New York" played at the Regent. Manager O. D. Cloakey got out a special 24-sheet for the occasion, in the style of a political poster, with copy along the line of: Vote for Marion Davies in, etc. A stunt of this sort capitalizes on the local political fever, without showing any partisan slant whatever.

COUPON books, as a means of stimulating business, give the theatre a chance to sell tickets on the same basis that department stores base most of their advertising—the cut price. At the same time, while taking advantage of the desire for "something for nothing," the theatre profits, because holders of coupon books are likely to attend a show oftener than those who haven't them. Also, it tends to encourage making that particular theatre a regular "habit," since the coupon book holder is likely to go to that theatre in preference to another, attractions being reasonably equal.

Manager Willard C. Patterson of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, believes in doing things right, and he put over the coupon book idea with a smash in Atlanta, not so long ago. The plan, which was worked out by Sig Samuels and Patterson consisted in the printing of the two kinds of coupon books for admissions at the Metropolitan. One contained $3 admission for $2.50 and the other $6 worth for $5.

The best part of it all is that the theatre did not have to rely on its own efforts to get these books over. A tie-up was made for all the United Cigar stores to put them on sale and advertise them prominently in the windows and on the stands. The tie-up was arranged through J. A. Davis, southeastern representative for the United Stores. The cards put in the stores were arranged so that they not only advertised the books but arranged for a changeable space to carry the title of the current attraction at the Metropolitan. The United Stores sold the books to their customers at cost, five dollars; but in return for this courtesy every advertisement run by the Metropolitan theatre carried the line that the coupon books were on sale at the United stores. This was also used on the screen and on the program.

It gave the stores good publicity and more than compensated the theatre by bringing the books prominently to the attention of the 5,000 or more customers who pass through the stores daily.

An even far more reaching tie-up was effected with the Atlanta Georgian and the American. The three dollars book featured this campaign and 2,000 books were sold to the paper for $2.40 each. With a 23,000 circulation to rely upon, the journals were able to further the distribution immensely. Each one of their 268 carriers were enlisted in the campaign. They were given announcement cards from the Georgian's manager, telling about the proposition. This offered a book to every reader who secured four new six months' subscriptions. Subscription blanks were enclosed with the advertising matter.

The carriers themselves were offered inducements to push the campaign. A season pass was given to the five on whose routes the largest percentage of subscriptions were reported. The next ten received twenty-five tickets each, the next twenty received fifteen, the next thirty got ten and the next thirty five.

It is important to note that before going through with his plan, Manager Patterson submitted it to the income tax collector. The admission problem was solved by the ruling that coupons covered by the discount were regarded as "Complimentaries."

LOCAL events on the screen are a sure-fire audience builder, as exhibitors who have tried it know. Not every theatre can do it regularly, but there are many theatres where it could be used as an occasional stunt to good advantage.

In Detroit, Mich., the Capitol and Madison theatres have used their own local news reel for some time as a regular feature. This reel has been run on the logical basis, i. e., in conjunction with a local daily, in this case the Detroit News.

The News advertises the reel prominently, and the list of events advertised in the current issue illustrates the type of material to be had in the average American city. The list is as follows:

Detroit's New 3-Car Train — Will Detroit's new 3-car type of train solve the rush hour problem? Four men operate it. Passengers can pass from one car to another even while turning corners. See this train tested for Detroit officials.

Detroit's Little Hollywood Revealed — The Detroit Motion Picture Company now threatened by creditors is the center of much interest. See its Grosse Pointe studio, its president, Frank F. Talbot, the star and heroine of "Mary," the company's only picture now awaiting release.

Dry Sleuths Burn Beer Barrels — It made a merry looking bonfire when Detroit prohibition officers burned a whole stack of confiscated beer barrels. An unusual picture!

Farmers Stage Fox Hunt — Lapeer County farmers had the time of their lives when they set out to catch wiley Mr. Fox. See how the trail was laid, the excitement when the scent grew hot, the street race down Main Street.

Amateurs Act for Charity — Some beautiful scenes were enacted by Junior League members to raise money for charity — The Yama-Yama Girls, A Pirate Bold, Alice in Wonderland, Mother Goose, Humpty Dumpty, Jack and Jill, Little Bo Peep, etc.

Coasters Enjoy Heaviest Snow — See Bloomfield Hills Country Club members enjoying the exciting sport of coasting. Some funny "spills" occur! A good laugh!

AND OURS

USING special artwork directly under the marquee is a fairly common procedure, but Leroy V. Johnson, manager of the Liberty theatre, Seattle, has been using an improvement on this of late. This idea, which he has consistently followed out from week to week, is that of a combination electric sign and hand painted display under the marquee.

The accompanying illustration shows the arrangement used on "Twenty-One," and illustrates the general type. As will be seen, he used electric lights to work out the name of the star and title above the entrance. The effect was further heightened by the illuminated frame around the portrait of Barthelmess and the two panels done in green lamps with a chasing border. The entire affair was 32 feet long and created an effect that could not be overlooked.

While it is a good bit of work to place the sockets and wire the bulbs, the result is worthwhile. Such a display is equally valuable by day or by night, and greatly overshadows the effectiveness of either the electric sign or the art display alone.

BROADWAY isn't the only place that can have midnight shows. An extract from the Rangoon Gazette, Rangoon, India, which follows, shows that Edwin A. Fernandez, director of the Independent Associated Cinemas there, is not behind American exhibitors when it comes to live showmanship. Says the Gazette:

"The changing of the Hippodrome to a feature house after the long run of revivals of old serials, Burmese plays, Indian melodramas and mythological films is a most welcome one, particularly as the house has been thoroughly renovated, inside and out, and is now one of the trio of Independent Associated Cinemas under the direction of Edwin A. Fernandez, the other members of the trio being Majestic and the Olympia.

"This does not mean that Mrs. M. and the Messrs. Ashruff have given up the proprietorship of the Majestic and Hippodrome or that Mr. Fernandez has relinquished any of his rights in the Olympia, but they are co-operating under new title and are showing the best feature films at the Ashruff theatres, and serials at the Olympia.

"On Friday night the new Director inaugurated a new scheme in Rangoon, the holding of a midnight show. From 9.30 p.m. to 10.30 p.m. the Rangoon Town Police Band under Mr. Connoly gave a promenade concert, the picture programme starting at 10.30 p.m. and closing at 12.45 a.m. on Saturday. During the interval the Vienna Cafe catered for the very large audience. The theatre was packed to the doors and many could not find seating accommodation, the admission being free, Mr. Fernandez inviting all communities of Rangoon to visit the theatre.

SCENTING possibilities of an unusual newspaper tie-up when he booked a short subject based on a daily comic strip, Sid Smith's "The Gumps," Manager J. Tubman of the Palace theatre, Calgary, Alta., worked out an idea that brought the picture before the attention of all the readers of the comics.

He published a "Gumps" cartoon strip in the Calgary Herald showing the familiar characters in their usual situations, but with the dialogue omitted from the "baloons." Readers of the Herald were called upon to supply the text for the series of pictures, based on the idea expressed in them. Passbooks and general passes were used as prizes for the best lines submitted.

Curiously enough, a national humorous weekly is running a contest at the present time in which a cartoon illustration is published, together with one line of the accompanying joke. Prizes are offered each week for the best second line for the joke.

This would offer a novel stunt for the exhibitor on a comedy or comedy feature. An action still from the production, or one conveying a humorous situation, might be run with any sort of a suitable "feeder" line, such as "Mabel, why is father up so early this morning?", or anything appropriate, with prizes offered for the best second line to

SOMETHING of an extraordinary arrangement has been effected at Toronto, Ontario, in an agreement drawn up between a dozen of the large downtown theaters of Toronto and the Toronto Transportation Commission to facilitate the handling of crowds during the rush hours of the late afternoon and evening.

The effect of the agreement is that the managers of the theaters have entered into an arrangement whereby matinee performances are held at hours that will enable all patrons to board street cars for outlying districts before 5 p. m. Hours arranged by practically all of the important theaters for the regular afternoon shows enable the performances to close at 4.30, the openings for deluxe programmes being around 2 o'clock.

The theaters co-operated in making formal announcements regarding the schedule agreement under the heading of "For Your Convenience" as follows:

"Cordially co-operating with the Commission in the interest of better street car service, managers of the principal theaters have made arrangements so that their afternoon performances will be over in time to allow patrons to get on street cars before the 5 o'clock rush begins.

"In most cases, this will mean that the afternoon programmes will begin promptly at 2 or 2.15 p. m. and end by 4.30 p. m. at the latest.

"You can add to the pleasure of your matinee outings by being in your seat at the theater before 2.15 p. m., by boarding a street car for home before the rush begins and by riding home in comfort.

"Please leave the rush hours' cars free to carry the homeward-bound workers, who will appreciate your kindly thought for their comfort."

The theaters which have signed the agreement include the Hippodrome, Regent, Tivoli, Uptown, York, Pantages, Massey Music Hall, Shea's, Princess, Royal Alexandra, Loew's Yonge Street, Grand, Empire Theater.

ANOTHER national tie-up, and an unusually appropriate one is that, comes to light this week, with the announcement that Metro has hooked up its late release, "Happiness," with the Happiness candy stores.

Special candy boxes are being made up with Laurette Taylor's picture on the cover and her autograph under it. A display card is also being printed, carrying a still from the production, Miss Taylor's endorsement, and space for the theatre imprint.

This tie-up will be of value mainly in the bigger cities, of course, although in towns where there is no Happiness candy store, the local United Cigar store will handle the proposition, which makes it applicable in most of the larger communities.

At the same time the Metro exploitation department announces that tie-ups on "The Uninvited Guest" have been effected with the Royal Baking Powder people, Del Monte canned fruits, Pond's extract, Gainsborough powder puffs, Swift and Company, National Biscuit company, Beech-Nut, Monarch coffee, Campbell's soups, and Vivaudou. A formidable list, this, and one which shows that motion picture exploitation is being more and more recognized as a legitiate mmeans of commercial promotion.

Wolfe and Montcalm

A Stirring Account of the Fall of Quebec

3 parts

See these immortals live again!

Everybody who has gone to school knows the story of Wolfe and Montcalm,—the great-spirited conqueror and the gallant vanquished. No more romantic and appealing story appears in history.

Now you may see the actors in this great real drama just as they were, and learn the thrilling story of how France lost half a continent.

Each Chronicles of America picture is patriotic, inspiring, unique, accurate, dramatic and entertaining.

The houses showing them are certain to get the good-will of their communities; to hold their old patronage and interest new.

Indian Frontier Series

The white boy who became an In dian

Each Indian Frontier Series picture has a story that surely gets you and that is absolutely true.

For instance, you see how and why a white boy became an Indian chief,—and you see the man himself in the picture. Can't you imagine how such a story will appeal to your audiences?

The real Indians themselves enact their own stories. You have color, realism, educational value, thrill.

Look over these titles; just see the audience appeal: "The Man Who Would Not Die"; "The Man Who Smiled"; "The White Man Who Turned Indian"; "The Mandan's Oath"; "The Dirty Little Half-Breed"; "The Medicine Hat."

Each picture is a perfect little feature in itself.

Reno—
The attendance with this one was about up to the usual average. (Middle West.)

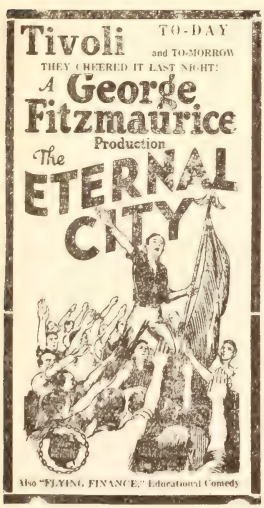
Great White Way—
Great picture. Drew big crowd and receipts big. Held second week. (West.)

The Green Goddess—
This picture did very good business. Popular story. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

Woman to Woman—
Patrons seem to like Betty Compson, and this picture has been very well received here. Picture itself is quite good. Business has been about average. (West.)
Did poor business on second week. (Middle West.)
Very good picture of its type. Had good week. (South West.)

PARAMOUNT



Icebound—
A good picture for ordinary people. (East.)

Heritage of the Desert
This feature had fair amount of entertainment value but we did not consider it big feature. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

The Call of the Canyon—
This picture had good appeal. It did a fine week's business. Show it anywhere. (Middle West.)

Big Brother—
A picture filled with many points of appeal. Its situations reach the heart. Some fine acting by Tom Moore and Mickey Bennett. Box office receipts very satisfactory. (East.)

Don't Call It Love—
A good picture well done. (East.)

The Tivoli theatre, Michigan City, Mich., used this unusual ad on "The Eternal City" (First Nat'l).

Shadows of Paris—
A good box office picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)
Star well liked but the play was panned. Business was fairly good, due to star's popularity. (Middle West.)
We regard this as Poli Negri's best American made picture. Interesting, lots of action and good acting. Business good. (Middle West.)

The Stranger—
Fair business on this one. Fairly well liked by those who saw it. (Middle West.)

Pied Piper Malone—
Jammed the house during bad weather. (East.)
Tom Meighan scores again in a real bit of film entertainment. Packed them in for week. (East.)

Next Corner—
Good pictures. No complaint on week's business with it. (Middle West.)

FOX

When Odds Are Even—
Typical William Russell offering. (East.)

North of Hudson Bay—
Business only medium. Fairly good melodrama. (Middle West.)

Cunid's Fireman—
Rather light, but liked. (East.)

Ladies to Board—
Shows Mix in somewhat different role. Did good with it. (Middle West.)

PREFERRED

Maytime—
A very pretty picture, entertaining and refreshing. It did very well for us. (Middle West.)
Wonderful picture, box receipts exceptionally large due to value of picture and extra advertising, scenery especially well liked. (West.)

Mothers-in-Law—
More society stuff, but fairly well acted and produced. Attracted good business because of strong supplementary program. (East.)

WARNER BROS.

Conductor 1492—
The best box office attraction in several months. (Middle West.)
A comical hit that took the crowd. (East.)

Lucretia Lombard—
Won high praise from patrons and press. Did nice business. (Middle West.)

George Washington, Jr.—
A decided improvement over former Wesley Barry vehicles. Has some good comedy. Business excellent. (East.)

Daddies—
Fair picture, advertising helped bring receipts. Disappointment to crowds. (West.)

Marriage Circle—
Good picture, receipts good, the plot well liked, held over. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Sporting Youth—
The title attracted good attendance, but the picture did not live up to expectations. (Middle West.)

Fool's Highway—
A very good picture. The title has seemed to have been somewhat against it, but business has been pretty good and picture was held over for a second week. (West.)

Stolen Moments—
A thriller of better than average merit that appealed to our transient trade. (Middle West.)

Hunchback of Notre Dame—
A tremendous hit. Turned 'em away for every performance at $1.65. Big advance sale of seats. (Middle West.)
Going strong on the third week. (East.)

Man from Wyoming—
Fair picture, receipts fair, not considered for first class house. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Painted People—
A good picture. Business good. (Middle West.)
Considered good picture and although big crowds the picture was better than expected by these crowds. (West.)
Business fairly good. Seemed rather exaggerated. (Middle West.)
Not quite up to the standard of other pictures of this type. Colleen Moore pleased, but was not up to her performance in "Flaming Youth." Business was good. (West.)

Twenty-One—
An appealing picture that brought the business. (East.)

The Eternal City—
Heralded as a big one, but not especially strong, according to the audiences. The principal comment is that too much importance was put on the staging and settings, and not enough on other details of the production. Business has been pretty good. (West.)

Lilies of the Field—
Very good. Lots of entertainment in this one. Business big. (Middle West.)

The Wanters—
In connection with special jazz week, turned them away all week. Is good picture. (Middle West.)

Song of Love—
Drew big attendance all week, Norma Talmadge being a big favorite here. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

Phantom Justice—
This one didn't go so good here, and was pulled off in the middle of the week. (West.)

ALLIED P. & D.

Paddy the Next Best Thing—
The name has been rather against this picture, the production itself being pretty well received by those that came to see it. Business has been only fairly good. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

Let Not Man Put Asunder—
Another complicated marriage picture thatpulled only on account of the big names on the program (East.)

Man From Brodney's—
Proved one of the best attractions of the year and set new box office receipts. Should prove winner anywhere. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Don't Marry for Money—
Patrons seemed to like it. (Middle West.)

Drums of Jeopardy—
A good picture, but rather hard to understand. Business quiet. (Middle West.)

Last Hour—
Unusually good attraction with splendid cast. It pulled big with us. (Middle West.)

METRO.

Thy Name Is Woman—
Played to good houses all week. (Middle West.)
Strong dramatically, but it did only fair business, for some reason. (Middle West.)

Heart Bandit—
Fairly good. Receipts averaged up. (Middle West.)

Scaramouche—
On its third and last week this picture did a very satisfactory business. Has showed 126 times, and aggregate business for the three weeks was very good. (West.)
Capacity business. (East.)

Fool's Awakening—
Just an average picture, with no particular merit. It did not do so well here. (Middle West.)

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News — first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Boston "Puritan Passions" Aids

Appeal Made To Music Lovers; Radio Announcement Broadcast; Other Ideas

EFFECTIVE exploitation for the showing of "Puritan Passions" at the Beacon and Modern theatres, Boston, resulted in unusual publicity for the attraction.

In co-operation with Manager Lourie, Joseph O'Sullivan, special Hodkinson exploitation man, worked out a campaign based on the dramatic appeal of the picture and the possibilities for appealing to the lovers of good music afforded by the music score especially composed for "Puritan Passions" by Frederick S. Converse.

In the New England Conservatory of Music cards announcing that the first original photoplay-symphony ever written would be played in conjunction with the showing. These cards were also placed in five music stores handling the music of Oliver Ditson Co., who published excerpts from the score. Announcement cards were placed in the lobby, to the same effect. The result of this play on the unusual musical score played with "Puritan Passions" was the interest of the music lovers of Boston in the showing.

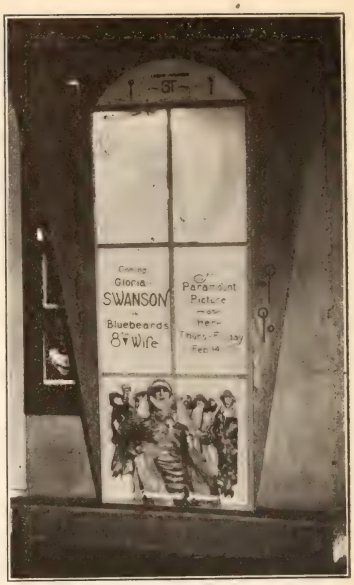
The day before the opening, Mr. Converse talked over the radio, Station WNAC broadcasting, his subject being "Music and the Photoplay," with special reference to the score for "Puritan Passions."

The ushers at both the Beacon and Modern were costumed in Puritan dress, lending a quaint atmosphere in keeping with the presentation.

During the week of the showing a man and woman, dressed as Puritans, covered the business section of Boston, the man carrying a hand bag on which was lettered: "Puritan Passions Now Playing At The Beacon And Modern Theatres. See us There."

On the day following the opening the Hodkinson exploitation representative assembled the ushers and the ballyhoo people in front of the Beacon theatre and had photographs taken. The stunt attracted a large crowd which became so dense that traffic was stopped for the time being, the crowd being under the impression that some movie scene was being "shot."

Italian Angle Featured in "Eternal City" Campaign



H. M. (Tod) Browning scored with his campaign on "The Eternal City" at the Olympia, New Haven, Conn. He evolved a new angle by taking advantage of the location of the story and picture and appealing to the Italian element in the city. Philip Troup, former postmaster and editor of the New Haven Union was allowed to sponsor a special showing to the officers and members of the Italian societies of the city.

Pasquale De Cicco, Italian consular agent, headed the foreign delegation which gave the picture considerable word of mouth advertising. The fact that the story had been modernized to bring in the Fascisti crisis made it of timely interest. Browning's audience was divided in its opinions on the political development and argued long and vociferously on the story action as propounded in the picture. It all meant good publicity for "The Eternal City."

The second line of campaign instituted by Browning is applicable to any picture. The New Haven Union printed ten automobile license numbers daily in its classified page. Owners were asked to identify themselves as the proprietors of the "hidden" license numbers and receive two orchestra seats for "The Eternal City." The Union used display space to advertise this plan and gave the theatre, picture and cast an equal break in the space.

When "Name the Man" (Goldwyn) played at the Allen theatre, Cleveland, these lobby decorations carried out the idea used in much of the advertising.

Highly effective lobby piece on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" (Paramount) by John W. Creamer of the Strand, Chillicothe, Mo. News print, in the shape of Bluebeard, was pasted behind the tissue paper front, with a flasher socket.

Striking Miniatures Built for "The Hunchback"

Albert Allard, a Minneapolis young man, completed the difficult task of building a Paris scene of two centuries ago out of pasteboard and sugar candy. The scene is a replica of one of the scenes in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The finished product was revealed in a downtown department store window in a most effective manner and attracted much attention when the picture played at the Garrick theatre.

Allard recently joined the staff of Finkelstein and Reuben and hopes some day in the near future to be a designer and model-maker of motion picture "sets." Meantime he uses an original medium to demonstrate his talent by reproducing attractive scenes that come under his eye. He discovered ordinary cardboard as an inexpensive medium of artistic expression while he was in the Central High School. Since his graduation last year he has been constantly experimenting by copying attractive stage and picture "sets."

Fifty sheets of cardboard of the quality used in the cards tacked everyday on the fences and telegraph poles announcing this or that attraction were used in the model. Even the frame work is of cardboard painstakingly glued to its compoboard foundation. When finally completed he covered the buildings and his carefully placed layer of tiny candies—chosen because they are shaped like cobblestones of the olden days—with kalsomine used by scenic artists to give their work body. He then painted the minature in various colors. His final step was to tack a piece of velvet around his base and install his concealed minature lighting effects.

The Minneapolis Journal devoted much space to Allard's work and commented on it editorially on its front page.

Musical Prologue Put Over on "Marriage Circle"

An usually beautiful prologue was presented last week by Manager Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, with "The Marriage Circle."

Eight dancers, nine singers and three instrumentalists were used. The number was programed as "Viennese Impressions," opening with "The Old Refrain" sung by the Mark Strand Ensemble. This was followed by "Paradise," an instrumental number by the Viennese Trio—violin, cello and accordeon. "Vienna Beauties" was a dance number by eight girls. The presentation closed with "Auf Wiedersehn" sung by the ensemble with interpolated dances.

Hyman used as a setting the exterior piazza of a fashionable country home, showing a set consisting of a house, two trees and some rustic furniture, with vines twining through arbors on each side. The numbers were specially arranged and orchestrated. Mr. Hyman worked out a special color lighting harmony. This prologue lasted ten minutes.

Teaser Stunt is Worked on "Tea With a Kick"

A teaser envelope stunt, based on the line, "How to make tea with a kick," was used by Manager W. T. Murray of the Rialto, Atlanta, on "Tea With a Kick."

Four thousand envelopes with inserts were distributed. The envelopes bore the line "How to Make Tea With a Kick," but upon opening the envelopes you were referred to a certain telephone number for further particulars. The number happened to be the theatre, although no mention was made of the Rialto.

The biggest kick in the stunt came from the police department, where several of the envelopes had been mailed. The police 'phoned.

"When a Man's a Man" in New Haven

Player Makes Personal Appearance Varied Exploitation Is Put Across

AIDED by the personal appearance of George Hackathorne, one of the cast, a strong exploitation campaign was put over on the New Haven showing of "When a Man's a Man" at the Olympia theatre. Manager Tod Browning, aided by H. L. Royster, exploitation man, and M. H. Kelleher, local manager for First National, handled the details of the effective campaign.

First a contest was arranged with the New Haven Union, which offered prizes for the best essay on "When is a Man a Man?" Long articles were published by the Union, each one referring to the opening at the Olympia.

Manager Browning went strong on the billboard displays, using 100 24-sheet stands and 300 one-sheets. These were of the block and colored drawing varieties. One-sheets of the indorsement of the picture by Harold Bell Wright also were used. Personal letters were sent to the faculty and students of Yale University calling their attention to the fact that this was one motion picture which faithfully followed the written novel, and that it was adapted from one of the world's best sellers. This proved a good angle for a university city. Cards reading "When a Man's a Man he gives his seat to a woman" were distributed in the cars of the local traction company, which gave co-operation on the stunt.

Two walking books were used, and they attracted much attention. These were similar to the "walking book" stunt worked during the Cameo theatre showing in New York City.

Manager Browning went in heavily on newspaper advertising. His lobby and marquee displays were unusually attractive.

Attractive banners and display material on "Circus Days" (First Nat'l) at the Strand theatre, Milwaukee.

Paris Gown Displayed for "A Woman of Paris"

A Paris Gown, Poiret's latest creation, displayed under glass, drew an admiring crowd of women into the lobby of the Rex theatre, Sumter.

"A Woman of Paris" was the occasion. Oscar White borrowed the gown from Sumter's smart shop, Schwartz Bros. He built around the gown a subordinate display which was very effective at night. It accented the gown, which was the high note in the lobby.

"Black Oxen" Hooked Into Timely Exploitation

Manager Charles M. Pincus of the Warfield theatre, San Francisco, Calif., presented "Black Oxen" with a prologue of nine harpits and one living harp, lighted in impressive manner. The selection was from "Naughty Marietta."

Despite the fact that the serialization of "Black Oxen" had run its course, the picture was given exceptional co-operation by all the San Francisco newspapers.

The Call tied up with a four column shopping story on two different occasions, the story and incidental advertising featuring garments worn by Miss Griffith in the production. Three different stores co-operated in the featuring of gowns and books. The Daily News staged an essay competition to determine how much Clavering really was interested in the young flapper whom he assumedly courted after Madam Zittiany's departure for Europe.

The biggest and most sensational news angle, however, came in the simultaneous opening of Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler's free glandular clinic. This was an entirely legitimate and scientific enterprise dedicated to Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, who took an intense personal interest in it. The resulting publicity was so great that during the first five days of its operation Dr. Wheeler rejuvenated more than 200 poor, elderly people without charge. While it was too early to make any statement of the results, the clinic was followed by the press and medical profession with unbounded interest.

"Fashion Row" Showing is Extensively Exploited

"Fashion Row," played an engagement at the Astor theatre in St. Paul recently following an effective city-wide exploitation campaign by Morris Abrams, Metro's exploitation representative there and Len S. Brown, manager of the Astor theatre.

Mr. Brown started off the campaign with a Mae Murray contest in his theatre publication which has a circulation well into the thousands and which is very popular. More than seven hundred people participated in the contest which gave the picture a good advance send-off.

Extra space was taken in all the St. Paul papers. A week in advance a score of twenty-four sheet stands were posted and the down town section was fully covered with three and six sheets. Emphasis was laid in the advertising that Miss Murray wore her most costliest gowns and the picture came in for a great deal of attention as a Mae Murray Style Show. About half a hundred window cards were placed.

Mr. Brown arranged a beautiful lobby, showing many enlarged heads of Miss Murray taken from the three sheets. Stills from the picture massed around by art work covered the walls of the lobby and over the marquis Mr. Brown set one of the twenty-four sheets illuminated by a strong amber light, an effect that was carried out all through the lobby with great brilliancy and effectiveness.

As a prologue Mr. Brown had four girls, one pianist, two violins, and one cello. They sang, played, danced and acted engagingly. These were billed as Mae Murray's Melody Maids.

Newsboys' Contest Boosts "Long Live the King"

The Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Georgia, used an excellent campaign on "Long Live the King." With the aid of C. D. Haug, Metro exploiteer, the Modjeska put over a Jackie Coogan "King of the Newsboys Contest," with over a hundred newsies of the Augusta Herald competing for the six prizes offered, that ranged from a suit of Jackie Coogan clothes donated by an Augusta merchant in return for the publicity of his store, to passes to the theatre. In addition, Master Coogan wrote a personal letter to the first prize winner.

The Herald co-operated on a large scale, opening its news columns to the contest, and in addition to daily stories running contest blanks, each worth ten points with which the Herald readers were urged to vote for their favorite newsboy. Every newsie was designated by a number, which was marked on a tag he wore.

All the contestants were photographed in front of the Herald building, and the winner of the first prize had his picture sent to Jackie. The newsies were all invited to the Modjeska showing of "Long Live the King."

The popularity contest among the newsies was a new thing in Augusta, and proved a winner for the theatre, with the paper benefitting from the publicity as well.

Children's Matinee Boosts "Ladies to Board" Run

The Capitol theatre, Moose Jaw, Canada, recently obtained some unusual publicity with a special children's Saturday morning matinee for the benefit of the Children's Home of that city. Admission was five cents and a potato. The Children's home had sent out a call for potatoes.

"Ladies to Board" was chosen as the feature attraction for the special performance. More than twenty bushels of potatoes were obtained as the result of this matinee.

This special matinee was arranged by E. P. Fields, the manager of the Capitol theatre, who has given several other special performances for children this season.

Picturesque prologue with male quartet used at Loew's Warfield theatre, San Francisco, during the recent showing of "The Dangerous Maid" (First National).

Capitalizes on Nearby Run of "Merry Go Round"

How a manager can take advantage of the first run of a picture in a nearby large city was shown recently by Manager F. N. Harris of the Amuse theatre, Hart, Mich. Mr. Harris recently presented "Merry Go Round" and "A Lady of Quality," and instead of being handicapped by the fact that both pictures had been shown a few weeks before in Detroit, he took advantage of the situation.

Simultaneously with the Detroit run on these pictures, Harris displayed in his lobby advertisements on the two productions as they appeared in the Detroit dailies. Slides describing the character of the productions and their previous successful runs in other communities were projected there weeks before the pictures came to Hart.

One-sheets, photos, press-matter, window cards and heralds were distributed and posted four days before play date, not only locally but also in two adjacent towns. Heralds were placed in all parked automobiles, and distributed among all the Hart business houses.

An advertisement of considerable size was run in the local newspaper a week in advance, and a large banner, painted by the artist, was displayed two days before the showing.

Toilet Preparation Tie-up on "Painted People"

Through the fact that the Melba people, makers of cosmetics, became interested in the still and cutout of Colleen Moore powdering her nose, "Painted People" was able to get a good break in drug store windows when the picture played the Chicago theatre, Chicago. About twenty-five window displays were arranged inside and outside the loop district.

According to the story sent by W. K. Hollander, publicity, advertising and exploitation director for Balaban and Katz, the druggists were more than enthusiastic over the tie-up. They went out of their way to give the picture more than a 50-50 break in the windows through cutouts, stills, sign cards and hand painted posters. In each case, of course, the tie-up was cemented by advertising some article that that particular store specialized in.

Novel miniture setting used in a Minneapolis store window when "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" (Universal) showed at the Garrick. Albert Allard built it of cardboard and rock candy.

Unusually Large Billboard Stand on "Hunchback"

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" recentlyopened a run at the Shubert Crescent theatre, Brooklyn.

One of the many exploitation stunts used for this run might be referred to as "Greatest Stand Advertises Greatest Picture in Greatest City's Greatest Borough." George Brown, who is the brains for the "Hunchback" advertising, publicity and exploitation devised, in bill-posting parlance, "a five double decker" or 240-sheet poster. Being forty seven feet high and forty-two feet wide it covers an area of 1,974 square feet. The two "human flies," Harry Irving and Dolly Grey, braved the fury of a bitter cold gale that blew at the rate of 72 miles per hour, to put this huge poster in place where it can be seen for miles. It is below the Brooklyn approach to the Manhattan Bridge.

Another feature of the exploitation was the co-operation extended by the band of St. John's College, Brooklyn educational institution for men and boys. They played several popular pieces in front of the theatre.

Contest Parade Is Held On "Long Live The King"

One of the most ingenious "Jackie Coogan Contests" on record is that carried out by Arthur W. Pinkham, manager of the Park theatre, Bangor, Maine, when he played "Long Live the King."

Over 500 contestants took part and the winner received a suit of Jackie Coogan clothes, with excitement running high and the whole city vastly amused over the contest.

In putting the stunt over Mr. Pinkham held nightly parades of the contestants in makeup, this being an entirely new angle to the "Jackie Coogan Contest" idea, and a plan that gained a vast amount of extra publicity for the theatre and picture.

Other stunts that Mr. Pinkham put over in connection with "Long Live the King" were window displays in the most prominent clothing concerns of Bangor and a street ballyhoo consisting of a pony cart with three 3-sheet cut-outs which was driven about town during the run. In addition, and as part of the contest, two dozen pails of Jackie Coogan Peanuts were given out as prizes to those who were not quite entitled to the first prize but presented remarkable likenesses of the well known Jackie.

Inexpensive "Circus Days" Front Used by Schade

George Schade got all the effect of "Circus Days" but cut his expense in half when he played the attraction at the Sandusky theatre bearing his name. All he used was a striped awning in triangular shape on both sides of the theatre marquee. This draped from directly under the electric light sign above the marquee to the bottom of the marquee.

It got over the circus idea and was inexpensive. It carried the necessary lettering but minimized the cost. It told Sandusky of the extra attraction at the Schade but it didn't make them pay extra for it.

This snappy lobby display, with plenty of action, was used at the Palace theatre, El Paso, of which J. M. Edgar Hart is manager, during the re-showing of "Zaza" (Paramount).

Seattle "Fool's Highway" Stunts

Title Contest, Telegram Idea Among Features of Bender's Novel Campaign

VARIOUS unusual stunts were used in Seattle recently by Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia theatre in putting over an engagement of "Fool's Highway."

The first plan used by Mr. Bender was the sending of ten thousand large telegrams to a selected list of patrons of the house. The telegrams were prepared in Seattle, shipped to Hollywood, and mailed individually from there to the names on the outside. The wire, when opened, was a brief message from Mary Philbin, urging the recipient to see her latest and best picture, "Fool's Highway," when it came to their city.

During the run of the picture, Mr. Bender put over a title contest which was good for much publicity in the daily press of the city, Stories published by the theatre declared that the title "Fool's Highway" was believed by some persons to be misleading, so accordingly the theatre was instigating a contest to select a better name. Seattle residents were entitled to suggest another title that they believed would be more pertinent. All titles were to be sent to the Universal studios, where a number of winners were to be selected. First prize in the contest was a season pass to the house, and a number of cash prizes and sets of weekly passes were also offered.

The Seattle civic elections were just in progress at the time of the showing, and Mr. Bender took advantage of the fact to gain some more publicity. He arranged with T. G. Randolph, International News photographer in Seattle, to take screen tests in front of the theatre on one of the opening nights, and built a large platform about a foot from the ground for that purpose. The platform was rigged up with curtains, lights, etc., and on that evening movie "tests" were made of all persons that had turned in their names to the management. As a special added attraction, Mayor Edwin J. Brown was prevailed upon by Mr. Bender to enter the contest, and his photograph, along with the many others, was shown on the screen the second week of the run. The picture of the Mayor, also, was good for space in the daily newspapers, thus winning more publicity for the Columbia.

A fourth stunt used by Mr. Bender was the photographing of a large street parade and charity dance staged by the Seattle Elks during the second week's run of "Fool's Highway." The photographer's car and camera prominently announced that the pictures were to be shown the following week at the Columbia, and this stunt, in conjunction with other good publicity furnished through this tie-up with the Elks, brought good returns.

Catchlines From Subtitles In "Bad Man" Lobby

Display cards that handed patrons entering the lobby a good laugh were used by Manager Weider of the Rivoli theatre, Portland, Ore., on "The Bad Man."

The cards were unusual in make-up. They were constructed in the form of a shadow bo with a mottled background. The photos were mounted on beaver board cut in odd shapes, with an outline of gilt around them. These stills, after mounting, were raised and placed about two inches from the back of the shadow box.

The head used at the top of the display board, was a three sheet cutout. The card suspended from the ears carried the picture title and name of the star.

Effective use was made of the humorous subtitles in small cards on the side of the display. Such subtitles as "You tak her, my frien', for what is one woman among frien's" were used to good purpose in drawing a laugh from passersby.

Electrical and pictorial art material used in the lobby of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., on "Anna Christie" (First Nat'l) was being played Stuffed eagle display by Manager Charles Creslein of the Rialto, Augusta, Ga., on "Eagle's Feather" (Metro).

Tie-Up With Local Fair is Aid to "The Hunchback"

Just as A. J. Sharrick, Universal exploiteer, was opening his campaign for the showing of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Wallace theatre in Bradentown, Florida, the county fair opened in the same city. Sharrick seized upon this opportunity to get his message across to the vast number of people, from neighboring towns who flocked in Bradentown for the fair. He left no stone unturned to impress upon them the fact that "The Hunchback" played an important part in the festivities.

His first step was to have two replicas of the book constructed and mounted on a truck which, carrying two pretty girls as pages, was one of the outstanding features of the street parade. Two forty foot signs floated down the river on pontoons, with electric lights for night. The active co-operation of every woman's club and civic organization within a radius of thirty miles was enlisted and the adjacent country was billed like a circus.

"Darling of New York" is Put Over in Holyoke

When "The Darling of New York" showed at the Suffolk theatre, Holyoke, Mass., an intensive campaign was put over by the management, with the assistance of George A. Miller, Universal exploiteer.

He tied up the Baby Peggy waltz and plastered the whole town with covers of the song as well as sending out pluggers who told about the showing at the Suffolk theatre while they were pushing the song. He also tied-up with the town's two big department stores that were handling the Baby Peggy doll and in this connection secured several fine windows decorated with photos from the production and signs advertising the showing.

Title Teaser Campaign for "West of Water Tower"

In communities where the novel, "West of the Water Tower," is not well known in advance of the showing of the picture, exhibitors may well follow the lead of Manager Howard Price Kingsmore of the Howard theatre, Atlanta.

It seems that Atlanta was one of the few towns of importance where the Homer Croy novel had not been actively pushed in the bookstores, so Kingsmore used teasers as the basis of his drive to popularize the picture's title. For three days he ran six short, snappy teaser ads in each paper each day. All were different, and "What Happened West of the Water Tower?" is a fair sample. On the third day, each paper carried the line, "For Information on 'West of the Water Tower' Call Ivy 5593." That is the Howard's number, and the curiosity of readers had been so aroused by that time that the 'phone was busy all day long, telling them of the stars in the picture and an inkling of the story.

Meanwhile, many window tie-ups had been effected and the usual advance lobby display has attracted a world of attention. Co-incident with the close of the teaser campaign, 4,000 homes were circularized with a snappy sales talk on the picture. A special screening for five hundred guests on Sunday afternoon furnished the climax of the campaign.

Elaborate Fashion Show is Presented in Dallas

The Melba theatre, Dallas, recently put on its Spring Style show in conjunction with A. Harris & Company, performances being given twice daily.

The presentation, entitled "The Symphony of Fashions," divided into three scenes at which costumes appropriate for certain occasions were displayed. The first scene, billed "The Book of Fashions" showed sport wear, which is in high favor for spring wear. The newest of suits, one-piece sports dresses, hats, top coats and foot wear were displayed. The "Book of Fashions" was prepared especially for the occasion by Ike Lorch of A. Harris & Co.

The second scene, entitled, "A Mah Jong Tea," arranged for the showing of afternoon frocks, tea gowns and dressy sports wear suitable for such a gathering. Hats and footwear appropriate for each costume were displayed.

The third scene showed reception-room where the models displayed dinner-dresses and evening gowns with hats for evening wear and wraps.

Twelve models especially selected to represent the many types of women who are interested in fashion shows, display and garments were employed

The scenery for the "Symphony of Fashions" was constructed for the presentation in order to carry out the original ideas of those who conceived the plan of the presentation. Many of the garments were selected in New York by A. Harris & Co.'s buyer, who recently returned with the latest models from the East. F. H. Bishop directed the show.

Star Resemblance Stunt is Used to Boost "Rosita"

Through a Mary Pickford resemblance contest on "Rosita," Raymond B. Jones, publicity man for the Howard theatre, Atlanta, obtained heavy space in the conservative Atlanta Constitution. It was a triangular affair, worked out like this:

The theatre offered prizes ranging from twenty-five dollars down, to the five girls in Atlanta who most resembled Mary Pickford as she appears in "Rosita." For the sake of the advertising, a prominent photographer agreed to make all the pictures of the girls.

He didn't lose anything, because every girl that had a picture made for the contest, ordered a couple of prints for herself. The paper took the stunt for its circulation value.

The contest opened with a picture of Mary under the headline "America's Sweetheart," followed by the question "Who will be Atlanta's sweetheart?" All that the contestants had to do was call at the photographers with a copy of the Constitution in their hands, and sit for the pictures. The paper took the photographs every day, and ran them with a story. The contest closed at the Howard the day the picture opened, and the winners were announced from the stage.

Open Book Display Worked on "Ashes of Vengeance"

The Capitol theatre, Reading, Pa., managed by Joel Levy, used an open book for its advance lobby advertising on "Ashes of Vengeance." The same platform that housed the display for "Circus Days" was used for "Ashes of Vengeance."

A huge book was opened on the platform. The blank pages had been hand lettered with the name of the star and title on one side and descriptive selling copy on the other.

One of the most valuable features about this kind of a display lies in its variation. Fans who sought the unusual came and read the lines of these pages as eagerly and as completely as if they were devouring the works of a novelist.

Residents of Portland, Ore., couldn't overlook this display on "The Wanters" First Nat'l. used during the showing at the Peoples theatre.

Automobile Show Tie-Up on "Six Cylinder Love"

Ray Deusern, manager of Fox's Terminal theatre, Newark, N. J., with the help of an exploitation man from the home office of Fox, arranged a very effective advertising campaign for "Six Cylinder Love," which recently played that house.

The week preceding the run, the annual automobile show was the greatest thing in the minds of the Newark public. The theatre tied up with the committee having charge of the show and obtained permission to place several lobby frames in the entrance to the armory where the show was held.

Permission was granted by the Chief of Police to tie trick summons tags on the steering wheels of automobiles parked in the downtown district. About 10,000 tags were used starting at the Auto Show and including the chief business streets. The tags, printed in red and distributed five days in advance of the opening carried the usual message.

An important part of the campaign was the street parade arranged in co-operation with the Newark agent for the Stephens car which is used by Truex in the picture. A pretty girl sat in the car which carried banners advertising the picture and the machine was seen on all the main streets of the city for three days before the opening of the picture.

The automobile agent took a half page advertisement with the theatre in the Newark Ledger and the paper devoted the other half of the page to stories about "Six Cylinder Love." The chief selling angle of this ad was the following message to the Newark public: "The Stephens definition of 'Six Cylinder Love'—The Six she loves to drive—It's a Stephens." The fact that the Stephens was used in making the picture and that the car could be seen every day in front of the theatre was prominently displayed. At night the car stood in front of the theatre and was illuminated by a reflector light placed at the right of the lobby.

In addition to the automobile tie-up one of the largest bakers distributed 25,000 slips on top of his bread which were easily seen through the wax wrappers advertising the picture and his product jointly.

Fire Engine Ballyhoos Run of "Hook and Ladder"

Manager C. E. Williams of the Majestic theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., put over some simple but effective exploitation recently on "Hook and Ladder."

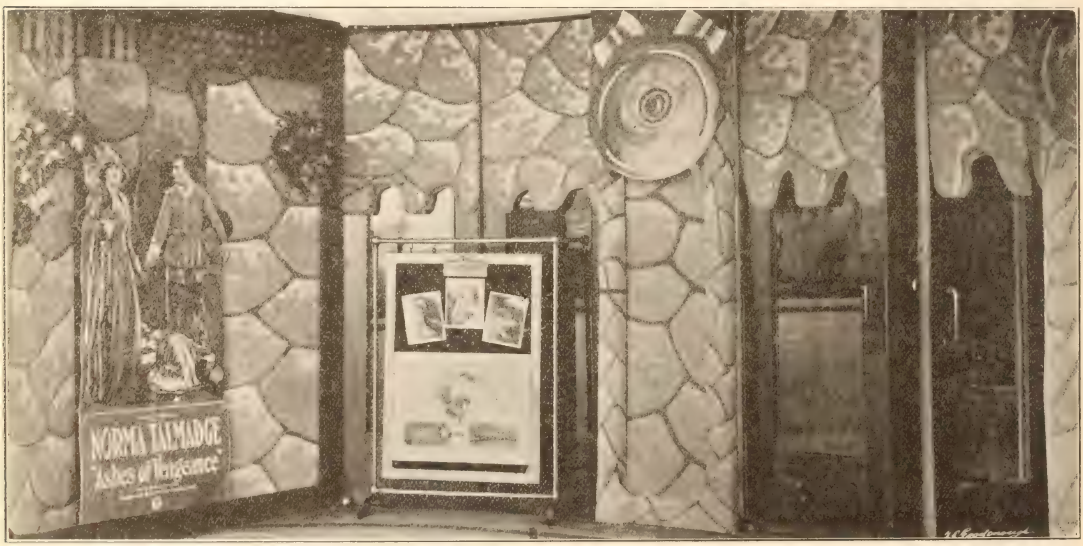
Mr. Williams and his assistant, J. V. Carney, obtained a fire engine from the city department officials, and used it as a ballyhoo for their showing. Besides driving through all the important business and residential sections, the engine was on exhibition before the theatre. Suitable banners, advertising the showing, were displayed on the vehicle.

"Black Oxen" Lobby Given Strong Drawing Power

Unusual effectiveness was demonstrated in the artistic design for the lobby of the Strand theatre, Seattle, Wash., during the run of "Black Oxen." Vivid, contrasting black and orange decorations were used.

A beautiful silhouette effect was used at the extreme right of the lobby. With the lights in the rear of the shadow glass the central figure which forms the symbolic theme of the story, stood out boldly against the night darkness of the street.

The door panels were beautified with artistic, hand worked, 8 by 10 stills. In the center over the box office Corinne Griffith's picture was worked in with green foliage on each side. Two buried spot lamps brought this out strongly during the evening performances.



In front of and above the marquee another silhouette effect was used in a large metal sign board encircled by electric lights. This carried out the idea of "Black Oxen" and again introduced the symbolic figure with which the story has been associated.

Local Girl Exploited for "The Fighting Blade"

Because Manager Tod Browning remembered that Allyn King, who played in "The Fighting Blade" was a New Haven girl, he got an extra break when the picture was shown at the Olympia theatre in that city.

Unfortunately Miss King was working on a picture at the time of the run and had to decline an invitation to make a personal appearance. Nothing daunted Manager Browning scouted up all of Miss King's classmates at school and had them make a party at the theatre.

The popularity of Miss King given public significance in this way meant added business for the theatre.

A simple modification of the castle front idea in the lobby of the Royal Victoria theatre, Victoria, B. C., during the showing of "Ashes of Vengeance" (First Nat'l) Manager Clif Denham was responsible.

Appropriate prologue, with male quartet, staged by Chris J. Behrens of the Family theatre, Davenport, Iowa, on "The Way of a Man" (Pathe).

Novel "Humming Bird" Campaign

Memphis Manager Puts Over Variety Of Stunts to Boost Showing of Film

HOWARD WAUGH, manager of Loew's Palace, Memphis, went after the exploitation of "The Humming Bird" in thorough and workmanlike manner, and what he left undone was hardly worth doing. His campaign offers many ideas for any exhibitor when "The Humming Bird" comes along to his house.

Waugh is a great believer in window tie-ups if they are good, and those he got for "The Humming Bird" had all Memphis looking. The first thing he did was to hop on the Humming Bird Hosiery tie-up, and got a wonderful window in B. Lowenstein & Bros. store. Then he arranged with that firm to help him in his lobby display. In connection with a big cut-out of Gloria Swanson, Waugh built a special screen with an aperture in the center, in which the lower extremities of a wax figure of a woman were revealed, giving the effect of a woman standing behind the screen. The legs were dressed in Humming Bird Hosiery, "from Lowenstein's," and a card alongside said so.

In a fashionable millinery shop featuring an exclusive line of tailored hats, a large lobby frame was placed, calling the attention of passersby that "Andrea Hats Are Worn Exclusively by Gloria Swanson in 'The Humming Bird'—At Loew's Palace." A number of hat boxes were attractively decorated with stills from the picture.

In the Cinderella Shoe Shop a similar frame was placed, with the display featuring "Gloria Swanson Pumps."

Sheet Music Displayed

In the island show case at the entrance of one of the city's biggest department stores was an artistic display of copies of the song, "The Humming Bird," with a placard reading, "Hear 'The Humming Bird' Here and See the Picture with Gloria Swanson at Loew's Palace."

A dignified street ballyhoo was furnished by the local Chalmers Motor Car agency which donated a fine new demonstrator sedan which, laden with pretty girls, told the world, via a sign on each running board, that "Gloria Swanson in 'The Humming Bird' Drives a Chalmers."

Then there was the direct window hook-up with Waugh's biggest stunt. In the window of a leading jewelry store was displayed a silver cup, announced as "Purchased by Gloria Swanson for the Best Dancer in Memphis, to be awarded at the Shrine Roof Restaurant in honor of her new Paramount picture, 'The Humming Bird.'"

The Shrine Roof, the biggest and most popular restaurant and cabaret, made the week preceding the opening of the picture "Gloria Swanson Week." To nearly 2,500 customers a day the message that the picture was coming to the Palace was carried on a card clipped to the menu. This card served to exploit also the Shrine Roof's own Gloria Swanson week and announced the presentation of the Swanson cup on Saturday night. The menu cards were dotted with the names of such dishes as "Filet Mignon Gloria Swanson," "Humming Bird Salad," "Gloria Swanson Parfait," etc. And every night a souvenir was given to each lady in the form of a "Gloria Swanson Hair Net."

Real Circus Wagons Found for "Circus Days"

Two real circus wagons, used in the circus season by a traveling circus, were used to exploit "Circus Days" at the Hippodrome Theatre, York, Pa. The wagons were drawn through the principal streets of the city, accompanied by a brass band.

On each wagon were several Jackie Coogan impersonators who threw away heralds and

Los Angeles Campaign for "When a Man's a Man"

A thorough and intensive exploitation was put over in Los Angeles for the premiere of "When a Man's a Man," at the State theatre, Los Angeles.

Two weeks prior to the opening, teaser newspaper slugs appeared in all dailies. A teaser campaign was utilized also with billboards. One week ahead of the showing, a block twenty-four sheet was put up and several days prior to the opening, the Associated First National pictorial lithos were placed over the block sheets.

Full sheet cards were seldom used in advertising. Two thousand of these were printed in three colors and sniped on all available buildings, fences, and important locations about the city.

A huge book, representing Wright's "When a Man's a Man" was built at the studio and placed on a small truck. This paraded through the busy streets of Los Angeles for a week, and was seen by countless thousands of people.

For the first time in a year and a half, a banner was strung across the busiest corner of Los Angeles — 7th and Broadway. The banner was 8 feet high by a length of 60 feet and was seen by thousands of people every hour. It remained up a week.

Motion picture stars sent wires of congratulations to the producers and West Coast Theatres, Inc., and these in turn were placed in frames on display in the theatre lobbies.

Tie-ups were made with the Cinderella Roof — the largest ball room west of Chicago. Banners were placed on the building and a special "When a Man's a Man" night was held. This obtained unusual publicity. A radio night was arranged for with a local newspaper and all of the players appeared and broadcasted messages over the air. The space given the stunt which was called "Man's a Man" night was unusual.

Tie-ups were made with book stores, using window streamers, special jackets, etc., on the book. Over twelve stores were represented in this stunt. Special ads were taken the day preceding the opening. The ads were of a personal nature — in newspaper type — telling the public of Los Angeles what they had in store for them in "When a Man's a Man."

Street ballyhoo and display on "West of the Water Tower" (Paramount) by Howard Waugh, manager of Loew's Palace, Memphis

Swanke Designs Attractive "Flaming Youth" Lobby

Arthur Swanke, who designs all his own lobbies at the Ria to and Mission theatres, El Dorado, Ark., put over another smashing display during the run of "Flaming Youth."

The completed design gave the impression of the title in flaming letters on the panels on each side of the entrance. The design was portrayed with a pale yellow background with the title letters in small roto cut-outs. The lady in the glass was painted in black. The flaming effect on the title was done in red, yellow and white.

Cut-Outs Effectively Used on "Palace of the King"

J. Fotheringham, manager of B. S. Moss' Franklin theatre in New York, aroused a lot of preliminary interest in the showing of "In the Palace of the King," as well as much comment among his patrons, by using cut-outs from the posters for his lobby display.

He mounted a cut-out, life size, of a man in warrior costume riding a white horse with the figure of a woman standing by the horse. These were painted a very bright scarlet and blue and were visible for a block in either direction. They gave a good flash and were inexpensive to make. The cut-outs were modeled on the poster drawings painted on cardboard.

Over the entrance to the theatre was another large cut-out to show the life size picture of a kneeling warrior and a Moorish woman also modeled on one of the posters. The background of this cut-out was a bright red and the costumes were in blue and gold. Mr. Fotheringham says that this lobby display is one of the most striking that the theatre has had recently. He is a firm believer in the drawing power of the lobby display.

A week ahead of the showing, Mr. Fotheringham used 20 small pennants of various colors in various parts of the lobby and theatre. On one side of the pennant was the word "Coming" and on the other side the title of the picture, "In the Place of the King."

Stuffed Eagle in Lobby on "The Eagle's Feather"

During the showing of "The Eagle's Feather," Manager Charles Creslein of the Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., borrowed the biggest eagle in captivity south of Washington. It happened to be stuffed, but there was nothing the matter with its wing-spread, six feet seven inches.

As the bird was already mounted on a tree limb, it was easy for Creslein to pattern a card on the outline of a feather, and attach it to the bird's perch, with the title "Eagle's Feather" lettered on the card.

Since birds of this size are seldom seen in Augusta, there was a continuous crowd in the lobby of the Rialto.

Studio Briefs

Marmont With Cruze

Percy Marmont will play the leading male character in James Cruze's forthcoming production of "The Enemy Sex." Betty Compson will head the cast of featured players which will include several other well-known individuals to be announced later. Walter Woods and Harvey Thew wrote the scenario from a novel by Owen Johnston.

Maurice (Lefty) Flynn and George Fawcett have been added to the cast of "Code of the Sea" which Victor Fleming will produce in San Francisco. Rod La Rocque and Jacqueline Logan head the list of featured players in this Paramount picture which was written for the screen by Byron Morgan and scenarized by Bertram Millhauser.

Irvin Willat and the members of the company engaged in the making of Zane Grey's "Wanderer of the Wasteland" returned to Paramount's West Coast Studio after an absence of five weeks on location in Arizona and Eastern California.

Ernst Lubitsch will begin work at Paramount's West Coast Studio in June following the completion of Miss Negri's next picture "A Woman of the Night" which is to be directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki following Mr. Buchowwetzki's present picture "Men."

Production has started on the Joseph Henabery production "The Guilty One" in which Agnes Ayres is featured. Cyril Ring, Crawford Kent and Clarence Burton have been selected for important parts. "The Guilty One" was adapted by Anthony Coldeway from the stage play by Michael Morton and Peter Traill.

Estelle Taylor has been signed by Paramount to play one of the two featured roles in the forthcoming George Melford production, "The Wildcat".

"Icebound" Staff Back

William DeMille and the members of his staff returned to Paramount's West Coast studio after an extended stay in and about New York City where they completed Owen Davis' prize play "Icebound." Mr. DeMille will start work soon on "The Inside Story" an original screen story by Clara Beranger, scenarist of most of William DeMille's recent productions.

William Farnum, latest addition to the ranks of Paramount stars, has arrived in Hollywood and begun preparations for his first starring picture for this organization. Edward Peple, author of such stage plays as "The Littlest Rebel" and "The Prince Chap" accompanied Mr. Farnum to the Coast and will collaborate with the scenarist and director on his stories. Wallace Worsley, who directed "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will handle the directorial megaphone on Farnum's initial Paramount picture.

George Nash, known for his characterization of Charlie Yong in the stage play, "East is West," has an important role in "The Confidence Man," Thomas Meighan's forthcoming Paramount picture.

Conspicuous in the French court scenes in Sidney Olcott's Paramount production, "Monsieur Beaucaire," now being filmed at the Long Island studio, is Andre Daven, a young French newspaperman who was selected by Valentino in Paris and is enjoying his first experience as a screen actor.

Enlarging Laboratory

Improvements and additions on a vast scale are in preparation at Universal City, by Julius Bernheim, general manager. A stage larger by half than "the world's largest," rebuilding of the laboratory and the installation therein of $30,000 worth of developing machinery and $10,000 worth of printing machinery and many enlargements of the "ranch" department by purchase of livestock, are principal among the improvements contemplated.

King Baggot, director and editorial staff, are busy putting the finishing touches on "The Inheritors."

Mary Philbin, who was starred in "The Inheritors" has been selected to star in "Mitzi," a Universal-Jewel production.

"High Speed," Universal production starring Herbert Rawlinson and directed by Herbert Blache, has been completed.

William Duncan and the company of which he is star and director are in McCall, Idaho, filming the snow scenes called for in the Universal chapter-play "The Free Trader." Edith Johnson has the leading feminine part, the other being taken by Esther Ralston.

"The Shooting Star" will be the next Gerald Beaumont racing story in which Billy Sullivan will be starred by Universal, and directed by Edward Laemmle.

Oland In "Throwback"

Warner Oland, who pictured many Oriental characterizations, is portraying the role of a Chinese rebel leader in "The Throwback," Universal production.

"Relatively," Universal production starring Laura La Plante and directed by Robert Hill, has been completed. Universal has two or three new stories under consideration for Miss La Plante.

"The Lone Roundup," second of the two-reel Westerns to be directed by Ernst Laemmle, is being filmed with Jack Daugherty as the star and Olive Hasbrouck as leading woman.

Three big productions by Universal, "The Missourian," "Butterfly" and "Love's Lariat" on which preparation has been under way for some weeks are announced as nearly ready for filming. The casts are expected to be announced in a few days for the first two. The third will be a Hoot Gibson-Edward Sedgwick production.

Two well known character women of the legitimate stage are portraying parts in "Relativity," Universal's latest starring vehicle for Laura La Plante. They are Lydia Yeamans Titus and Jennie Lee.

Costume On Fire

While Barbara La Marr, dressed in a costume of silver cloth wired on the edge, she crossed a high voltage electric cable and the short circuit blazed and set fire to her gown. Maurice Tourneur's assistants quickly spread overcoats upon her and prevented the fire reaching her flesh although it was some days before the new costume was completed to take the place of the ruined one. "The White Moth" is the title of the picture.

The Coogans, in company with Scott Dunlap, Jackie's new director, left Hollywood for San Francisco to look for locations for the little star's next feature production, written especially for him by Willard Mack. The entire Coogan company will follow, as the bulk of the exterior scenes for Jackie's forthcoming starring vehicle will be filmed in the Bay City.

John Jasper has joined Principal Pictures Corporation in the capacity of general manager.

Lionel Belmore, character actor has been engaged by Frank Lloyd to play Justice Baine in "The Sea Hawk." Belmore was recently seen in support of Norma and Constance Talmadge.

Baby Peggy will begin work on "Helen's Babies" this week. The cast selected includes Gene Carpenter, Clara Bow, Edward Everett Horton, Claire Adams, Crawford Kent, Tom Reed and Mattie Peters. William A. Seiter is to direct the production and announces everything is ready for the initial scenes.

With even the use of French newspapers to patch some of the flimsier scenery, a complete interior of a Paris theatre has been erected on one of the stages at the United Studios for Maurice Tourneur's "The White Moth." There are seats for the six hundred members of the audience who will rush to the stage and mob Charles de Roche after he has shot at Barbara La Marr.

Tribute To Seastrom

Victor Seastrom received an unusual tribute in a cable from Stockholm signed by leading journalists and congratulating him on the success of "Name the Man!"

Harold Grieve, art director for Marshall Neilan on "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" at the Goldwyn Studios, is only twenty-three years old. He was associate art director on "The Thief of Bagdad" and art director on "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall". Before that he was with Rex Ingram.

Miss Martha Lindquist, motion picture editor of the Svenska Dagbladet, Stockholm, Sweden's largest newspaper, has arrived in Hollywood to make a study of film conditions. Her first call was on Victor Seastrom whom she knew in her native land.

Marshall Neilan has engaged Joseph J. Dowling to play the role of the Priest in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" which is being filmed at the Goldwyn Studios.

A recent high wind in Hollywood blew down a tree in front of Carmel Myers' home. Her automobile, from which she had just alighted, was pinned under it. The story is true, as Carmel says no press agent could blow that hard.

Stallings To Barker

Charles Stallings, production manager for the Fred Niblo unit of the Louis B. Mayer forces, has been temporarily transferred to the Reginald Barker Company to occupy the same post in the making of "Broken Barriers". Upon the completion of the picture he will return to the Niblo Studio to prepare for the filming of that director's next picture "Judgment," a C. Gardner Sullivan story adapted for the screen by Bess Meredyth.

Finis Fox, in the first of his new series of four feature productions which he will soon start to produce at the Hollywood Studios will feature Gloria Grey, one of the new Wampas Baby Stars, in the role of society girl. The story, the title of which has not yet been announced, will be an original one by Fox.

Mae Murray has returned to Hollywood following a short vacation at Coronado. Miss Murray and her director-husband Robert Z. Leonard will start work immediately on the editor of "Mademoiselle Midnight," her newest picture for Metro release.

Edward Connelly, veteran Metro character actor, is at Palm Springs, California, for a rest following the completion of his work in "The Goldfish" with Constance Talmadge. Upon his return to Hollywood Mr. Connelly will have an important role in a forthcoming production for Metro release.

Monty Banks Returns

Feeling that his first feature under the Grand-Asher banner, "Racing Luck" is a success, the star, Monty Banks, returned from the East this week with the announcement that he will make more along comedy melodrama lines.

R. William Neill, Grand-Asher producer, is a muchly-traveled man. He spent a number of years in India, covered much of the Orient and Malaysia and recently made a couple of pictures in Italy. He is a cosmopolite and can be at home in any region of the world.

Extensive improvements and additional stage space is being planned for the Grand-Asher studio in Hollywood according to President Samuel V. Grand.

The first completed reel of Grand-Asher Laugh-o-Graphs is said to be a very humorous subject and Director George Kern is personally supervising the cutting and titling. He is also preparing for the second reel of these comedy short subjects.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Thy Name Is Woman."—Metro, Lyric, New York

Don Allen, Evening World:—"'Thy Name Is Woman' the Fred Niblo production that opened at the Lyric last night goes down on our list of good things in the cinema art. Truly it is a photoplay well worth going miles to see. Without any pageantry, million dollar sets and howling mob scenes or other splendor Niblo with the assistance of a powerful cast that is headed by Ramon Novarro and Barbara La Marr has produced here one of the greatest pictures of the season."

Times:—"Pictorially, this film is beautiful. You have romantic smuggling, good-looking soldiers, captivating girls and a wonderfully appealing locale."

Louella O. Parsons, American:—"Fred Niblo has what some inspired soul once termed a motion picture eye. In 'Thy Name Is Woman' Niblo has built a pretentious drama. Sets like his have not been duplicated since 'Rosita.' It set us all hunting for adjectives."

Robert Sherwood, Herald:—"Ramon Novarro is magnificent. He plays with a force that is undeniably potent. Barbara La Marr who plays opposite him, gives a performance that is head and shoulders above anything else that she has done before."

Harrriette Underhill, Tribune:—"Fred Niblo has done a remarkably splendid piece of work in putting Karl Schoenherr's play on the screen. It should be listed with the very few fine productions of the year."

Journal:—"There is all the romance, lure and glamor of Spanish atmosphere in this photoplay which is a nine reel fight of emotions. One's interest is well sustained."

Telegram:—"The film at the Lyric is notably a beautiful one. Mr. Niblo gives us superb pictures of life in the lonely places in the Pyrenees alternating with glimpses of crowded life in the barracks and among the Spanish army officers."

Telegraph: — "The acting of Barbara La Marr, Ramon Novarro and William V. Mong held the audience in a vise-like grip. There can be no question of the excellence of the photography and the direction—and the acting throughout of the three principals named."

"The Yankee Consul,"—Associated Ex., California, Los Angeles

Daily News:—"As a clever and clean comedian MacLean ranks in a class by himself — many thrilling moments make this sure-fire comedy."

Express: — Uproarious laughter greets Douglas MacLean at the California Theatre. Not a gloomy moment. Clean comedy is as scarce as 50 caret diamonds. Therefore when they succeed in such a gem as this farce, pessimists must desist from croaking."

Times:—"MacLean again bangs the bell. If anybody has the glooms, I know where a good antidote, cure and zip-em-up stimulant can be found. It is 'The Yankee Counsel' in which Douglas MacLean is the star. If anything is funnier than MacLean or 'The Yankee Consul,' then I don't know what it is."

Record:—"Whoever thought a musical comedy could become such a spirited and amusing screen farce? It's exquisitely funny. 'The Yankee Consul' will be remembered as one of the fastest and best farces of the year."

Herald:—"If you want your pictures clean, wholesome and of the laugh-a-minute kind, see Douglas MacLean's film version of 'The Yankee Consul.' The screen needs more features like it."

Examiner—"The situations are handpicked, and the very last drop of comedy sticks out of them onto the celluloid. MacLean has made a much better piece of entertainment in the screen version than the play possessed on the stage."

"Thy Name Is Woman."—Metro, Capitol, Detroit

Times:—"There hasn't been a whole lot of press agent's splurge about the picture at the Capitol but frankly we were surprised. A good story now-a-days is a rarity and here is a real story. It keeps moving. Don't miss the Capitol on your movie rounds this week."

Free Press:—"The whole thing is beautifully filmed and marked by extraordinary attention to detail. Majestic and wonderful are the settings. It has received a highly original treatment."

"Maytime."—Preferred, Karlton, Philadelphia

Public Ledger:—"A sad little story of broken romance, lightened here and there with comedy relief. The picture is interpreted by a good cast."

Inquirer:—"Retains the original elements of sentiment and interest. Ethel Shannon in the dual role of the grandmother and the granddaughter, is well cast. The cast is exceptionally good."

Record—"Ethel Shannon is charming and appealing in the leading feminine role and Harrison Ford plays the opposite role effectively."

North American:—"Enacted in beautiful and costly settings and costumes. The story is a very charming one."

"Buccaneers."—Pathe, Strand, New York

Times:—"'Daughters of Today' is followed by one of those splendid 'Our Gang' comedies, which acts as a revivier. This comedy is called 'Buccaneers' and it is indeed funny."

Tribune:—"The comedy is one of the 'Our Gang' series made by Hal Roach. It is very amusing."

Herald:—"An 'Our Gang' comedy called 'Buccaneers,' which was also on the Strand program, was joyfully and hilariously received."

Morning Telegraph: — "The comedy hit of the program was one of Hal Roach's 'Our Gang' kid comedies, entitled 'Buccaneers,' which had no trouble winning the applause of the Strand audience."

Telegraph and Mail—"'The Buccaneers' also invaded the Mark Strand Theatre yesterday and captured the hearts of the audiences."

"The National Rash."—Pathe. Capitol, New York

Herald:—"In addition to this notable production the Capitol bill offers even more than its usual quota of pleasant entertainment. There is an excellent new sport picture, prepared under the able guidance of Grantland Rice."

Morning World:—"'A Grantland Rice golf comic called 'The National Rash' is one of the most legitimately amusing things of its kind we have ever seen. This sort of picture will take the short comedy out of the fat-head class."

Telegraph:—"'The National Rash,' a Grantland Rice Sportlight, is one of the bright bits of the bill."

"Fools Highway."—Universal, Atlantic Gardens, New York

Times:—"'Fools Highway' is an entertaining film and one which clings to the idea of telling a story. Pat O'Malley is excellent as the famous fighter, and Mary Philbin, with plenty of frizzy hair, is an efficient heroine. It is effectively furnished with scenes of old New York."

Telegram and Mail:—"The picture teems with vigor and animation, and has succeeded in bringing back the old Bowery in all its old activities. There are other marvels in this Bowery film, and one of the greatest is the beauty and charm of Miss Philbin as 'Mamie Rose.'"

American—"Mary Philbin as 'Mamie Rose,' the orphan seamstress, is a delight. I wonder if she enjoys her work as much as she seems to. Her eyes shine with the joy of living and she fairly radiates the spirit of youth. Pat O'Malley gives her more than adequate support as 'Mike Kildare.'"

Morning Telegraph:—"'Fools Highway' is one of those rare pictorial treats that once in a long while slip into town and reveal an almost perfect coordination of acting, continuity, directorial and title writing talents. There is nothing very pretentious about it, just a simple love story of a Bowery tough and a little seamstress, that has the valuable audience assets of the suggestion of a tear mingled with the smiles."

Herald:—"The picture is well and carefully produced; the direction is good and the acting excellent. In this latter respect Mary Philbin as 'Mamie Rose' is to be particularly commended."

Journal: — "Scintillating substitles, Mary Philbin with an unusualy appealing sweetness, Pat O'Malley and his gang of gunmen, make the photoplay amazingly good entertainment. I liked the plot, I liked the acting, and I liked the whole thing."

"The White Sister,"—Metro, Duval, Jacksonville

Times-Union: — "A wonderful picture superbly acted. What's the use of trying to dig up more adjectives, for none of them will satisfy in trying to review 'The White Sister.'"

Journal:—"'The White Sister' is a rosary, each pearl a perfect one and at the end a cross. It is an inspiration. Miss Gish is a finished actress and nothing she has done surpasses the artistry of her characterization in this play."

Short Subjects and Serials

Short Subject Producing Very Intensified

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, Inc., declares that the producers of comedy subjects for Educational distribution have just about reached their peak of output at Fine Arts Studios, where Mermaid, Hamilton, Cameo and Juvenile comedies are made.

Lige Conley has just finished "There He Goes," a two-reel Mermaid, and the opening scenes on the first of the series of three Jack White Specials. "Midnight Blues" also with Lige Conley, are well under way. Lee Moran's comedy is nearing completion.

Lloyd Hamilton is finishing "Killing Time," the fourth of his present series of Educational-Hamilton comedies, with Ruth Hiatt.

The Juvenile unit is making a picture featuring Johnnie Fox, Jr. In his support appear Tom Hicks, Jack McHugh Roger Keene, Peggy Cartwright Doreen Turner and others.

The quota of Cameo comedies is rapidly nearing completion with Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance and Sid Smith.

"Trailing Trouble" Has Been Completed

"Trailing Trouble," which originally bore the title of "The Jazz Kid," has been completed by director Al. Herman. Buddy Messinger is the star of this newest Century Comedy to reach Universal.

Several days later Herman commenced "shooting" on another Buddy Messinger two-reeler, and in it the same cast that appeared in "Trailing Trouble" will be used. This includes "Spec" O'Donnell, Martha Sleeper and Arthur Trimble.

The working title of the new vehicle is "Playing Hooky" by Marrous Kandel, who is the author of two other Buddy Messinger stories, and negotiations are under way to add Gertie Messinger, Buddy's sister, Ella McKenzie, Dorothy Dwan, Joe Bonner, Harry Pringle and James Berry to the cast.

Two Reel Comedy Plays A Return Date

After being featured over a full length production week of February 10th at the California Theatre in San Francisco, Will Roger's "Two Wagons — Both Covered," was held over the second week.

Pathe officials declare that this is the first time in the history of that theatre that a short subject has ever been shown for more than one week.

"Poodles" Hanneford in his two reel Education Tuxedo Comedy, "The New Sheriff."

Sennett's "Scarem Much" Has Travesty Title

Pathe announces that just at a time when the widespread showing of "Scaramouche" is arousing universal interest, it will release on March 23, a Mack Sennett Comedy the title, of which "Scarem Much" is suggestive of that of the big screen special.

Fox Educational Exposes Gamblers At Sea

THAT FOX Educationals are diversified is said to be proved by the fact that "A New England Farm," just released, is to be succeeded by "Slippery Decks."

The latter one is now being cut and edited and the methods employed by professional gamblers on the cross-Atlantic liners to cheat the amateur card players are exposed in this one-reeler.

Newsboys Help to Launch A Pathe Serial

WITH a special performance and invitations to newsboys and carriers of the Washington Star, Post, Times Herald and News, Sidney Lust of the Leader theater, Washington, D. C., launched the Pathe serial, "The Way of a Man."

The special showing was held on Saturday morning, February 16th, and was attended by hundreds of the capital's newsies.

In addition to the opening episode of "The Way of a Man," Lust arranged a bill comprising special musical numbers, in which the newsboys joined, and Harold Lloyd and Buster Keaton comedy offerings.

A special march composed by W. J. Stannard, leader of the United States army band, was played by the Leader orchestra and every boy was presented with an Eskimo pie, donated by the Carly Ice Cream company.

Pathe News Cameraman Here From Paris

George Ercole, staff cameraman of Pathe News with headquarters in Paris, arrived in New York this week for a series of conferences with Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Pathe News.

While here Mr. Ercole will study the methods of the American news cameraman with a view to improving the service of the Pathe News field force in foreign countries.

The reorganization of the Pathe News staff abroad will be another task to be undertaken by Editor Cohen and Cameramen Ercole.

Ercole has been attached to the Pathe News foreign staff for over five years. Some of his most distinctive acts abroad for Pathe News have been seen in the views covering such events as the German Revolution, the Turkish hostilities against the Greeks, the Smyrna fire disaster, the Ruhr Rebellion and the Flight over Egypt.

"Pretty Plungers" Title For "Movie Queen"

"Pretty Plungers," Noel Smith's latest comedy for Century, the tentative title of which was "The Movie Queen," has been finished. Century Follies Girls are featured.

Bartine Burkett, Al. Alt and Hilliard Carr play the leading comedy roles with Joe Bonner and "Big Bill" Blaisdell also in the cast. Universal intends releasing it in the early Spring.

Hal Roach presents Stan Laurel in this two-reel Pathe comedy, "Zeb Vs. Paprika."

Pathe Wins Five in Six From Indiana Indorsers

MOTION PICTURE BULLETIN, published in February by the Indiana Indorser of Photopalys, accords Pathe comedies a tribute.

Of the six subjects mentioned under "Class A" Comedies, five are Pathe releases.

These five follow: "Roughest Africa," starring Stan Laurel; "No Noise," featuring the "Our Gang" players; "Uncensored Movies," presenting Will Rogers in burlesque characterizations of William S. Hart, Tom Mix and Rudolph Valentino; "Five Orphans of the Storm," and "The Dark Horse," from the Aesop Film Fable Series.

Another Fox Imperial Comedy Is Started

Lew Seiler has started work at the William Fox West Coast studios, on a new comedy, as yet without a title, starring the Chimpanzee trio, Max, Moritz and Pep.

These three "stars" are said to be working amiably enough together because they have appeared in a score of pictures and are the best of friends.

Third Nigh Minature Is Completed

Pathe exchanges will soon receive the third Nigh Miniature entitled "The Guest."

The scenes are located in the Ukraine, Russia, and the film is now in the process of cutting and titling. Beryl Mercer, who appeared in the Broadway play Outward Bound, is featured in "The Guest," which deals with the disappearance and sudden return of a long lost son of a Russian inn-keeper from America to his old home.

Members of the Hal Roach Zoo enact this one-reel comedy, "Love's Reward," for Pathe.

Scenes from "Leatherstocking" the new Pathe serial adapted from James Fenimore Cooper's tales with Edna Murphy and Harold Miller.

Pathe Has Record Release Week

Twelve Subjects Continued In Eighteen Reels Are Offered for Week of March 23

SOME Pathe officials declare that their program output for March 23, exceeds in volume any of their previous week's offerings in short subjects.

Eighteen reels embracing twelve distinct subjects are listed. The first episodes of the new serial, "Leatherstocking," and the closing episode of "The Way of a Man" serial, also the regular Pathe Review, two Pathe News reels and Topics of the Day, help augment this banner week for Pathe Exchanges.

In addition there is a "Spat Family" offering, "Hunters Bold;" a Mack Sennett Comedy, "Scarem Much;" the seventh of the "Chronicles of America" series, titled "Wolfe and Montcalm;" one of Grantland Rice's "Sportlights," "Fields of Glory," an Aesop Fable, "From Rags to Riches and Back Again," and a Charles Chase comedy vehicle, "Don't Forget."

"Leatherstocking" is announced as the second serial production to be launched under the Pathe policy of "greater and better serials." It is based on James Fenimore Cooper's "Leatherstocking Tales" and presents Harold Miller and Edna Murphy in the featured roles. Lillian Hall, Whitehorse, David Dunbar, Aline Goodwin, Frank Lackteen, and James Pierce appear in the support.

In "Hunters Bold" the "Spat" trio take up the rod and gun as a means of diversion with disastrous results to their own feelings.

"Scarem Much," a two-reel Mack Sennett Comedy, presents Madeline Hurlock, Kalla Pasha, Gorge Cooper and Jack Cooper in a farce comedy romance.

In "Don't Forget" Charley Chase plays the role of a forgetful young man whose affliction proves a serious embarrassment on the morning of his wedding.

"Fields of Glory" presents a variety of action shots from the different fields of sport.

"Wolfe and Montcalm" deals with the historic struggle of the British and the French for supremacy on the North American continent.

Gertrude Short In All "Telephone Girl's"

Gertrude Short is being retained by F.B.O. for the entire "Telephone Girl" series, six episodes of which have been completed at the F.B.O. Hollywood studios.

Miss Short appeared several months ago as a comedienne in "The Gold Diggers" and her current engagement quickly followed.

Under the direction of Mal St. Clair, she plays the role of Sadie as a foil for Alberta Vaughn, who appears as Gladys Murgatroyd the switchboard queen.

Mal St. Clair has begun work on the seventh episode of F.B.O.'s "Telephone Girl" series, "For the Love of Mike."

There will be twelve episodes of two reels each in the first series.

Robert Bruce Completes Four Before Tour

Before leaving for his tour of the western branches of the Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., Robert C. Bruce completed cutting and titling the last four of his Wilderness Tales of the 1924 series, photographed last summer and fall.

They are "The Trader Keeps Moving," "Just Waiting," "The Ex-Bartender Retires" and "The Farewell."

As with the previous pictures in the series, each of the one reel subjects contains a complete story. Two of the last four are dramatic in nature, while the others are in a more humorous vein.

"Turn To The Left" Is Sennett Travesty

Pathe's production schedule is keeping the Sennett Studios at high speed. One of the companies is finishing camera work on a screen parody of the big special, "Turn to the Right."

The comedy, titled "Turn to the Left," is being directed by Del Lord and presents Natalie Kingston and Marceline Day in feature roles.

At Santa Monica the Harry Langdon company is engaged on a new two-reel comedy in which the Sennett Bathing Girls play a prominent part directed by Roy Del Ruth.

Two More "Sportlights" Completed for Pathe.

In the Grantland Rice's series of "Sportlights" for Pathe, two more have been completed. The first, "The Swift and Strong," embodies a variety of scenes, showing how speed and strength enter into the different fields of sport. Coming Olympic contestants are shown in action.

The second "Sportlight," "Sun and Snow," contrasts summer and winter sports as engaged in at such famous resorts as Miami, Fla., and Lake Placid, N. Y.

Estelle Taylor Signs For "Tiger Love"

Estelle Taylor has been signed by Paramount to play one of the two featured roles in George Melford's forthcoming production, "Tiger Love," according to an announcement from Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Antonio Moreno and Miss Taylor will be co-featured in this adaptation by Madge Tyrone of Manuel Penella's Spanish opera, "The Wildcat."

Miss Taylor is a graduate of the Sargent Dramatic School and was formerly featured in Fox pictures.

Production work on "Tiger Love" will begin March 10 at Paramount's West Coast studio.

"Telephone Girl" Honors Ashland, Kentucky

F. B. O. has arranged to present the world premiere of the "Telephone Girl Series" at Ashland, Kentucky, a town of less than 15,000 Population.

This is in response to a long petition signed by several hundred names of Ashland citizens who are proud of home tal ent.

Alberta Vaughn, the star of the series, was born there in 1906 and the home office of F. B. O. is accordingly making all preparations for the premiere of the Witwer series.

New "Plastigrams" Are Widely Booked

First run houses are keenly interested in the novelty of the new Ives-Leventhal "Plastigrams," the "Third Dimension Movie," scoring to Educational.

They report that the majority of the Paramount houses, consisting of 130 theatres have already contracted for this subject and many have played it. Among the representative houses included in this booking are the Rivoli and Rialto, New York, Fenway Theatre, Boston; McVicker's, Chicago; the Missouri, St. Louis, and the Palace at Dallas, Texas.

The Stanley Circuit of Philadelphia has booked the subject for showing in thirty houses. The Rowland & Clark circuit of Pittsburg will show it over their circuit of twelve theatres; the A. H. Blank circuits in Omaha and Des Moines have contracted for eleven houses, and the Capitol, Adams and Madison, of the Kunsky houses in Detroit will also play them at an early date.

Century Changes Titles on Two Comedies

"Stranded" has been changed to "Taxi, Taxi" and "The Jazz Boy" has been changed to "Trailing Trouble" by Century Comedies, releasing through Universal

The first features Harry McCoy supported by Al Alt and Hilliard Kerr while the second features Eddy Messinger, who, after finishing "Playing Hookey" was loaned to Universal for a role in "Relativity."

Al Alt and Hilliard Kerr of "Stranded" have both been engaged for a longer term contract by Julius and Abe Stern of Century.

Universal declares that Army forts and Navy stations throughout the country are showing and have been showing Century Comedies and that Uncle Sam's boys demand them.

Another one of Indian Frontier series, "The Mandan's Oath," distributed by Pathe.

Star Attends Showing When "Woman to Woman" is Run

Betty Compson, star of "Woman to Woman," saw that finished production for the first time recently when it was shown at the Fairfax theatre, Miami, Florida. Miss Compson was at Miami Beach on location for a new picture, and the management of the Fairfax obtained "Woman to Woman" for showing before any other theatre in the South.

Miss Compson, her supporting company, and friends were then invited to see the picture, and, when she accepted the unusual event was broadcast in the theatre's advertising. Miss Compson and her party occupied a box, and the star received an ovation.

Abramson Directs Scene for "Snapshots"

Ivan Abramson who is directing a Chadwick production at the Tec-Art Studios with a cast including Lionel Barrymore, Sigrid Holmquist, Dagmar Godowsky, Hugh Thompson and others took a little time to appear in a scene for "Screen Snapshots", C. B. C.'s. "Fan Magazine of the Screen."

All Short Subjects From Educational Exchange

WHEN SAXE'S new two million dollar theater, the Wisconsin, in Milwaukee, opens the latter part of this month, every Short Subject on the entire opening week's bill will be from the Educational program.

Mr. Weisfeldt, manager of the theater, selected "Plastigrams," Eduactional's novelty reel, as part of the program of the opening day

Second Chapter Finished Of "Days Of '49"

Ben Wilson has sent the second chapter of the Arrow Serial, "Days of '49" into the home office and the officials declare that it moves fast and is full of startling action.

In the second chapter the wagon train chased by the Indians ran away and is said to have smashed two cameras and three of the cameraman's ribs and that the scene was thus taken in such a manner that it appears as if the wagons were coming right out of the screen over the orchestra.

The California Historical Society is said to be deeply interested in this Arrow serial, as the events portrayed in 1847-'48-'49 marked a crucial period in the history of that state.

The "Capitulation of Cahuenga," upon the surrender of Governor General Pio Pico to General Fremont, U.S.A. by which California was secured for the U.S.A. was said to have been filmed upon the exact spot where the original was signed.

New Andy Gump Comedies From Universal

Erle C. Kenton, Mack Sennet director, has been engaged by Sam Van Ronkle to direct the second installment of the "Gump" comedies which will start at Universal City in a short time.

Melville Brown, Phil Dunham and the director are working on the stories. Joe Murphy continues as Andy Gump, Fay Tincher as Min and Jackie Morgan as Chester.

Six two-reelers will be made, the first to be "Andy's Vacation."

Buddy Messinger Making Sixteenth Comedy

Buddy Messinger is at work on his sixteenth Century Comedy, "The Jazz Boy," under the direction of Al. Herman, who not so long ago finished his thirtieth comedy for Century.

Martha Sleeper, Messinger's new leading lady, "Spec" O'Donnell, champion freckle-faced kid and Harry Pringle are members of the cast.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Midnight Blues"
(Educational—Two Reels)

HERE is one of the most interesting two-reelers turned out in a long, long time. It is chock full of real comedy of a variety that is different than usually seen in these short subjects The comedy is not entirely up to Lige Conley, who, however proves himself an apt and versatile comedian. Every one in the cast adds to the humor of the many mirth-provoking situations.

The fun revolves principally around the factory where halloween goods are manufactured and where Lige Conley is detailed with the new colored night watchman to take stock. Conley's rival for the girl's hand is the factory foreman and he conceives the idea of animating the different subjects and scaring Conley to death. The action is fast and furious and culminates when Lige, disguised as an ostrich sits on some real ostrich eggs only to have them hatch and the young birds follow him as they would a real mother. This one is goods for laughs in any kind of house.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Don't Forget"
(Pathe—One Reel)

FORGETFUL persons are always funny to the majority and the comedian, Charley Chase, can forget more things than many other persons could even think of.

There are many laughs in this single reel and absolutely without resort to trick photography or slapstick.

When our hero tries to assemble a meal together in a cafeteria without success and then finds that his prospective meal is in various chair-arms throughout the restaurant he finally quits in disgust.

His crowning achievement of forgetfulness is when he forgets to be at the church at his own wedding and then at the eleventh hour endeavors to remember the ring and the license at the same time.

Very amusing throughout.—TOMHAM.

"The Young Tenderfoot"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

BUDDY MESSINGER is featured in this one. He is sent west with a bodyguard for misbehaving and on the way they meet and capture Terrible Pete, the bad man of the west. He escapes the Sheriff next day and runs across Buddy. Then starts some real fast action with Buddy using all the tricks of the city youth to evade the wrath of the bandit.

Failing to avenge himself upon Buddy, the bad man kidnaps Sadie, Buddy's sweetheart, and carries her off into the hills. Buddy follows and after a fierce fight knocks out the bandit, captures him and becomes a real hero. The story is a good one with lots of action and good comedy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Nobody to Love"
(Universal—One Reel)

NED AND BROWN are former box-car buddies. Brown persuades Ned of the advisability of marriage and suggests that he flirt with the first good-looker he sees. Ned does so and is pinched, his fine being paid by Brown. The latter invites Ned to his house and Mrs. Brown recognizes Ned as the masher. She screams and Ned is again arrested and fined. A third arrest follows with the same result. There are many humorous complications with Neely Edwards and Bert Roach showing to good advantage.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Century's second comedy for March release through Uniiversal stars Pal the canine comedian in "That Oriental Game."

"Wolfe and Montcalm"
(Pathe—Three Reels)

BASED on a series of historical incidents connected with the ousting of France by England in America this "Chronicle Of America" maintains the standard set by the previous offerings of Yale University Press.

It is pictorially beautiful and the climax is the taking of Quebec by the English for its American Colonists and the holding of it in the face of a long cold winter siege by the French and Indian allies.

The retreat of the French comes in the Spring when the English fleet beat the expected French Navy up the St. Lawrence.

This is a very good offering from an entertainment standpoint as well as educational and of course has great exploitation possibilities through the schools.—TOMHAM

OUTDOOR stuff features this Spat Family comedy and there are a great many laughs registered.

Fish hook in the seat of the trousers and overturned canoes sound sort of like old business for laughs but the trio put it over in a highly amusing manner.

They go hunting, and all manage to shoot each other a few times, but not seriously enough to spoil the comedy.

The "pet-pole-cat" and the trained bear gave great support to the Spat Family and helped them earn sufficient laughs to carry this comedy by in good shape.—TOMHAM.

INCORPORATED in this reel are two subjects which are deserving of special mention. First the "shooting" of automobile accidents which was accomplished with the aid of the New York City Police and the M. P. T. O. A. The scenes were taken at 42 street, N. Y. probably the busiest thoroughfare in the world; several "accidents" are so well-staged that they appear to be the real thing. This is the first of a series which are being used as safety first propaganda by the Police Department and the M. P. T. O. A.

The second deals with the filming of the exterior and the interior of Mt. Vesuvius from an aeroplane. This feat, requiring considerable courage and daring was performed by Umberto Romagnoli, International News cameraman and Commandante Coppola of the Italian Navy, who piloted the machine; they circled around the inside walls of the crater for a period of ten minutes braving death from the fire and poisonous gasses which are constantly belching forth from the mouth of the volcano, affording, for the first time, a view of the interior.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Scarem Much"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

KALLA Pasha is back with Mack Sennett again and is the vicious father of the girl who is ardently pursued by two persistent suitors and heavily besieged by a dozen other youths.

The old man gives them a dirty look and then calmly throws them out of a second story window. This is a fast moving comedy of action and well worth a place on any screen.

Madeline Hurlock, George Cooper and Jack Cooper are supported by a bevy of pretty gymnasium girls and the laughs are nicely in sequence throughout.—TOMHAM

"Fields of Glory"
(Pathe—One Reel)

SUMMER athletics are near at hand and the current issue of Grantland Rice's Sportlight is topical enough to arouse general interest.

Tennis is featured more in this number although there are many thrilling polo activities shown. It is well worth while as a filler.—TOMHAM.

EASTERNERS will like "Out Where The West Begins," in this issue of the Review and Westerners will be proud of it. Other subjects in the "magazine" worth attention are "The Friction Fighters," a pictorial study of ball-bearings—what they are and how they are made; "Meet Mr. Pelican," views filmed on the cliffs of California; and "The Spanish Mountaineers," a Pathecolor presentation of odd spots in the Old World.—TOMHAM.

The Vagabond Trail

(Fox—4302 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS inconsequential story would have looked much better had it been burlesqued. By treating it seriously the sponsors have invited ridicule through making their central character one of those 100 per cent heroes — the type of character made famous in the dime novels. Such heroes can do no wrong. They always bob up at the crucial moment to mete out punishment to the bad men and to rescue the damsel in distress. Charles Jones, who stars here, is altogether too serious — and his seriousness helps in emphasizing the hokum. His work isn't a bit convincing as a result.

The picture bears every indication of being "plotted" as it went along. We have in the opening scene a group of tramps seated around a campfire discussing a certain Donnegan. Jones is Donnegan. When a couple of them start a brawl — the hero leaps off a cliff and throws the conquering bully for a loss.

The idea is so slight that even four reels are too much to give it expression. The villain's anger is aroused in being punished and at the proper time he shoves the hero from a box-car where he is rescued by the heroine who is conveniently traveling nearby. She and her father are striking out for the open space to recover their mining property. And when the camp is reached there is the villainous bully cheating at cards and another villain not playing fair with his sweetheart — who, lo and behold, is the girl who rescued the unconscious vagabond. The hero appoints himself her guardian — which provokes a moment or two of gun-play with the bad man.

The story is told at the end. It is summed up in a couple of captions. They tell of a youth who turned vagabond in searching for his brother who had run away thinking he had caused the other's death. Their relationship is established — the hero identifying himself as the villain's brother. A trite story this — one without a single redeeming highlight aside from some hectic action featuring honky-tonk incident. The players strive to appear sincere — but the plot is against them. It never gets anywhere.

THEME. Western melodrama of young vagabond who, while searching for his long-lost brother has a romance with girl who rescues him after he is attacked by villain. The latter proves to be the brother—and a reconciliation is effected.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The action. The exteriors. The efforts of players to be sincere. The fights between hero and villain.

DIRECTION. Has slight, inconsequential plot—and is unable to make headway with it. Never gets anywhere—so resorts to incident. Tells story in concluding scene. Should have treated it less seriously. Conventional treatment all the way.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title is alluring—and might interest patrons of westerns. If Jones is popular in your locality, play up his name.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses. Best suited with strong comedy or on double feature day.

SUMMARY. A weak western this—one which smacks of the old-time dime novel wherein the hero is of the unconquerable type. Plot never gets anywhere—and the idea is extremely slight. Hero and villain take punishment—without showing any marks. Played too seriously. A few fights carry action.

THE CAST

Donnegan ..... Charles Jones
Lord Nick ..... L. C. Shumway
Lou Macon ..... Marion Nixon

Other parts played by Virginia Warwick, Charles Coleman, Frank Nelson, George Reed, George Romaine and Harry Lonsdale.

By George Owen Baxter. Scenario by Doty Hobart. Directed by William Wellman.

SYNOPSIS: Youthful tramp, different from usual type, is determined to locate missing brother who he believes is tramp. Is thrown off freight train and picked up unconscious by girl who is traveling with her father on a westward journey. They are seeking to recover their share of a mine which is partly owned by girl's fiance. The latter is owner of honky-tonk and provokes fights with the hero. It is eventually established that they are brothers.

Love's Whirlpool

(Regal-Hodkinson—Six Reels)

IF it wasn't for several gaping inconsistencies, this crook melodrama would carry greater value — and it might be accepted by intelligent patrons as a picture which carried a meaning. Unfortunately events transpire too conveniently — and coincidence extends its long arm and destroys what might pass for logic if the situations were not stressed with melodramatic hokum. With all crook stories — there must be a note of redemption — but before it is expressed there is revealed a wild, harum-scarum story of a criminal's revenge. His motive is not very sound in carrying his hatred toward the oppressors of his weakling brother to such an extent.

The first gap arrives in the opening scene. It shows a couple of crooks (one of them the weak brother) relieving a visitor in a bank of his money. Certainly the author must know that every bank has uniformed attendants who would investigate their mysterious actions. When the banker refuses to help the boy and he is given a long term — the central character — a dyed-in-the-wool crook, plots vengeance. The coincidence enters with the subsequent scene. The hero, his criminal sweetheart, and the banker's daughter are passengers on a boat — which is wrecked. The crooks are headed for San Quentin to aid the brother to escape. They rescue the rich girl who suffers an injury to her head which causes her to lose her memory. Thus she is in their power — and they kidnap her and plot to blackmail her father.

Opening a clairvoyant parlor, the banker's servant, a believer in the spirit world, becomes an innocent party to their scheme. Eventually the banker is induced to attend the seances. The scheme of the crooks is to mulct him of his fortune and then return his daughter — dead. But the hero's sweetheart, conscience-stricken, refuses to carry on the ruse. She double-crosses him and returns the girl to her father. The crook escapes and plans to avenge himself for her treachery. But she effects his redemption by her devotion to him and the dead brother who was killed while escaping from prison. The final scene strives for a spiritual touch, but the overstressed action spoils it. It is a highly involved story — one running wild with incident — but the acting by Kirkwood is competent and convincing. It is packed with so much incident that there is no question of it registering as a fair box-office attraction.

THEME. Crook melodrama based upon criminal's vengeance toward banker responsible for sending brother to jail. Sweetheart's faith brings redemption.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The expose of certain tricks of the clairvoyants. The boat disaster. The convincing portrayal by James Kirkwood. The moment when crook is redeemed.

DIRECTION. Has permitted several inconsistencies which destroy logic. Builds plot to several conveniences. Keeps it moving—but gaps in story destroy suspense. Gets first rate results from cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a crook story of redemption, emphasizing the spiritual note. Mention Kirkwood and Lila Lee. Feature the expose of certain tricks of the clairvoyant—which will arouse interest.

DRAWING POWER. For downtown houses.

SUMMARY. A box-office picture here—for program houses. Not a well-knit story—and it releases several inconsistencies which destroy logic. Is well acted by leading players. Plenty of action, but no suspense.

THE CAST

Jim Reagan ..... James Kirkwood
Molly ..... Lila Lee
Larry ..... Robert Agnew
"Pinkey" Sellers ..... Mathew Betz
Richard Milton ..... Edward Martindel
A maid ..... Margaret Livingston
Nadine Milton ..... Madge Bellamy
"Parson" Monks ..... Joe Mills

By Elliot Clawson and Bruce Mitchell. Directed by Bruce Mitchell.

SYNOPSIS: Boy thief is given a long jail sentence for robbery and his brother plans to effect his escape. The latter is a hardened crook and he aids in rescuing a banker's daughter from death. The boy is killed while escaping and the brother plots vengeance. He will strike the banker through the daughter. She becomes a victim to a blackmailing scheme—but eventually the crook's sweetheart restores her to her father. The crook finds redemption.

A Society Scandal

(Paramount—Six Reels)

NOTHING has been overlooked toward making this picture suggestive of the atmosphere of smart society. The mechanics of production, the subtitles, settings, the lighting, costuming groupings and what not have been applied intelligently — but after the story has revolved around its spool, it doesn't leave a definite impression. Society dramas based upon the triangle have been ground through the movie mill so much that nothing is left to the imagination. The smart director will be inspired to treat them with subtle touches with an eye upon incorporating a substantial note of humor.

Allan Dwan has succeeded in doing away with many conventions — but with all his appreciation of what constitutes a good production — with all of his ironic humor directed against bank presidents, upright lawyers, newspapers which feature scandals — with everything in its place the picture does not soar above the artificial side of life.

There are two vital climaxes here — one featuring the playful wife being compromised — which results in her husband winning a divorce, the other featuring her punishing the lawyer who tore her reputation to shreds. She compromises him by making it appear to witnesses that he attacked her. That she is inspired through love for him seems unconvincing. Equally unconvincing is the lawyer's quick response to her charms on the very day he has made her a victim of scandal. The courtroom scene is dull — as most trial cases are. And there is too much time given up to summing up the evidence. But the plot progresses to its end — without many side excursions.

It brings Gloria Swanson back to the type of role which made her a Paramount star. A couple of recent departures into character studies brought forth a hidden emotional talen. Here she doesn't differ from any other actress capable of making a clothes-horse of herself. No one will forget "The Humming Bird" in a hurry. "A Society Scandal" on the other hand is of the moment — a picture to see while idling an hour away. Its appeal with feminine audiences is assured. Why not, with the female of the species proving herself more deadly than the male? Why not, with all the bizarre costumes worn by the star? Why not, with all the tone and quality of the production? The picture might have been treated more broadly after the fashion of the original, known on the stage as "The Laughing Lady." It is excellent of its kind — but it won't make screen history.

THEME. Eternal triangle featuring intimate society life with central figure a victim of scandal when husband sues for divorce. The lawyer for the plaintiff is involved and in due time she beats him at his own game.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The compromise of heroine and her antagonist. The gowns featured by star The authentic atmosphere. The climax. The good work by cast. The tone of the production. The titles.

DIRECTION. Has staged it against backgrounds which carry tone and quality and genuine atmosphere. Builds it to several dramatic climaxes. Sustains after story gets started. Smart incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up that star has another role in which she displays a bizarre wardrobe. Bill it as a dramatic triangle of smart society. Feature tone and quality of production.

DRAWING POWER. Star and title will draw anywhere.

SUMMARY. This picture while artificial is much closer to reality than the usual expose of life among the fast steppers in society. Carries dramatic values—after story gets under way. Is finely staged and well acted.

THE CAST

Marjorie Colbert	Gloria Swanson
Daniel Farr	Rod La Rocque
Harrison Peters	Ricardo Cortez
Hector Colbert	Allan Simpson
Mrs. Maturin Colbert	Mrs. Ida Waterman
Mrs. Hamilton Pennfield	Mrs. Thelma Converse
Mr. Schuyler Burr	Fraser Coalter
Mrs. Burr	Catherine Proctor
Mr. Hamilton Pennfield	Wilfred Donovan
Patricia DeVoe	Yvonn e Hughes

By Alfred Sutro. Adapted by Forest Halsey. Directed by Allan Dwan. Photographed by Hal Rosson.

SYNOPSIS: Society woman leaves her uninteresting husband for social outcast. Latter compromises her and the husband sues for divorce. His lawyer tears her reputation to shreds—and the husband wins the case. The divorced wife plans to avenge herself against the lawyer—and succeeds with the result that he is ruined. She afterwards makes a confession through her love for the attorney. He forgives and takes her in his arms.

Torment

(Maurice Tourneur-First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE Japenese earthquake comes into its own. It has been recognized as worthy of incorporation into a screen play and to Maurice Tourneur's credit be it said that he has worked it in quite realistically even if he has inserted some of the shots taken by the news reel men. The scene showing the crumbling of a couple of large buildings is excellently handled, although quite obviously register "sets". The views, however, will pass muster in most houses.

The plot of the picture has sufficient action in it to hold the interest, although it takes the spectator around the world, starting in Russia, jumping to America and then steaming, via a palatial yacht to Japan. The hard worked jewel stuff is used once more in this case—the much discussed Russian crown jewels being employed to advantage. Count Boris is endeavoring to sell them to get funds to aid the poor. He comes in contact with Jules Carstock, head of a band of international crooks. But the count has sent the jewels to Japan so the party goes over the Pacific to look at them

There are some real old meller scenes in the money vaults of the bank after the quake has sent the building toppling down upon the party, all of whom, of course, are saved. During these moments the religious talks of Count Boris, who is shot by one of the crooks, leads all the crooks to confess their real identities and then the Marines and Red Cross comes to the rescue and the orchestra can strike up "The Star Spangled Banner."

There is a thread of romance woven through the tale. It deals with the love of Hansen, one of the crooks, for Marie, the maid. Owen Moore and Bessie Love do quite well in these roles. The supporting cast has been well selected. Maude George is good as the tool of the chief crook. Jean Hersholt, Joseph Kilgour, Morgan Wallace and George Cooper have the other important roles.

THEME. A crook melodrama which "mellers" in Russia, America and Japan with the Jap earthquake as the background for much of the action involving the attempt to steal the Russian crown jewels.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The earthquake scenes. The conversion of the crooks by Count Boris after their several days' imprisonment in the ruins of the bank vaults. The acting of Owen Moore, Bessie Love and the rest of the cast.

DIRECTION. Maurice Tourneur has planted a punch in the latter reels through the use of the Japanese earthquake. He has succeeded in getting much realism into the crumbling of the sets. Has brought picture up to a fine climax which should go over with a bang in house having large orchestras to aid in working up the tension.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the fact in your ads that the Japanese quake is used as a background for this thrilling tale of an attempt to steal the famous Russian crown jewels. Might put over a tie-up with Marines in your lobby.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for houses whose audiences like thrills.

SUMMARY. A fairly entertaining crook drama that has the Japanese earthquake to help you exploit it. The story has suspense and a climax that at least is off the beaten path. The cast has been well chosen and each player acts his or her part well.

THE CAST

Hansen	Owen Moore
Marie	Bessie Love
Flint	Joseph Kilgour
Mrs. Flint	Maude George
Carstock	Morgan Wallace
Count Boris	Jean Hersholt
Fogarty	George Cooper

By William Dudley Pelley. Scenario by Fred Myton. Directed by Maurice Tourneur. Photographed by Arthur K. Todd

SPNOPSIS: Count Boris is forced into exile, when it becomes known that he has the crown jewels. Carstock, an international crook, attempts to get not only the jewels, but the million which he hopes to obtain by selling them to Flint, a millionaire. Carstock enlist the aid of Hansen and Fogarty, two other crooks, but the former falls in love with Marie, a maid. Vowing to lead a straight life, Hansen forgets his vow when the girl insists he give up "the one last job." He holds up the party in the banks and gets the jewels just as the quake arrives and entombs them. All are saved, except the count

Lilies of the Field

(First National—8510 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

As a play this production attempted to show the artificial side of fast society — of how certain idle women kept the wolf from the door through their philanderings with equally idle men. As a picture the risque note has been eliminated, though the theme is quite faithful to the original. It centers about a loving wife who is neglected by her husband — and when she is compromised, though innocent of any misconduct, her flirtatious mate wins a divorce and the custody of their child.

The plot then takes up the wife's burden to live a blameless life — and to regain her baby — and in the development the director passes up the opportunity to intensify his action by taking side excursions into scenes which have little bearing on the theme. The result is the picture is retarded in its tempo — and becomes long drawn out. The idea is old, but it could have been treated so that it might grip the imagination. But several unimportant scenes are held too long — and many sequences are presented that could be eliminated entirely — such as the funeral service of a dowdy creature who once traveled the primrose path — and the fashion display. There is too much concentration upon making this production a lavish one — but the scenes suggesting the atmosphere of smart society are overdressed, particularly the interiors representing the home of the millionaire social lion.

The husband wins his divorce in easy fashion. And the wife becomes dependent upon one of the "lilies" to find a job as a model. Meanwhile the husband drifts out to California in company with a new conquest — while the sophisticated man of wealth puts the divorced wife to the supreme test. She refuses his generous offer — which, of course, makes him satisfied that she is of noble character.

Corinne Griffith in this role succeeds in lending a wistful appeal — and she is gorgeously gowned — but the emotional demands are not grasped with sufficient feeling. The telegram announcing the baby's death offers her great moments for expressing the utmost in tragic despair. Her acting here is not soul-stirring — and Conway Tearle wears too much of a set expression to register the fact that he has a generous, noble heart. This telegram seems illogical to humanize the story, though it is presented to bring the plot to a climax as the despairing wife gives herself up to the generosity of her benefactor.

THEME. Domestic drama of life among the sophisticates of society—with the triangle situation developing a divorce—and the ultimate rectifying of a husband's wrong.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The tone of the picture. The gowns worn by star. The wistful appeal of Miss Griffith. The scene when she offers to accept admirer's generosity.

DIRECTION. Makes too much of unimportant detail and neglects his central plot at crucial moments. The result is the action is seldom gripping. Too many close-ups.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title will catch the eye. Play up star and supporting cast. Mention that it is an exposition of life among the high society steppers. Make a strong bid for feminine audiences. Link up with modiste shops.

DRAWING POWER. For high class houses with select clientell.

SUMMARY. This one is based on "little-child-shall-lead-them" formula—developing from a triangle situation. Carries too much detail and incident to compel strict attention —and plot does not always grip. Several scenes—the funeral service—for example—do not advance action. A tone and quality picture, however.

THE CAST

Mildred Harker	Corinne Griffith
Louis Willing	Conway Tearle
Doris	Alma Bennett
Vera	Sylvia Breamer
Mazie	Myrtle Stedman
Walter Harker	Craufurd Kent
Charles Lee	Charlie Murray
Gertrude	Phyllis Haver
Florette	Cissy Fitzgerald
Ted Conroy	Charles Gerrard
Mammy	Mammy Peters

By William Hurlbut. Directed by John Francis Dillon.

SYNOPSIS. Loving wife is neglected by husband who cultivates several amours. She is compromised by philanderer— and husband wins a divorce and the custody of the child. The wife becomes a model—but refuses to live a life of easy virtue. A wealthy admirer tests her character—and finds it above reproach. Eventually she wins back her child and marries her benefactor.

Stolen Secrets

(Universal—4742 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS mystery melodrama is cut from a familiar design — the central figure being a mysterious crook whose elusiveness arouses considerable worry with the city officials. It is the plan of such stories to sacrifice everything for suspense by cloaking the real identity of the character. But any steady patron — knowing that crime cannot be capitalized on the screen is certain to guess that he is a detective working secretly with the mayor whose police heads have fallen down on the job.

The director has made a fair-to-middlin' picture from the material — but the discerning spectator will guess the hero's identity because his burglaries are always confined to the homes and retreats of crooks. The director had a chance to make hectic melodrama from this plot — but he has wisely employed repression — and the picture takes on something of an authentic value. There is scarcely a moment of hokum in the incident — and it is only faintly registered in planting the romance.

The author was doubtless inspired by the attempt of Philadelphia's mayor to clean up the city. The mayor of his particular town is determined to clean up the underworld gang who dominate the political factions. So we are introduced in the very first scene to a gentleman crook who affects a dinner suit — and carries his "gat" in his coat pocket. He frustrates the real crooks at every turn. The incident is colorful without suggesting much suspense. It is when the romance is offered that the story loses some of its reality. The mayor's daughter places a blind ad in the papers seeking the hero's co-operation. The political ring has become too dominant.

An effort is made to build a surprise finish — but it doesn't carry much melodramatic sting. In the end the crook reveals his true identity — and the romance triumphs. For once Herbert Rawlinson employs repression — and he gives a first rate performance. For that matter none of the players step out of character. The director has trimmed his sequences of all unnecessary detail — and has given an adequate production. Patrons who don't demand too much in their entertainment will consider this a more likely bet than most pictures of its kind.

THEME. Mystery melodrama centering around mysterious figure who cleans up nest of crooks by posing as super-crook, though he is really a detective. Romance figures when mayor's daughter enlists his aid.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The atmosphere. The well chosen cast representing types who look like genuine. The incident never stressed to make hectic melodrama. The climax when crooks are captured.

DIRECTION. Builds story well so that interests is held. Not much suspense after it is indicated in subtitle that city officials might employ well known detective. Easy to guess identity of central character, but incident covers up obviousness. Cummings employs repression—and players are not out of character.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Use the old proverb—"It takes a thief to catch a thief." Spread a teaser campaign. Feature as interesting mystery melodrama. Might tie up with local politics, etc. Tie up with banks, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For all program houses.

SUMMARY. While the central idea of this picture is familiar and has been used a score of times, it is well handled —and treated with repression. The steady patron will guess the outcome of plot—but the incident will hold his attention. Competently played.

THE CAST

The "Eel" Miles Manning	Herbert Rawlinson
Cordelia Norton	Kathleen Myers
Brooks Waters	Henry Herbert
John Norton	Edwards Davis
Sterling Mann	Arthur Stuart Hull
Chapman Hoggins	William Conklin
Nat Fox	George Seigmann
Judge Wright	Alfred Allen
Arthur Welch	William A. Carroll
Smith	Edwin J. Brady
Police Chief	Joseph W. Girard

By Richard Goodall. Adapted by Raymond L. Schrock. Directed by Irving Cummings.

SYNOPSIS: Gentleman crook, puzzles the police through his mysterious actions. His elusiveness makes him a menace. He operates against crooks. When the mayor's daughter feels her father's job is in jeopardy she seeks his aid—to break up the political ring who boss the city. The crook discloss his identity at the opportune moment. He is a detective—and the guilty are caught. Romance triumphs

Regional News from Correspondents

Florida

MISS Mary Hays Davis has opened a theatre at La Belle. The new house will be known as the La Belle theatre.

Manager Jno. B. Carroll, of the Victory, Tampa, made quite a hit with a reel of "local" films he had made during the annual Gasparilla Carnival. He put the films on for a week, in addition to his regular program, and it helped out in making a record week.

The Washington Baseball Club are doing their spring training in Tampa now, and Jack Miller, representative of the International News, is shooting the stuff for that weekly.

Jack Frost, manager of the Strand, Tampa, has arranged a most beautiful stage setting. The scene represents a conservatory. Flowers and vines are run upon trellis work, and these are all illuminated by concealed lights, which show up the beauty of the setting, but do not interfere with the light upon the picture screen. The effect is most attractive.

The old Greeson theatre on Tampa street, Tampa, has been sold to N. W. Hensley & Co., for $100,000. The building is now being used as a garage. The new owners state they bought the property as an investment and have no special plans, as yet, for development of the property.

A. Juran, manager of the Casino theatres, in Ybor City and West Tampa, has sold out his show for each Saturday afternoon during the summer, to the Business Men's Booster Club. Each member of the Club is giving free tickets to the matinee to his customers, the number of tickets they receive being based upon their purchases.

The new Franklin theatre, which opened recently in Tampa, has real flowers growing in their lobby, and they look mighty good. The two stores, one on each side of the entrance, have been rented. Leiter, the Jeweler, has taken one, naming it "The Jewel Box." The other has been leased to Docum, Inc. for a haberdashery.

C. E. Lindall, a traveling exhibitor who makes Florida his home in the winter months, and Maine in the summer, is presenting special programs in the schools. He has reels showing the care of the teeth. Reels on exercise and health. These he sandwiches in between some Hart thrillers, and winds up his show with Chaplin comedies.

E. F. TARBELL, who for several years has been connected with the sales forces of various Chicago film exchanges, including Vitagraph, Fox and others, is now selling organs for Rudolph Wurlitzer & Company. Mr. Tarbell is making his headquarters at the local offices of this company.

Phil Dunas has been appointed manager of Universal's Minneapolis exchange and was installed in his new position this week by Divisional Manager Harris P. Wolfberg, who went to Minneapolis with him from Chicago. Mr. Dunas has recently been connected with First National's Chicago sales force.

Julius Lamm, for the past five years manager of Brunhild & Young theater chain, has resigned to become manager of Goodman & Harrison Circuit, which includes the Marshall Square, Illington, Victoria and Douglas theaters. Mr. Lamm, although a young man, is a veteran in the motion picture theater business, having been connected with it for eighteen years, starting when he was just out of short pants. He has gained the reputation of being one of the most efficient buyers and theater managers in the Chicago territory.

L. M. Rubens, who has earned the title of one of the motion picture industry's premier globe trotters, postcards his regards to all the boys from Cario, Egypt. He's a long way from home, but is missing a lot of snow.

McVickers theater added Sunday noon musical concerts to it program on March 9, with C. Sharpe Minor, visiting organist, at the console of McVickers grand organ. A large audience was on hand despite the bad weather, to hear Mr. Minor, who was assisted by Otto Muencke, pianist, and Bessie Kaplan, soprano. Mr. Minor is appearing at McVickers for a four week's engagement.

The Albany theater property, located at 3311-23 Montrose, containing a 300-seat motion picture house and six stores has been sold by Harry E. Gastwirth to Berkson & Passman, for $50,000, subject to $30,000, according to Kaplan & Company, who represented both parties in the transaction.

The Pastime theater on Madison street, has been taken over by C. E. Beck, who operates the Castle, Rose and Alcazar theaters.

H. B. Dukes, who was for some time connected with Ascher Brothers as assistant manager of the Roosevelt theater and other houses, has been made assistant manager of the National Screen Service's Chicago office.

Divisional Manager Wolfberg of Universal, who has been personally handling the affairs at the Chicago exchange, pending the appointment of a new local manager, has added Jack Hays, formerly with Paramount at Dallas, to the local staff as publicity and exploitation manager. A new recruit to the sales staff is Theodore Stover, who will travel southern Illinois.

Bruce Fowler, director of McVickers, accompanied by H. Leopold Spitalny, director of music and production, and Ed Olmstead, McVicker's publicity representative, were all in New York last week, where they represented Chicago and McVicker's theater at the annual Paramount ball at the Astor Hotel.

The Hodkinson exchange has moved into larger quarters and now occupies the second story of the building at 728 South Wabash avenue, in which they had been located for some time. Under District Manager Cecil Maberry and Local Manager Harry Lorch, business has been increasing rapi and additional office and vault space was needed to handle it.

I. R. Lesserman, who has been visiting relatives in Florida for some weeks, is back in Chicago and shows the benefit of his sojourn in the south.

St. Louis

ORGANIZATION of the William Goldman Theatres Company was completed on Saturday, March 8, with the selection of David Sommers and W. Frank Carter to head the corporation. A deed conveying the property on the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Morgan street to William Goldman has been executed and work of clearing the site for the new $1,000,000 St. Louis theatre is now under way. Goldman has set Labor Day as the date for his grand opening and the general contractors the Selden Brick Construction Company are to be paid a bonus for having the show house ready on that date. Goldman, former managing director of the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, owners of the Missouri theatre, and at present owner of the Kings and Queens theatres, will be managing director of the new theatre.

It was originally intended to make the new house of 3000 seats, but the city plans for the widening of Morgan street to a 100-foot thoroughfare has resulted in a change of the plans by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, and it will contain 4000 seats on the first floor and balcony. The new theatre will become the St. Louis first run house for the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan productions.

W. A. Halley, architect of Warren, Ark., is preparing plans for the Pastime theatre, Warren. It will cost approximately $20,000.

Word received from North Topeka, Kas., is that the Princess theatre, 834 North Kansas avenue, is to be remodeled by its owners, Elmer Myers and H. Gatski. An entirely new floor will be laid, new lighting fixtures installed and improvements made to the stage.

Harry Rathner, representative for Sol Lesser was a recent visitor, calling at the St. Louis office of First National.

The Majestic theatre, Oren, Mo., has been purchased by S. M. Robinson from A. J. Matthews & Company. Holly A. Robinson will manage the theatre.

W. C. Sears of Booneville, Mo., has purchased the theatres of Mrs. Brent Peters in Tipton and Hunceton, Mo.

A. E. Atkins of Elksville, Ill., plans to erect a $35,000 theatre in that city, plans for which have been prepared by R. Z. Gill, architect, of Murphysboro, Ill. Construction will get under way shortly.

The dinner-dance that G. E. McKean, local Fox manager gave for his office organization at Hotel Melbourne on Monday evening, March 3 was attended by forty-two persons. As they say in the society columns a good time was had by all.

Floyd Lewis, district manager for Associated Exhibitors is spending a few days in St. Louis.

On Saturday, March 8, the sales and office organization of F. B. O. here surprised their boss with a birthday dinner which was staged in the company's office on Olive street. Tom McKean, the manager, who was thirty-two years of age on that date, was forced to leave the office for a short time to discuss a business deal with a local exhibitor and upon his return found the surprise dinner waiting for him.

The Astor theatre on Broadway near Market street held its grand opening on Saturday, March 8. The local film colony was well represented at the festivities. The Astor was formerly known as the Variety and was recently taken over by Messrs. Goldman and Leventhal, owners of the Rainbow theatre. They decided to remodel and decorate the house and change its name.

H. M. Fort of Moberly, Mo., opened his new Rialto theatre on Wednesday evening, March 12 with Judgment of the Storm as the feature attraction. The house seats 856 persons.

Kansas City

THE Apollo theatre, Kansas City, in adopting a first run policy for a suburban house this week, has set a precedent which may bring about a great change in the industry in Kansas City, according to the opinions of several leading exhibitors. The theatre, owned by the Ralph Amusement Company, played to a large attendance for a week with a first run and this was instrumental in leading the management to become convinced a first run policy would be successful.

C. F. Sennig, former Educational branch manager in Omaha who succeeded Samuel Miller in Kansas City, arrived in Kansas City last week to assume charge of his new office. Mr. Miller will enter business with his father in Milwaukee. Mr. Sennig has been in the film business for more than fifteen years, having been at Omaha about one and one-half years. He formerly represented First National in London, Eng.

J. D. Williams of Ritz-Carlton Pictures Corp., and founder of First National, was in Kansas City last week.

An 800-seat suburban motion picture theatre is being constructed at Fifty-ninth street and Prospect avenue, Kansas City, by L. J. Ledoux and A. Jensen. The building will cost about $30,000. Equipment will be furnished by the Cole Theatre Supply Company of Kansas City.

The building and site upon which the Oak Street theatre, Topeka, Kas. stands has been purchased by H. Johnson, who will operate the house in the future.

Following George Ware's resignation as branch manager of the Kansas City Vitagraph office, it was announced last week that he will be succeeded by C. A. Schultz, former Vitagraph manager at Omaha. Mr. Schultz, who has been in the film industry about five years, also was with Pathe in Des Moines, Ia. Mr. Ware's plans in the future have not been determined.

A variation in "comedy" befell Frank Cassill, 2-reel comedy salesman for the Kansas City Pathe office last week. The ol' "hoopie" became stuck in the mud and before it had left its "stand" both rear axles were broken, causing a delay in business, as well as a week's salary, for Frank.

What occurred is not known, but C. E. Harrington of the Mulrane theatre at Mayetta, Mo., came to Kansas City last week, joined the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri, went to the office of the Film Board of Trade and came out smiling. Apparently the move was a good one.

An agreement has been reached by Ed. Dubinsky of the Regent theatre, Kansas City, and Jack Langan of the Standard Film Company, Kansas City, whereby the Regent will play a first run Standard production each week for fifty-two weeks.

M. W. Mills, Auditorium, Smithville, Mo.; Glenn Dickinson, Manhattan, Kas., and W. P. Cuff, Strand theatre, Chillicothe, Mo., the "busy trio," were in Kansas City last week booking features for the spring rush.

J. K. Vetter, former Metro representative out of the Kansas City office, who was known as one of "The Four Horsemen," again is back on the same old job, only this time it is with "Scaramouche." Max J. Meyer, a former Film Booking Office salesman at the Kansas City office, also is an addition to the Metro sales force. He is covering Southern Missouri and Southern Kansas.

E. T. Gomersall, personal representative for the Fox home office, was in Kansas City last week checking up on business in general and voicing optimism as to the outlook for summer business in Kansas City.

The Mainstreet theatre, a combination vaudeville and motion picture house of Kansas City, which, in the past, has not been playing the bigger productions, has changed its policy. The First National franchise, formerly held by Frank Newman of the Newman theatres, has been acquired by the Mainstreet and only the larger first run productions will be shown in the future.

Albany

Lightning again struck Film Row the past week, when Harry Seed, who has been manager of the F. B. O. exchange here for the last three months, suddenly resigned, and was succeeded by F. L. Davie, of Philadelphia. Mr. Seed returned immediately to New York city. There was also a rumor to the effect that Frank S. Hopkins, former manager of the local Universal exchange, now employed as a salesman out of here for Vitagraph, may shortly receive the management of the Vitagraph branch in Canada.

Exhibitors comparing receipts of Ash Wednesday this year with the same day a year ago, became optimistic over the future, the receipts in nearly every instance in Albany running far ahead of a year ago.

Exchange rates are charged on foreign money tendered for tickets at the Leland, in Albany, provided it is over one dollar, no exchange being charged on silver.

William Shirley, manager of the State and Strand theatres in Schenectady, announced the past week an increased admission at both houses. Prices at the Strand have been raised from 35 to 40 cents, and at the State, from 40 to 50 cents, afternoon prices at both houses remaining at 15 and 25 cents. The State theatre now charges the same admission as the Mark Strand, in Albany, but does not support as large an orchestra.

The Leland theatre, in Albany, was first opened on May 13, 1825, and Oscar Perrin, the present manager is planning for a whoppin' big 100th anniversary a year hence. The house became a motion picture theatre several years ago, when it was owned by the Proctor interests. It is now owned by Tarsches and Buckley, of Albany, and ranks as one of the leading theatres in the Capital City. The same front walls, as were erected a hundred years ago, still stand, but the interior has naturally been changed during the passing of a century. When the house was first opened, the gallery cost 25 cents, the pit 50, while boxes sold for a dollar.

Bill Shirley, of the State theatre, has the best private office of any exhibitor in this part of the state. The office was fixed up only a week or so ago, and is in the rear of the theatre. Among other things, it contains a piano, for be it known that Mr. Shirley, is some player.

Victor Schortzinger Who Will Direct "Bread" for Metro.

Atop the piano, there is a loving cup which was presented Mr. Shirley by his employees, while photographs of Mrs. Shirley and the children occupy conspicuous places on Mr. Shirley's desk. The other private office in the front of the house will still be used by Mr. Shirley, particularly, in meeting the film salesmen.

Flash punch cards announcing coming attractions, were installed last week at the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, and attracted plenty of attention. Large framed pictures of stars have also just been placed in the Leland lobby, making it even more attractive than before.

C. C. Charles, former manager of the Bond office here, and more lately of Buffalo, has just been added to the sales force of the Selznick office in Albany. Miss Carolyn Goodman, of the same office, has been promoted to the position of cashier.

Salt Lake City

E. C. MIX, manager of the local Select Pictures exchange, is busily engaged these days. With the addition of Dave Farquar to the selling staff, Mix has a capable corps in the field. Farquar was formerly manager for Select in this city, before going to London, England, where he was associated with First National.

The genial, smiling face of H. E. Skinner, exhibitor of Ogden, Utah, was seen among the exchanges here this week, where "Ed" was signing up some of the new feature releases for showing in his theater, the Colonial, in the northern city. Skinner says that following the slow period experienced during February that business is picking right up again, and he anticipates a good year.

The local exchange managers are being badly bitten by the auto bug, the usual accessory of pre-spring weather, of which Salt Lake City has been having nothing else but, the last month. Now comes one H. W. Braly, manager for Famous Players-Lasky, with the announcement that he has added onto his assets one brand new Oldsmobile coupe, with which he expects to show up all other managers on the road. His claim is being loudly disputed by George L. Cloward, who presides over the destinies of the local Metro exchange, who recently purchased a luxurious new Rickenbacker. Challenges are hurtling back and forth between the two offices and all film folk in local centers are awaiting breathlessly the outcome of this conflict. All of which makes the poor correspondent wish he were a film manager.

Another shining luminary loomed on the local horizon this week in the person of Joe Madsen, exhibitor of Idaho Falls, Idaho, where he operates the Idaho theater. Joe returned with a nice bundle of contracts tucked away.

F. S. Culbransen, who covers the Idaho territory for Famous Players-Lasky, and C. G. Epperson, working Utah for the same company, are stirring up a great deal of splendid business this month, according to Manager Braly.

Victor Foote, exhibitor of Nephi, Utah, where he operates the Venice theater, came to Salt Lake City this week, bringing his wife to a local hospital.

W. S. Wessling, western division manager for Pathe, was in our midst for two days last week, on his way back to New York city, returning from the coast. He conferred with Manager Seib on the policies governing the releases on the spring program. He will visit the Denver exchange en route to New York city, where he will attend a conference of division managers of Pathe.

George Mayne, manager of the local Preferred Pictures exchange, has packed his grip and hied him away into the Idaho territory, where he will devote the next thirty days covering the entire State on the latest releases on the Preferred calendar.

It is announced that the Kinema theater, the Universal house, will become a second run house beginning March 15.

A. Davis, the new manager in this city for the Film Booking Offices, assumed charge of affairs at the office the first of the month, coming here from Denver, where he was associated with the F. B. O. office. He is rapidly making friends and getting in touch with exhibitors of this territory. Davis succeeds W. B. Corby, who became manager of the W. W. Hodkinson exchange in this city.

A. A. Schmidt, western division manager for F. B. O., was in town arranging business with Manager Davis.

Charles Knickerbocker left for Kansas City the first of the month, where he will make his first official visit as home office representative for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He was until then manager of the local Hodkinson exchange.

W. C. Gehring, resident manager for Fox Films, spent a few days in northern Utah and southern Idaho this week, stirring things up and signing new contracts for the latest Fox releases. He is expected back within a few days.

Fred Gage, division manager for Universal, left for Denver, after visiting the local manager, Milton Cohn, for several days. Gage was recently promoted to his present duties when the western territory was broken up into zones. His territory now consists of Spokane, Washington; Butte, Montana; Salt Lake City and Denver.

Norman Perry, prominent exhibitor of Ogden, Utah, dropped in at the local exchanges Tuesday, and contracted for his usual list of top-notchers. He said that his new Egyptian theater, now under course of construction, will be ready for opening within the next two months. Decorators are busy now, creating beautiful color schemes and Oriental designs. When completed the Egyptian will rival the finest houses in the western country. Perry is also owner of the Ogden and Utah theaters at Ogden. He recently returned from Los Angeles, where he went to obtain ideas to incorporate in the Egyptian building.

C. A. Dillard, with the local Metro office, returned last week from conducting a run of "Scaramouche," one of Metro's features, at the Colonial theater at Idaho Falls, Idaho, with Otto Schmidt, owner of the theater. He will go to Logan the latter part of this week to supervise a like showing at the Capitol theater.

George L. Cloward, manager of the local Metro exchange, went to Provo, Utah, this week on business.

Des Moine

WILLIAM FERGUSON, better known as "Bill", will open up a new theatre, the Temple Theatre, one of the prettiest little houses in Iowa, at Mt. Pleasant sometime between the first and the fifteenth of May. The theatre is done in white and gold, inside and out, and is, while a small theatre, as elaborate as any of the larger theatres. The Temple Theatre, which is in the new Masonic Temple building, has a seating capacity of 550. It will be completed at a cost of $15,000. This is the second theatre in Mt. Pleasant, which has a population of 4,000. Jack Hawley of the Universal sales staff, and Clyde Pratt, salesman for First National, have been competing to see who would sell the contract for the first picture at the Temple Theatre. Hawley was the winner and the beautiful new theatre will open with the showing of "The Acquittal."

J. K. McDonald, producer of "Penrod and Sam" and "Boy of Mine" for First National. He will make two more pictures for the same Organization.

District Manager Nichols and Branch Manager Crawford of Famous Players, were at Davenport, Moline and Rock Island last week. Moline and Rock Island have been added within the last two weeks to the territory of the Des Moines office. In the eastern part of Iowa the towns of Keokuk and Fort Madison are suppled from the branch at Peoria, Ill.

Greenhalgh and Burdock have sold the Orpheum Theatre at Centerville to F. A. Fogarty. Fogarty formerly a dentist in Omaha.

E. T. Dunlap of Haywarden will open a new theatre there in May. He was manager of the picture house in the Auditorium at Haywarden. The Auditorium belonged to the city and Dunlap leased the theatre from the city.

Brooks Tilsworth is now acting in the capacity of salesman for the Des Moines F. B. O. branch. He was transferred from the Sioux Falls F. B. O. office.

The auditors for Goldwyn from New York, were here and are gone again. They are F. J. Barry and J. S. Wolf. They were next to visit Denver.

Mrs. C. L. Brown is acting as inspector of film at the F. B. O. offices during the temporary absence of Mrs. Ida Upchurch. Mrs. Upchurch is enjoying a vacation of indefinite duration.

Mrs. Harry Lewis was added to the F. B. O. staff of film inspectors in January. She is a recruit to the film trade and hails from Milwaukee.

R. S. Ballentyne, manager for Pathe, made a flying trip to Davenport, Muscatine and Ottumwa.

The Des Moines Educational exchange is one of the best equipped in the country. Harry Ginsberg, director of sales from New York for Preferred Pictures, was in Des Moines to give the exchange the once over. Paul Grove was recently added to the staff of the Educational branch. He is one of the veterans of the film game and one of the oldest shippers in Iowa. The Des Moines branch now has the largest payroll that it has ever had.

Mr. Kennebeck who left the place as exploitation man for Famous Players in Des Moines to take charge of all the publicity for the exchange in Australia, writes that its a great country there.

H. C. Patterson of the Palace Theatre at Carlyle and C. Hales of the Lyric at Madrid were in Des Moines last week. Buffalo

THE PREMIER, Buffalo's pioneer community picture house, has gone to "the happy hunting grounds." Workmen are now finishing the process of razing and soon the scene of the exploits of Claude Weill, J. Emerson Dickmon, Eimer C. Winegar, Harry Green and others will be but a memory. The house was built over a decade ago and for many years enjoyed excellent patronage, but with the coming of competing theaters the box office receipts were cut into and business was nothing to brag about for quite some time before the disastrous fire visited the house last fall. A business block with stores will replace the Premier.

In celebration of the success of the Mile and a Half sales contest, Manager Gerald K. Rudulph of the Fox exchange had the salesmen out to his home last Saturday night. Bill Mahoney, the Beau Brummel of Film Row, drew down the prize. J. Emerson Dickmon, tenor soloist, sang several selections in sad style. Mr. Rudulph was voted a prince of good fellows and all decided that such a party should be held weekly.

The long promised purchase of the Niagara garage property at Walnut and Pine streets, Lockport, N. Y., as a site for a modern picture theatre, has at last been consummated, the deed having been filed in the Niagara county clerk's office. Henry F. Thurston of Lockport conveys the property to the local Warner Brothers exchange. Schine Theatrical Company of Gloversville, N. Y., of which J. Meyer Schine is the president. The consideration involved is understood to have been approximately $30,000. Together with the deed the Schine interests have filed a $25,000 mortgage payable to Mr. Thurston. The company plans to erect a 1,400-seat house on the site and work is expected to begin by April 1.

The property at Main and West Center streets, Medina, N. Y., known as the Bent's Block Opera House, has been sold by Albert L. Swett to Colonel and Mrs. Sanderson A. Ross.

O. R. Rieffel, formerly assistant manager at the Fox exchange, is now on the sales staff and has been assigned to the Southern Tier, in which territory he succeeds William McSweeney, who has been called to his old home in Springfield.

Eddie Bonns of Goldwyn has been visiting exhibitors in western New York, seeking to learn just what the small town theaters want in the way of service aids and other helps to put their attractions over. Mr. Bonns is making a tour of the entire State.

Mickey Rose, formerly with Universal and Renown, is back with his first love, Paramount. Robert T. Murphy, one of the best known knights of the leaping tintypes, has resigned from the sales staff of the Charlie Goodwin, who last week left F. B. O., is now a member of the Pathe sales forces, succeeding Ben Wittneben. Mr. Goodwin has been assigned to the Rochester territory. Word has reached Film Row that Harry Thompson, formely in charge of the local Associated Exhibitors office, is now with Universal in Albany.

"Hub" Taylor, the Pathe explorer, has been heard from. With the aid of his trusty shovel and hipboots, he has been able to dig himself out of the snowbound districts of the Southern Tier and has reported to Manager Basil Brady that he is alive and healthy and that his Chevrolet is still on four legs. Hub says the Hudson Bay country has nothing on territory over which he mushes.

Phil Gentille, formerly sales representative at the First Graphic office, is now managing the Rialto theater in Rochester, the policy of which has been changed to three shows a week and the prices of admission lowered. Phil has also been with Selznick and Advance Pictures, the Syracuse organization. He should put the Rialto over with a bang, as Phil is one live wire.

As a special attraction for his patrons, Manager Jim Cardina of the Varsity theater last week-end offered the Pender company of Wonder Workers. The act delighted the kids especially at the Saturday matinee. Jim soon will begin work on remodeling the Kensington theatre in which he will also install a new organ.

Full page publicity was given the attraction of Hans Hanke and the Du-Art piano number at Shea's Hippodrome last week and last Sunday there appear another full page display telling how the folks liked the act. All praise to Manager Vincent R. McFaul for pulling publicity like that.

Joseph A. Schuchert, owner of the Columbia and Colonial, is back from Havana. He got a terrible shock when he arrived home in the midst of the worst storm of the winter. Joe came near running back and taking the return train to Cuba.

A fine of $100 was imposed in city court on Richard Naughton, 1072 Tifft street, for an assault on D. Stuart Parmalee, manager of Capitol theatre, in South Buffalo. The attack on Parmalee resulted from Naughton being ejected from the Capitol after creating a disturbance.

F. Ray Powers is now in charge of the booking department at the First National exchange, being assisted by Bertha Kemp. Manager Raymond McCarthy was called to Boston last week end on account of his wife's illness. He stopped off in New York enroute home for a visit with home office officials.

Fred M. Shafer, manager of the Lafayette Square, made a flying trip to New York last week and lined up some strong attractions for the big Buffalo house for this spring.

A theatre costing $2,000,000 and seating approximately 3,500 will be erected in Worcester, Mass., by S. Z. Poli. The tract of land on which the theatre will be built is considered worth $250,000 and adjoins the Grand Theatre, another Poli house.

Elias M. Loew is in control of the Strand Theatre in New Bedford, Mass. Max Finn is the resident manager. A picture policy prevails.

John E. Panora is to build a picture theatre in Winsted, Conn., which will cost approximately $125,000. Mr. Panora plans to begin excavation work early in the spring so that the theatre can be opened with the start of the fall season. The old opera house where pictures are being shown now will be used exclusively for home talent shows and vaudeville.

Information Needed in Theatre Construction

Financing, Selection of Site, Balance Between Expenditure and Income, and Other Important Phases

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Consulting Engineer

THE owner who contemplates building a theatre is confronted with a number of problems, all of which should be successfully solved before the proposition may be considered attractive and satisfactory from an investment point of view. Frequently insufficient consideration is given to the proper location of a site. Many elements enter into this problem, and they should be carefully considered. One of the principal factors is the prominence of the location, and its intimate relation to traffic. In other words, whether or not it is on the main street contiguous to street car lines which carry the main traffic, or main thorofares conducting through lanes of automobiles. All of these items should be carefully considered. In addition, the population of the immediate community, or the community from which it may draw by traffic. The number, if any, of other theatres in that community, if it is a community proposition. If it is a transient location such as may be found on main streets, then the population as a whole, and the amount of congestion at this point, should be taken into consideration. Many good theatres have been built in wrong locations due to the lack of proper analysis on the part of the owner, of the selection of the site.

Solving the Problem of Getting a Proper Site

In the selection of a site you may encounter the fact that an ideal location may not be available, or if it is available, the price may be beyond that which the traffic will bear, or that which you could afford to pay for theatre purposes. In general it is desirable to secure property with a small outlet on the main street having just sufficient width for a lobby, and the main portion of the theatre being located in the rear of the property fronting on the main street, or if the entire plot is available on the main street, then it becomes advisable to construct stores and offices, or apartments over the front part of the property and the main portion of the theatre in the rear. It will be found that the combination of apartments, stores, and theatre will work out very satisfactory from a financial point of view. If sufficient income can be derived from the stores and apartments to carry the theatre under adverse conditions it is always advisable to have such an arrangement. In the event that a one hundred percent site is not available on the main street or in the centre of a community it frequently happens that a ninety per cent location, or even a less per cent may show upon analysis to give satisfactory results. That is to say, show sufficient net income to justify the investment, for as a matter of fact it is extremely difficult to find at the present time, a so-called one-hundred percent location. Most of the sites have been exploited from the operator's point of view, almost to the extent where the point of saturation has been reached, and consequently it is only due to new developments in certain sections, or in growth of smaller towns, that fertile fields are found for production of motion pictures.

Difficult to Determine Correct Capacity of House

It is always difficult to determine the proper size or capacity that should be built in any given community. There are many points for consideration such as the size and shape of the available plot, and whether or not the shape of the plot will lend itself favorably to good sight lines, stage equipment, if any, and economy of construction. The amount of the seating capacity also depends, to a considerable extent, upon the average daily attendance, and if the plot is not large enough to accommodate potential attendance it then becomes necessary to have recourse to balcony construction in order to get the desired capacity. This, of course, adds considerably to the cost of the operation. Only in comparatively large capacities it it advisable to have balcony construction, for the reason that, from a financial point of view, it is always desirable to keep the cost of production as low as possible, and where the desired capacity is less than 2,000 seats it is preferable to construct a one floor house if the necessary property can be obtained, except in cases where it is desirable to have a smoking balcony, or in the southern states, where the colored element is taken into consideration. Another factor in determining the seating capacity of a theatre is the special attendance on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays. A condition sometimes exists where the principal business is done on these days, and consequently the capacity is planned with a view to accommodating the demand thus occasioned. The theatre owner dislikes to be obliged to turn patrons away, even occasionally, and a careful analysis will sometimes show that a little larger seating capacity than would be required by an average condition will more than pay for itself on these special days, and at the same time provide a surplus for the average condition.

Question of Prices of Admission

Closely related to seating capacity is the question of prices of admission. Each community has its standard, and there appears to be no general law that can be laid down as a fixed quantity in the determining of admission prices. In general, however, the prices of admission should depend upon the character and quality of the show. If it is the policy of a theatre to give straight pictures only, and the standard of the pictures given is fairly well established, or if the policy is a combination of pictures and vaudeville, and the character of the combination of the two is stabilized in general, then the uniform price of admission can be properly determined from the expenditures and costs involved. If, on the other hand, it is a specialty house where the costs of production fluctuate and special shows are given, in this case the prices of admission should be established in accordance with the quality of the exhibition. Frequently the cause of failure in a theatre is due to the existing of an improper relation between the cost of production and the price of admission. If the show is expensive and is offered to the patrons at a too low price the inevitable result will be that the box office returns will not show up properly. On the other hand, if the charge of admittance is comparatively high and the character of the exhibition comparatively low the opposite effect will be obtained, providing the attendance is to be secured, and if it is temporarily secured by any means it will not be sustained for any length of time and the ultimate outcome will be that a poor show will reflect in a poor attendance, and consequently failure and distaster on the part of the theatre management and the enterprise as a whole.

Manager Cannot Pay Out More Than Comes In

One of the most vital factors with which the successful manager has to do is the question of operating expenses. There is only a certain amount of returns that may be obtained from any theatre, with a few exceptions, and this subject must be analyzed from the existing conditions. In other words, the manager should not pay out more than he takes in. It therefore becomes a relation between the income and the expenditures. The amount of the expenditures being determined, it then becomes the question of a proper income to cover the outlay with a surplus sufficient to justify the existence of the theatre. If the scale of admission prices is determined, then the expenditures must be adopted to meet the amount which is afforded by the income for that purpose. This is not so simple as it may appear on the surface. It is only by careful study of all the elements affecting the income and also those affecting the outlay that a successful balance may be found between the two. It will usually require a considerable amount of adjusting on both sides before a uniformly successful operation is established.

Having selected a favorable site the prospective builder shall next decide on his methods of finance. Frequently it will be found that the owner has a few thousand dollars, or, possibly, owns the property suitable for a theatre. The big problem then is, how to secure the necessary funds to build a theatre. A statement of investment, as per typical illustration herewith, which will contain the proposed seating capacity, prices of admission, the probable daily attendance, and the estimated operating expenses, is the first thing essential. From this an estimated amount of the net returns per year may be computed. It is then necessary to have sketches prepared of the proposed building and the approximate cost thereof obtained. The value of the property being already known, an idea may be had of the amount of the expenditures involved in the operation. Generally the owner who desires to build a theatre is not prepared to invest a large amount, and as a rule his proposed equity is less than 25 per cent of the cost of the entire operation. One of the most serious mistakes an owner can make is to undertake to build a theatre with too little amount of cash. It frequently happens that the entire cost of the operation is underestimated and the owner being inexperienced in finances of this character, begins operations with an insufficient amount of ready money, and also probably has not made the necessary arrangements in advance for the procuring of the necessary funds as the work progresses. The man who has less than 25 per cent cash available finds himself face to face with a difficult problem, so far as the complete financing of his operation is concerned, especially if he wishes to control the situation himself. In these cases there are two possible solutions, one of which is, he may borrow the entire amount necessary beyond his contribution, either in the shape of two or three mortgages, the second and possibly the third to be heavily amortized and paid off in a comparatively short space of time. The first mortgage may take the form of a permanent detail and may remain with a small amount of amortization, say, 3 per cent, for a considerable length of time. To finance a proposition on this basis, however, there will be involved large bonuses on both the second and third mortgages. In some cases it may be possible to get a large enough second mortgage so as to eliminate the necessity of the third, in which case it is always preferable to do so, and in any case it is always desirable to secure the necessary funds in as few mortgages as possible. Another difficulty about financing on the mortgage basis is that lending institutions do not look upon theatre projects with favor, and are disinclined to loan, if at all, to any appreciable extent. However, it has been done, and under certain conditions it can be done, depending entirely upon the location and the operating personnel, especially in the case of a community proposition where a theatre is needed for the benefit of the community as a whole, in which case the local Banks and the Chamber of Commerce will lend their support, both morally and financially, to an undertaking of this kind. The other method of finance for a man with little means, and where he is not able to secure a second mortgage or perhaps the cost of securing the second mortgage is prohibitive, is to substitute for the second mortgage an issue of preferred stock to be sold to the community in small units, but in order to do this it will be necessary for the owner to agree to give to the purchasing community a certain amount of common stock as a bonus along with the preferred, and to amortize the preferred stock and pay it off with interest within, say, ten years time. By doing this the entire amount borrowed from the community on the preferred stock basis is returned with interest and for the accommodation, the purchaser retains his common stock which then becomes of a participation value, and hence the owner has for his partners these common stock holders. If there has been issued two shares of common with each share of preferred, the owner and the stock holders will be on a 50-50 basis of ownership and the income from the operation will be divided on that basis. This is a comparatively new method of finance, and is generally found to be the most attractive when the preferred stock issue is involved, due to the fact that the owner is willing to divide 50-50 with those who helped him put the proposition over. It also sometimes happens that the first mortgage money is secured by means of a preferred bond issue, especially on larger operations. However, this is not connected with the preferred stock issue and does not in any way conflict with it.

It may even be possible to secure the entire amount of funds necessary to construct

Reduction in Cost of Projection

YOUR projection costs can be greatly reduced. The power bill which you receive each month will be from twenty-five to fifty per cent less.

Install Incandescent Lamp Projection in your theatre and this saving will start immediately.

But your gain doesn't end there. Incandescent Lamp Projection will improve your picture presentation. This because of the soft, pleasing, absolutely steady and flickerless light.

Convince yourself that all this is true. Visit some theatre near you using Incandescent Lamp Projection. Better still, let your supply dealer give a demontration in your theatre of General Electric Apparatus and Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps.

You have only to see to believe.

But don't let this splendid opportunity of cutting operating expenses and improving your projection slip by another day.

Specify Edison MAZDA Lamps and G. E. apparatus and insure absolute satisfaction.

the operation by means of this preferred stock issue, but it is never advisable to do this if the first mortgage loan is available, the preference being to secure as large a first mortgage as possible and then to make up the difference by means of a preferred stock issue, less the amount of equity that the owner may have available for the purpose. Of course, the larger the first mortgage and the more equity available, the less the amount that will be necessary to be raised by the sale of the stock or by a second mortgage. If the intervening amount between the equity and the first mortgage is less than 25 per cent of the entire operation it is advisable to attempt to secure this amount through channels of a second mortgage, even though a substantial bonus is required to obtain it. The reason for this is that if the proposition shows proper returns the owner will be able to amortize the second mortgage within at least five years time and pay it off, leaving him clear the entire operation, with the exception of the first mortgage. It is, however, always advisable for the owner to raise, if possible, the necessary equity so as to eliminate the necessity of a preferred stock issue, and thereby maintain control and ownership of the entire operation.

In conclusion, it is strongly recommended that those contemplating building analyze carefully the various methods of finance from every angle and adopt the one which will, under the circumstances, ultimately retain for him the greatest amount of equity. Under no circumstances should an operation be started until the finances are entirely completed and sufficient funds assured for the completion of the work. Too frequently the construction of a theatre has been undertaken with insufficient available funds, and the results are always those of failure and disaster, and eventual loss of all the equity that has been assigned to it.

Walnut Park, Portland, Ore. Installs Marr & Colton

I. Gellers, the well-known exhibitor, recently gave an organ recital for leading organists and musical critics of the Northwest. The recital marked the opening of the New Walnut Park Theatre and the premier for the Marr and Colton Organ in this house.

A great number of prominent exhibitors of the Northwest are installing Marr and Colton Organs in their theatres.

New Bills In New York Legislature Affect Films

ALBANY, Feb. 25.— Two bills of interest to the manufacturers of film, booths and projection machines, were introduced in the New York state Assembly during the past week. Assemblyman Vincent Murphy of Rochester fathered both bills. The first of these would make it unlawful to use motion picture film of nitro cellulose or other similarly hazardous base in operating motion picture apparatus in any city, without a license. The second bill seeks to add a new section to the general business law, providing for the regulation of booths and projection machines for hazardous film, and for licenses for manufacturing and using such film. The bills are identical with the two that were introduced last year by Assemblyman Steingut, but which were not signed by the Governor.

Lee Ochs, the pre-eminent exhibitor of the Motion Picture Industry, selects the Marr & Colton, "America's Finest Organ," for his new Piccadilly Theatre, Broadway, New York City.

IT is the glorious richness of tone qualities that has made America's Finest Organ a feature attraction in many Motion Picture Theatres. Exhibitors appreciate that organ solos in connection with pictures are a magnet that attract crowds.

Our beautiful Organ Catalog shows many prominent installations. A copy is yours for the asking.

Convex Mirror, Its Properties and How It Reflects Light

Lesson 11 — Part III

The Convex Mirror

ONE of the most interesting phases of the control of light is its reflection from the surface specially shaped mirrors. While the same Law of Regular Reflection holds true for the individual light rays in the case of both curved and plane mirrors the images formed by the plane mirrors are undistorted as to shape and unchanged as to size of object whereas the curved mirrors usually give images of objects somewhat disdorted in shape and materially differing in size depending mostly upon the position of the object with reference to the mirror. The only manner in which the image formed by a plane mirror differs from the object is in the "reversal" discussed in last week's article.

It is possible, however, by changing the shape of a mirror to send the light rays to almost any desired direction and, furthermore, the size of the image can also be controlled either making it smaller or larger than the object, as may be desired.

Curved mirrors are commonly divided into two groups; those formed by a simple mathematical curve such as a sphere and those formed by a special mathematical curve as illustrated by the parabola, ellipse, and hyperbola. The last named is very infrequently met with.

Of the regularly (sperical) curved mirrors there are two types, convex and concave. Both represent sections of a sphere and the only distinction lies in the fact that the convex type is part of a sphere with its outer surface polished and the concave type is also a spherical section with the inner surface polished.

Since both types are generated by turning a circle about one of its diameters as an axis, the radius, with which the circle is described forms a constant for any particular mirror. It will be shown later that, knowing the radius of curvature of the mirror and its distance from the object, the position and size of the image can easily be determined.

When speaking of the radius of the mirror, the symbol O. R. C. is often used. This means Outside Radius of Curvature, and ordinarily indicates the use of a glass mirror, that is, one consisting of a spherical glass form with a mirror backing. The term radius, it should be remembered, always refers to the distance from polished surface to the center from which the curve is struck.

Reflection from Convex Mirror

While all rays of light coming from an object and striking a mirror are useful in forming an image of the object, there are two principal rays (as far as spherical mirrors are concerned) which play an important part in locating the image and otherwise determining the characteristics of the particular mirror.

In Fig. 13, LM represents a convex mirror having its center at C and the distance BC for its radius of curvature. Now any ray of light, such as NO striking the mirror and coming from such a direction as to pass through the center of curvature, C, will be reflected back on its path in the direction from whence it came. In other words, all rays of light which, when prolonged, pass through the center of curvature, strike the mirror at right angles and are naturally reflected back on their own path.

Any ray of light such as ST, striking the mirror and being parallel with the axis PBC, will be reflected in such a manner as if to make it appear that it came originally from point F within the mirror. This point F, by the way, is midway between points B and C and therefore BF — FC = one-half the radius of the sphere.

In this respect mirror LM is similar to a lens since it brings all the rays, parallel to the principal axis, PBC, to a point F, which is called the focus of the mirror.

From the foregoing it can be seen that the smaller the radius of curvature of a mirror, the shorter will be its focus and hence the greater will be its apparent bending power.

Reflection of Light Rays

While tracing the paths of reflected rays of light is useful in a number of ways and forms, the basis of anaylzing the action of mirrors still the thing that most concerns us is the effect of the mirror on wave trains of light.

Light rays are hypothetical lines if light which really do not exist as such but are merely assumed to exist in order to facilitate an understanding of the behavior of various optical devices.

Wave trains can be thought of as consisting of three principal types; those made up of parallel rays of light; those consisting of liverging rays of light, that is, rays which come from a point and keep spreading farther and farther apart; and those which consist of converging rays of light, or rays which come closer and closer together and finally meet at a point.

Figure 14 shows what happens when a wave train of parallel rays strikes a convex mirror. The wave front AB is shown steadily advancing toward the mirror LM occupying successively the positions OD, EH and GI. When the wave front reaches the latter position (GI), point J, the centerpoint of the wave on the axis PC is just striking the mirror and is about to be reflected back on its path since it strikes the mirror at right angles.

By the time the top and bottom parts of the wave, points G and I, have reached the mirror at K and N, respectively, joint J has been reflected and has traveled to point Z on its way back.

As the wave continues to advance the entire front of the wave is reflected and assumes the position RS, then TW, etc. The individual rays making up the wave train will all be reflected in such a direction as to make them appear to originate from point F, the focus. Since, as just explained, rays of light coming from a point are divering and circular in form it can be seen that the waves reflected from the surface of mirror LM will also be circular and diverging.

Trouble with Intermittent

The following came from T. E. Anderson, projectionist, Community theatre, Russellville, Ark.:

"I just wanted to drop you a line or two to let you know I am still alive. I have been reading the News every week and am getting some valuable information from it.

"Although I am what some people call a kid, I am now Chief Projectionist of this theatre. Brother, I have been here for five years and it seems as though was married to this place.

"Here is something that has me stuck. I have two Powers 6B type projectors and I am having a little trouble with the intermittent of one. The picture was not steady and I put in a new cam and spindle and pin-cross for the intermittent. Also a new sprocket. I adjusted these parts as they should be. I have done this many times before and have never had this trouble until now.

"Here is what I think is the trouble. I believe the pin-cross spindle is sprung. I have sprung the spindle for I have special and find that this is where the trouble lies. The pin-cross and spindle were new.

"My picture jumps up slightly on every fourth turn of the flywheel so I have laid the blame on the manufacturers. I couldn't have sprung thes pindle for I have special tools for this operation.

"In addition to being chief projectionist of this theatre, I am mechanic for the Butler

One of the ten paintings in oil, sixteen feet by twenty-one feet, which hang in the auditorium of the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal. This painting has created considerable comment and greatly adds to the atmosphere of the theatre. The Forum is scheduled to open April 15th.

Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, Scheduled To Open Middle of April

THE Forum Theatre, Los Angeles, which has been under construction during the past eight months, is scheduled for opening April fifteenth.

The theatre is of Roman architecture, modelled after the Pantheon, the most famous of Roman buildings. It is said to be one of the finest buildings on the Pacific Coast.

The new theatre offers something unique for its motorist patrons, maintaining a private parking ground to accommodate 500 cars. The Forum will be fitted throughout with the best equipment obtainable and will have a roof garden cafe of Roman design, and a clubroom in the basement with soda fountain, billiard tables, etc. for the convenience of the patrons. A ten passenger elevator connects the roof garden with the club rooms.

The Forum organ was built by the W. W. Kimball Company of Chicago. The theatre will also maintain an orchestra.

The policy of the new house will be two performances daily, 2:15 and 8:15 playing high class productions at $1.50 top.

The Forum, with its seating capacity of 1807 all on one floor, was built by the B. and H. Circuit Inc. of Los Angeles at a cost of $950,000.

William A. Hussey, prominent Pacific Coast exhibitor is President and General Manager while Julius K. Johnson who was formerly associated with Finkelstein and Rubin, Minneapolis and A. H. Blank Enterprises at Omaha, is the managing director. Mr. Johnson has been spending the past week in New York arranging for for his opening picture and special curtains and scenic effects for his stage.

Balaban & Katz Provide Surprise For Fans

It is reported that Balaban & Katz will give Chicago music lovers and film fans, a sensation when the newest thing in organs is heard for the first time during the regular bi-weekly Sunday recital on March 2, at the Chicago theatre.

The Chicago theatre grand organ has been known as one of the finest instruments in the country, and with its single console presided over by Jesse Crawford, has displayed splendid musical resources. Balaban & Katz, however, for over a year, have been doubling the resources of the instrument by the addition of a second console.

Mr. Crawford will play the first console, and the second one, which will provide the coloring and accompaniment for his solo and concert work, will be played by his recent bride, Helen Crawford.

The entire organ equipment was built by Wurlitzer.

With both consoles in operation it will be possible to produce every tone, melody and effect, it is declared.

The idea is said to have originated within the Balaban & Katz organization and was quietly worked out by them.

Two New Theatres Planned For St. Petersburg, Fla.

Announcement was made this week that two new theatres would be built in St. Petersburg, Fla. Representatives of the Famous-Players Lasky Corporation have completed arrangements with Harvey S. Chase, of St. Petersburg, it is stated, for the erection of a theatre and office building on First Avenue north to cost $5000,000.

According to the plans the new theatre will be on a lot 100 by 120 feet in size. The theatre is to have a main floor and balcony with a seating capacity of around 2,000. Above the theatre will be four floors devoted to offices and a roof garden upon the top. The building will be of Spanish Renaissance type and will be finished in polychrome terra cotta. According to the report, the house will be ready for operation by January 1, 1925, and will be under the management of the Southern Enterprises, who now operate all of the white theatres of that city.

The other was announced as The Park and was to be built upon the old Randolph property, the theatre occupying the ground floor, a dance hall on the second floor and lodge rooms upon the third. C. D. Buss, representing the theatre company, has established headquarters with the Dietz Realty Company, who handled the transaction. H. E. Wendell, architect, has been engaged to arrange the plans for the building, it was stated.

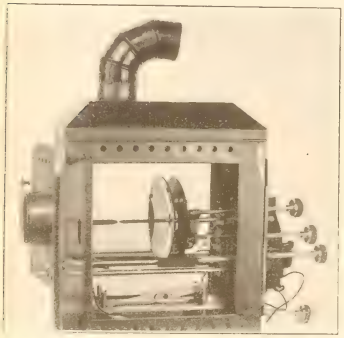
Description of Helios Intensifying Reflector Arc Lamp

There has been described in previous issues, types of reflector arc projection lamps. Another such apparatus is now in use in theatres, the "Helios Intensifying Reflector Lamp" distributed by the Warren Products Co.

This lamp operates on the principle of reflected light, gathered from the arc by a concave mirror and reflected in a beam to the aperture. Condensers are not used.



Details of the mechanism and housing of this lamp are shown in the accompanying reproduction. The special features of this type are lamp are:

Small sized carbons drawing from 15 to 20 amperes of current.

Elimination of condensers.

Special reflecting mirror for gathering the light of the arc and concentrating it on the aperture.

Small amount of heat dissipated in the projection room.

The Helios Intensifying Reflector Arc Lamp manufactured by the Warren Products Co. which uses the principle of small arc reflecting light to a mirror and thence to the aperture. No condensers are used and a very small amperage is required. See description on this page.

The mirror used on the Helios lamp is made of quartz glass and is extra large in size.

The lamp is claimed to give a good picture on large screens and long throws and is fitted with controls for the carbons and mirror to permit even distribution of light on the screen.

Several installations of this lamp are reported in theatres throughout the country.

De Forest Announces Organization Of Company

Dr. Lee DeForest of the DeForest Phonofilms, the talking pictures, of which he is the inventor, and famous as well for his radio and long-distance telephone inventions, announces the formation of DeForest Phonofilms, Inc., of which he is president. Although the organization is not yet complete, Dr. DeForest will have such men associated with him as Edward H. Jewett, of the Jewett-Page Automobile Co., Detroit; Frederick W. Peck, millionaire manufacturer of Providence; Rhinelander Waldo, former police commissioner of New York City and Frank Hitchcock. William E. Waddell, well known in motion picture circles, and former manager of the Thomas A. Edison Kinotophone Studio and general manager of the American Talking Picture Co., has been made general manager of the Phonofilms.

Dr. DeForest also announces that work will be started immediately on a series of most pretentious talking motion pictures.

Theatre To Contain Best In Equipment and Music

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y.—S. Siciliano is building a two story office building of brick, steel and concrete with two stores and theatre on ground floor and twelve offices on second floor at 60 Rebecca Avenue.

The theatre will contain the latest and best equipment as to music, projection, ventilation and seating and will be owned and operated by Phillips & Sussman, Inc., with temporary office at 129 Rebecca Ave. Capacity 425.

Announces Construction of Theatre, Southington, Conn.

A new motion picture house for Southington, Conn., is to be constructed at once according to announcement of Frederick Francis of that town, who announces plans have been consummated and will be rushed to completion.

Theatre Supply Co., who is the local agent for Powers projectors.

"Please find stamps enclosed for reply by mail."

It seems to us that Friend Anderson has diagnosed his own trouble and suggested the obvious remedy — a new spindle.

Picture jumpiness is also caused by gummed teeth on the intermittent sprocket and these should be cleaned regularly at short intervals. However, if as Friend Anderson says a jump occurs regularly at every fourth turn of the flywheel the trouble apparently lies elsewhere.

Be that as it may, the point we wish to bring out is this: No matter how carefully repairs may be made and new parts substituted for old, the likelihood of a slip-up always exists and THEREFORE it would be better to have on hand always a complete new intermittent movement for just such emergencies as this. The small saving effected by substituting parts as they become worn hardly warrants the risk of projecting a poor picture to the screen.

As for placing the blame on the manufacturers, that is something which savors of a difference of opinion and therefore concerns us not in the least. The obvious thing to do is to present a proper claim to the manufacturer and rest assured that you will receive fair treatment. Your connection with the local agent for Powers Projectors will ensure no difficulty on this score.

We compliment Brother Anderson on his ability, despite his admitted youth, to hold down two such important positions as Chief Projectionist and Supply Dealers Mechanic.

More power to him.

The showing of Woodland's Talking and Singing Pictures at the Civic Theatre, 114th Street and Liberty Avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I., proved popular with the audiences which witnessed them, it is reported. Manager Atherly S. Poland was pleased with the pictures.

Woodland, the inventor of the method of synchronization shown in these pictures, in constructing a new machine which will be very simple in construction and which he claims will be far in advance of other systems used to project motion pictures in synchronization with the human voice.

Application of Stained Glass Beautifies Theatre

The following is an item from "The Cinema Supplement":

A great deal has been written in the building trade and other journals of late as to the use of stained glass and leaded work in decorative lighting. But perhaps the most beautiful example of this we have so far seen is a delightfully executed design for a stained glass cinema proscenium. The arched apex was worked out in small leaded squares in smoke-blue, with diamond border and massive ornamental design. The side panels were en suite.

The effect was beautiful with lights full on, but no less so when a dim back light illuminated the work while the picture was being shown.

It needs a decorative artist, of course, to carry out the idea in harmony with the decoration of the proscenium and the auditorium, but the charm of effect and the permanence and cleanliness of the stained glass should go a long way toward compensating for any little extra expense in the first place.

To those exhibitors and architects who are confronted with the necessity of putting some form of proscenium opening against an otherwise bare screen-end wall we commend the idea of a shallow, leaded stained glass design of the kind here outlined.

Builds Up Reputation As Artist In Ten Years

A number of years ago, 10 to be exact, Harry Reichenbach made a find in a humble studio in Greenwich Village. There was Kassel the portrait and miniature painter, who spent many years in art study both here and abroad, and whom Harry coaxed to move to Times Square and open a studio to paint portraits of Film Stars, and through painting such portraits as Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Petrova, Anita Stewart and numerous others, his success was instantaneous. Since then he has made the lobby display paintings of the premier showings of the Fox special features in New York and other cities. Also the Universal Jewel, F.B.O. and other producers displays. The "Hunchback of Notre Dame" displays in the big cities are by Kassel, and the recent special lobby displays in New York on "If Winter Comes," "The Silent Command," "The Temple of Venus."

Many large and small theatres, it is claimed have had their lobbies transformed into, or so to speak a private art gallery, through the artistic and personal efforts of this creative artist.
